Junior joined Alpha Company on 27 December 1966. From the very first he stood out as a fine man, and an exemplary Marine. He was one of the few men in my command who was liked and respected by every person he came in contact with. His performance of duty was more than just dependable; it was a high example to these Marines he led, and a source of great support to his superiors. I hope that you will find some comfort in knowing that your husband will be greatly missed by each and everyone of us.

On the morning of 19 December 1967, at approximately 5:15 a. m., Junior was acting as platoon guide in a Battalion defensive perimeter in Quang Tri Province, South Viet Nam. We had just come under fire from enemy mortars. In the act of suppressing this enemy fire with our own artillery, which was located some distance to the rear, one round from our own barrages fell short, and landed within our Company's position, right next to Junior. He was struck in the back by shrapnel from this short round. A corpsman was by his side within seconds and everything possible was done for him. Junior was immediately evacuated by helicopter to the Third Battal- [illegible] Viet

IN A SNOW BANK

At Droop Mountain Lies a Passenger Train

For Twenty-Four Hours—Forty Passengers Snow Bound and Starvation Threatened

Taken from the February 16, 1905 issue of The Pocahontas Times.

Droop Mountain has ever been an item of strenuousness in lives of Pocahontas people. It was on its sandy plateau that Confederate and Federal forces fought a fiercely contested battle; at its base for miles is a stretch of water whose rocky bed and and precipitous fall was the dread of the raftsman and driver alike, while the mountain itself for thirty years stood as a barrier between a rich country and the depot making life a burden to the unfortunate wagoner whose wheel was not overstrong or loaded too heavily. The clinging mud of winter and the dragging sand of summer impeded the course of the wagon.

Since the building of the railroad, drifts slides, blockades, and washouts have been of more frequent occurrence on this ten miles of tract than any other stretch of four times the distance. Rising to a sheer height of many hundred feet so perpendicular as to give the appearance of overhanging or "Drooping" the sand like sleet of last Wednesday ran from the mountain side in a continuous stream pouring over cliffs in

A more cosmopolitan aggregation could not be well imagined. Nearly a dozen states were represented, including the state matrimony, as one facetiously remarked, and was made to go out and sit upon a snow bank for his smartness. The mascots and prime favorites were Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCoy, of Wanless, a happy couple, who were married the evening before and were on their bridal trip. It is not probable they will soon forget the starting out business of their life nor the serenading given them by the smokers of the car in front, and if well wishes count for anything their way through life will never be blocked by the storms of adversity.

By way of diversion a glee club was organized. Of the number of entertainers R. Y. Johnson, traveling out of Charleston; G. A. Lanier, of Huntington, and E. M. Richardson, of Marlinton, were the bright particular stars. Early in the morning a photograph was taken of the heroes to be used as evidence in an application for a Carnegie medal for each of the passengers.

As an illustration of the weight of the drifts after the snow had been cleared away so as to allow an extra engine to free the passenger engine the double header could not budge the baggage car, which was only moved by the two engines backing off and colliding with it. After the car was loosed it could be moved a few feet at a time.

When the train was finally extricated the track was so heavy that two engines were

Since the building of the railroad, drifts slides, blockades and washouts have been of more frequent occurrence on this ten miles of tract than any other stretch of four times the distance. Rising to a sheer height of many hundred feet so perpendicular as to give the appearance of overhanging or "Drooping" the sand-like sleet of last Wednesday ran from the mountain side in a continuous stream pouring over cliffs in a series of cascades and down to the base of the mountain with a hissing snake like noise that forbode evil to the traveler and railroad man. These streams of sleet were of such volume as to carry along with them leaves and small sticks and even dislodge gravel.

Where the drifts were not yet deep and the snow unpacked the engine in forcing its way would at times be entirely covered with snow. For miles the train forged its way through the storm, plunging headlong into heavier drifts as they showed themselves with wide open throttle, until at last colliding with an unsurmountable weight of snow, the drive wheels turned in fruitless revolution, and the train stranded.

So great had been the momentum the engine could not back out of the drift. Ice was on the track and the snow prevented the application of sand. In a short time the four feet drift was up to the sides of the coach and an hour afterwards above the windows, and the train had a list seaward that was not calculated to inspire confidence. With shovels the train crew directed the tide ov-

As an illustration of the weight of the drifts after the snow had been cleared away so as to allow an extra engine to free the passenger engine the double header could not budge the baggage car, which was only moved by the two engines backing off and colliding with it. After the car was loosed it could be moved a few feet at a time.

When the train was finally extricated the track was so heavy that two engines were taxed to draw it at any rate of speed. Railroaders of forty years experience never saw the like, and is only equaled by the Rocky Mountain roads. It was rather an exciting spectacle to see two engines back off, open wide the throttles and almost bury themselves in a snowbank. A snowplow was ordered from the mainline but the roadbed was too narrow to accommodate it. The up-train stuck at Anthony and was delayed a day.

While the moving of the train broke in upon an animated discussion as to whether the wheels in Mr. Johnson were wooden ones manipulated by weights, or were just one of the ordinary crank movements, and drowned Mr. Lanier's delineation of what he would order if he were translated to a restaurant, causing Mr. Richardson to cease from revolving the question in his mind as to whether "she fell or was she pushed or just slipped on a banana peel," or what Mr. Johnson would do without a snow bank to sit on, no one was sorry of the variation which, like Peruna, adds spice to any occasion. Renick was not long drift was up to the sides of the coach and an hour afterwards above the windows, and the train had a list seaward that was not calculated to inspire confidence. With shovels the train crew directed the tide over the platforms between the coaches where the sleet fed through as in a shoot and formed immense drifts over the river bank.

Immediately in front was stranded a train of thirty five freight cars, with a number of its cars buried entirely in the snow.

Luckily Mr. Pierce, superintendent of the Division, was on the train, and a man was immediately dispatched through the blinding storm to the nearest telephone, a distance of nine miles, to summon the various section men and train crews on the Division. The only available engine was at Cass, a distance of nearly fifty miles, and was ten hours in arriving at the scene of the blockade, short on water and coal.

By daylight over a hundred men were at work, one engine loose and the drifts cleaned away as far as Droop siding and water tank, a distance of two miles, and the arduous task of moving the long train, car at a time, begun.

No provision had been made for supper and food, other than apples, was a minus quantity. Of the forty passengers there were a number of children and fears were entertained for their comfort ere the long night was passed, but they fared well, not realizing what had happened, and seemed to enjoy the experience. whether "she fell or was she pushed or just slipped on a banana peel," or what Mr. Johnson would do without a snow bank to sit on, no one was sorry of the variation which, like Peruna, adds spice to any occasion. Renick was not long in being reached, where supper was served and the treat was on the company. Afterwards Ronceverte was made in good order, but about 36 hours late. Every one was glad to go on, but somehow or other it was like the parting of intimate friends and acquaintance.

The real hardship was experienced by the track men, some of whom worked in drifts and under cars all night and all day without even as much as a cup of coffee.

A more secluded spot could not have been found along the whole line of railroad. It was several miles in either direction to a farm house, and the intervening space lay so deep with sleet that walking was nigh impossible, and worse, if anything, than the gnawing hunger pains that soon assailed everyone, with the supply of tobacco running short.

The truth of the old saw that misery makes brothers of every one was never more clearly illustrated. None were heard to complain unduly and all endeavored to make the time pass as quickly as possible, and expressed sympathy for the lot of those who fared not so well as they.

Fire

Marlinton was dealt another severe loss when the third major fire since June destroyed the Alpine Hotel Building and adjoining building owned by Clark Galford early Tuesday morning. The fire was discovered by Roy Horton about 2:30 a. m. when he was awakened by smoke on the third floor and already had a good start when discovered.

It is believed at this time the fire started behind Kelley's Restaurant. How the smoke got from this area to the third floor so early in the fire, is not understood at present and is one of the aspects of the fire being investigated by an official from the State Fire Marshal's Office.

Again fire companies from surrounding communities responded and had to come over icy roads to get here. Our loss would have been much greater if it had not been for help. The following towns sent men and equipment: Hot Springs, Virginia, White Sulphur Springs, Hillsboro, Renick, Lewisburg and the Astronomy Observatory. A total of 70 firemen fought cold weather and the blaze, which was not brought under control until 10:30 a. m. Water is still being played on the ruins as this is written Tuesday night.

The two buildings are a total loss and damage is estimated at least $500 000. Businesses located in these buildings are: Alpine Hotel, Alpine Theater, Kelley's Restaurant, Davis Barber Shop, Quality Discount Shop, Pocahontas Loan Company and Ralston's Mens Shop Also there were two apartments above the Mens Shop. Files and records were saved from the hotel and loan company. supplies and equipment from the barber shop and a large part of the stock from the men's store. Galfords 5 and 10 Store received some water damage and slight damage to the C J and H-P Stores from falling debris and heat.

The firemen want to express their appreciation to the women of the Ladies Auxiliary and many others who supplied hot coffee and food all day long.

The town was extremely

NOTICE

The Board of Education, with the cooperation of Telephone Utilities of West Virginia, Inc., has installed a 30-second electronic recorder to inform parents and students on the closing and opening of school during periods of emergency. The number is 799 4505 and the decision to close and open school will be made before 6.00 a. m. and a message will be recorded.

Everyone can not reach this number so we are requesting that five or six families in a given area get together and let one family call and then relay the message to their neighbors.

Any closing of schools will also be announced on WSLS-TV, Roanoke, WDBJ-TV, Roanoke and WOAY-TV, Oak Hill.

Please do not call the home of Mr. Cassell or Mr. Wooddell to obtain information about the opening or closing of schools. Their phones must be kept open to contact bus drivers and principals.

Cooperate with your neighbors and call 799-4505 after 6:00 a. m. during bad weather. No decision will be made to close schools before that time unless it is self evident.

fortunate in that wind was light and there was a thick layer of snow to protect the roofs of surrounding buildings. Even so it was doubtful for a time if the fire would be contained to where it finally was. The firemen were badly handicapped, as they have been in our other recent fires in town, by low pressure in the mains. Most of the water used in fighting the fire was pumped from the river. The fire department states that there is not enough water in the city lines to be adequate for even one fire truck.

These recent fires are the first major fires in Marlinton since the Davis Motor Company fire in February, 1956.

Wednesday - After an investigation by E. L. Roush, Deputy Fire Marshal, and Chief Fred Burns, Jr., it was announced Wednesday afternoon that the fire was caused by an electrical short circuit in a wire leading from the main service entrance in the restaurant kitchen area. The starting point of the fire was located in the wall at the left corner of the theater stage behind the screen. The fire

God and Country Award

Five scouts from Troop No. 33 received their "God and Country" Award from the Marlinton Methodist Church on December 24, 1967, at the congregational worship service. Rev. James M. Kerr, pastor, presented the church's highest award for scouting to Scouts Edward L. Stemple, Ronnie M. Evans, Terry L. Richardson, Tom D. Morrison, Jr., and Thomas M. Rose, all of Marlinton.

To qualify for the "God and Country" Award, the Scouts spent one year studying the Christian Faith and practices, and served as the pastor's assistants for the same period of time. Each Scout, under the tutorage of Rev. Kerr, studied Christian beliefs, practices, Church history, The Methodist Church denomination and its work, the social responsibility of the individual, and the future of the Church. Also, they served as acolytes, youth ushers, and assisted the pastor in a number of clerical chores.

The scouts are members of Troop No. 33 of Marlinton which is sponsored by the local Rotary Club and the Methodist Church. Robert Viers and Robert Mann are the Scoutmasters.

Aboriginal Remains In Pocahontas County

Taken from a January 11, 1912 issue of The Pocahontas Times.

As stated in my former letter I have been an investigator of aboriginal remains in Pocahontas County, West Virginia, and have made a collection of several thousand fine specimens of Indian stone relics. These investigations and collections have extended over a period of twenty-five years, during which time I have visited every part of the County where camping sites were reported to exist, and have visited nearly every earth work or mound.

My observations and the traditional history of early settlers of this region led me to believe that there were no permanent settlements in this part, that is to say that the region was visited by Indians only in their migratory fashion, or perhaps at certain seasons for the fine hunting and fishing that was had here, and which is still a favorite resort of hunters of the white race. The larger articles and cooking utensils that mark the more permanent camp sites in other localities, as in the region of the Chesapeake Bay, and along the Ohio River are almost entirely lacking here. The campsites are usually well marked by the presence of numerous arrows finished and un the crooked fork of Elk River. The valley of Knapps Creek was followed to the junction with Douthards Creek fourteen miles to the crossing of the main Allegheny range to the waters of Jackson's River in Bath County, Virginia. All of these are today main highways of travel, and within historical times armed bands of marauding Indians from the Ohio country have been pursued by the avenging pioneers of the Valley and Augusta, Virginia. The other great highway for the aborigines in crossing to the Ohio from what now constitutes the State of Virginia was to follow the valleys of the New and Kanawha Rivers, about seventy miles to the south.

At Marlinton there are numerous evidences of long occupancy. Within a few hundred yards of the courthouse there is a mound of considerable dimensions, although about obliterated by the plow. Within the memory of persons now living it was about ten feet in height. Another mound of earth and stone is situated in the bottom lands near the river and near the residence of Mr. C. W. Price. From this mound were removed within the past year the remains of at least seven adult skeletons. These had been buried in a manner that indicated that all the bodies had been thrown together and earth heaped on them, or else at some time the skeletons had been disturbed, and after or perhaps at certain seasons for the fine hunting and fishing that was had here, and which is still a favorite resort of hunters of the white race. The larger articles and cooking utensils that mark the more permanent camp sites in other localities, as in the region of the Chesapeake Bay, and along the Ohio River are almost entirely lacking here. The campsites are usually well marked by the presence of numerous arrows finished and unfinished and broken; beds of periwinkle shells if near the river, and the presence of curious river rocks of some sort that bear heat well, that are pitted on both sides, presumably to allow of handling, and have been used in the crude cookery that prevailed with this primitive people. These camping grounds may be looked for at a point where there is high ground or at or near the juncture of some stream that joins the Greenbrier River the principal river that rises in the eastern part of the state

Pocahontas County has the distinction of having the greatest elevation of any county in the state, and giving rise to more streams than any other: the headwaters of the Greenbrier, the Elk, Cheat, Williams River, Cranberry, Gauley and several others of less importance. Its forests of pines and hardwoods are the finest in the state.

Marlinton, the county seat, is situated at the junction of Knapps Creek with the Greenbrier River from the east and Stony Creek from the west. The Indian Draft is an offshoot of Stony Creek valley, and an old Indian Trail leads up this "draft" four miles to the foot of Elk Mountain and across Elk Mountain to the head of

It is certain that early settlers regarded them as entirely the work of the Indian tribes then in possession of the country, or their immediate forbears, as the word "Indian mound," in general use even to this day, sufficiently proves.

My only opinion is that the Indians as known to historic times were in the habit of throwing up mounds, generally in the neighborhood of their camps, to commemorate some special occasion, as the death of a number of men in battle, or the grave of a distinguished man in the tribe. However, I do not remember to have read that any of the mounds of which I have heard were freshly built at the time of their discovery by the whites. On the contrary, all of which there is any record of early discovery bore the signs of great antiquity, being covered with an ancient growth of forest trees.

A large mound four miles below Marlinton on the top of a high hill, in the primeval forest, has never been disturbed except for a hole sunk from the top about six feet to the level of the surrounding earth, at which depth a thick layer of ashes was found. A very large oak growing on this mound was uprooted many years ago, and tore away a part of one side. This mound is composed of earth and stones, all the stones having been conveyed a distance of several hundred feet, as there is none in the immediate vicinity of the mound. There is probably thirty or forty tons of loose rock in this mound. It is

Dunmore Community Center

Next time you drive by Dunmore Community, notice how nice the community center is beginning to look. The latest improvement has been installing some new windows and replacing all broken and damaged window panes. The sponsoring group for this project was the Dunmore Home Demonstration Club.

This may sound like a simple procedure, not so! The windows happen to be oversize, and it seemed for a time that the new sash would have to be built from "scratch." Luck was on the side of the project—just enough new sash that had been in storage a long long time was found in one of the stores in Marlinton. Window panes can of course be cut, so that was no problem.

The next undertaking was to get the work done. It some times turns out to be very difficult to find someone to do the work, even where there is money on hand to pay for it. As it happens one of the club member's husband is a carpenter; even though he is retired and does very little custom work, she persuaded him to do the work.

All new framing had to be installed in one window, and part on another before the new sash could be set in. Other repairs were made on framing and window panes replaced. It took several hours, but a good job was done. The carpenter made a liberal donation on a very reasonable labor bill

This mound is composed of earth and stones, all the stones having been conveyed a distance of several hundred feet, as there is none in the immediate vicinity of the mound. There is probably thirty or forty tons of loose rock in this mound. It is near the mouth of Swago Creek and many relics and other signs of occupancy have been noted in the fields near this mound and in the region surrounding.

At Clover Lick, on the Warwick estate, there are several mounds of the usual form and size. These are at the mouth of Clover Creek, and was a famous resort for Indians, a trail leading from Clover Creek valley through the Rider Gap and Big Spring Gap to the waters of Old Field Fork and Big Spring Fork of Elk River, respectively. One of these mounds was opened about one hundred years ago by the late Jacob Warwick, a first settler, an Indian fighter who was at the battle of Point Pleasant, 1774, a veteran of the Revolution. The well preserved bones of an adult were found in a sitting posture, face to the west, and several articles of stone and metal. All was left undisturbed and the burial place left as it was found. Succeeding years and a century's or more cultivation of the soil have about obliterated these mounds. Many relics have been found in the fields surrounding these mounds.

A small mound of earth and stone at the mouth of Locust Creek was visited by the writer a few years ago. A short time money on hand to pay for it. As it happens one of the club member's husband is a carpenter; even though he is retired and does very little custom work, she persuaded him to do the work.

How did we make the money to pay for the labor and materials? We sponsored a Community Square Dance at the Community Center, with a refreshment stand for the evening. There were home made candy, cookies, pies, also hot dogs and cokes. Enough money was taken in from this one venture to pay all bills with some left over.

We are lucky to have in our community a musical group, called the "Quadreelers," who made the music for the Square Dance.

It is remarkable what can be done when people are of one mind.

A small mound of earth and stone at the mouth of Locust Creek was visited by the writer a few years ago. A short time before a skeleton had been discovered in this mound but no other relics. There are a few mounds in the vicinity of Dunmore and Green Bank in the upper part of Pocahontas County, but the writer has never seen them.

There is no evidence that the Indians traveled far into what was a dense forest back from the Greenbrier River and its branches and tributaries. In fact in the fields that have in late years been cleared and cultivated on the uplands and higher mountains only rarely are the arrow points discovered, such as might have been lost in the chase, while nearly every field on the low lands is thickly strewn with these evidences of early occupancy, and at some of camp sites mentioned thousands of arrow points and other relics have been collected after the plowing of the fields, and the soil continues to yield an apparently undiminished supply to those who care to look for them.

Flint, the usual material for the manufacture of arrow points and spear heads is native to the limestone formation of the county, and several beds are known to have been worked. One on the headwaters of Stony Creek, another on Stamping Creek. In the vicinity of both these beds there is evidence of camp sites, and stone relics are numerous. The public road leading to the head of Stony Creek cuts through a mound about one hundred yards from the ledge of flint, on the lands of James Sharp.

On the Crooked Fork of Elk River on the lands of Robert Gibson there is an "Indian Ring," about 300 feet in diameter, formed by a sort of wire grass. This phenomenon is well marked and appears whenever the field is in grass, for more than fifty years since the spot was cleared of a dense growth of timber and laurel There is no evidence that this has any connection with Indian remains, but has been a marvel for half a century. It is well marked even in a small photograph made from a slight elevation and of which I enclose a copy.

Students Award

Suzanne Jett, senior journalism major at West Virginia University, recently received the $600 top prize in the second of six monthly writing competitions of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation's $50,000 journalism awards program.

The School of Journalism at the University received a matching $600 grant for its scholarship fund.

Miss Jett's feature writing award put the School of Journalism in second place for top school honors in the nation.

Her win makes her eligible for the championship contest in April, open only to previous first place winners.

Miss Jett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jett, of Marlinton.

DUNCAN LANE

A WAR TIME INCIDENT

Which Occurred on Stony Creek 1861

By the Rev. William T. Price

(From The Pocahontas Times, September 8, 1904)

Among the incidents of the war between the States one of the most likely to be remembered by Pocahontas people was that which occurred at Duncan's Lane, now better known as West Union, head of Stony Creek, the last Monday morning of October 1861.

From information communicated by William Gay, near Hamlin Chapel and Charles L. Moore, Brown's Creek, I compile the following sketch of this notable skirmish between Pocahontas citizens and neighbors. Gay was a Unionist and Moore a Confederate.

Colonel Samuel Young, eldest son of the late Captain William Young, of Stony Creek, appeared in the vicinity of Edray in command of a detachment of West Virginia Scouts. It appears that he was advised by the residents that one of the best things he could do would be to raid Herold's distillery on Douthards Creek, four or five miles east of Huntersville, and retire by way of Back Allegheny if attacked by the Confederates.

Upon coming to the bridge at Marlinton and seeing a Confederate scout galloping up the bottom, Colonel Young thinking that his presence being now known, concluded it would be best not to attempt the raid in view, but withdraw by way of Kee's backing to the head of Dry Branch of Swago and thence have facilities for falling back to Williams River and retreat by way of Webster County if forced to do so by overwhelming odds.

and how many there were of the Unionists.

According to the best of her knowledge there were thirty two or thirty three men led by Colonel Sam Young and Captain Walter Allen. About this time matters were so interesting that the Confederates forgot all about the breakfast they had been coming for since before daylight.

Upon leaving her the Confederates took the trail leading down the ravine towards Henry Duncan's. The Confederates were following "at will," strung out along the trail, with C. L. Moore and James Shannon some distance in the lead. These two suddenly came up with William Kennison in the rear of the Unionists and but a few steps ahead of them. Shannon was for shooting Kennison down in his tracks but Moore objected as the rest of the Confederates were too far back to make it prudent to bring on a fight against such odds as two against thirty three. Being too close to speak for fear of being overheard Moore pulled Shannon's gun back to keep him from shooting and making him hold off until the others might come up. Soon as all had come up a skirmish line was formed and when the fringe of the woods was reached the Unionists were discovered in the opening, bunched up or moving in single file in close order.

Inadvertently someone of the Confederates fired and the Unionists at once faced about and delivered a volley. To this the Confederates replied and charged with yells and the Unionists dispersed. Part of the Unionists led by Captain Allen went to the right, made a stand and were firing upon the Confederates, whereupon Captain Gay instructed Moore to dislodge them and he at-

William Young, of Stony Creek, appeared in the vicinity of Edray in command of a detachment of West Virginia Scouts. It appears that he was advised by the residents that one of the best things he could do would be to raid Herold's distillery on Douthards Creek, four or five miles east of Huntersville, and retire by way of Back Allegheny if attacked by the Confederates.

Upon coming to the bridge at Marlinton and seeing a Confederate scout galloping up the bottom, Colonel Young thinking that his presence being now known, concluded it would be best not to attempt the raid in view, but withdraw by way of Kee's backing to the head of Dry Branch of Swago and thence have facilities for falling back to Williams River and retreat by way of Webster County if forced to do so by overwhelming odds.

In the meantime Captain Joseph C. Gay, who had been instructed to scout upper Pocahontas, heard that the Unionists were expected on Swago, where Daniel Kellison and Peter Beverage were preparing beef for their use. He rallied about twenty men at Verdant Valley, now Harter. C. L. Moore, a member of the 31st Virginia, being at home on furlough, volunteered as one of the scouting party.

The party was on the move early Sunday morning, came down the Greenbrier River by Marlinton, along the public road to Kee's thence across by the Joe Buckley place to Daniel Kellison's.

By dinner time Gay's party reached Kellison's and took a Sunday dinner with that hospitable citizen as Gay had proposed to his men upon leaving Verdant Valley.

While Captain Gay and his party were taking dinner and were enjoying their restful smoke at Kellison's, Colonel Young was at the bridge as mentioned previously.

Captain Gay concluded to spend the night in the Levels against such odds as two against thirty three. Being too close to speak for fear of being overheard Moore pulled Shannon's gun back to keep him from shooting and making him hold off until the others might come up. Soon as all had come up a skirmish line was formed and when the fringe of the woods was reached the Unionists were discovered in the opening, bunched up or moving in single file in close order.

Inadvertently someone of the Confederates fired and the Unionists at once faced about and delivered a volley. To this the Confederates replied and charged with yells and the Unionists dispersed. Part of the Unionists led by Captain Allen went to the right, made a stand and were firing upon the Confederates, whereupon Captain Gay instructed Moore to dislodge them and he attempted to do so by moving up in the face of Allen's firing. Some of the others deployed still farther to the right so as to flank.

Moore crossed a fence and discharged his musket, reserving his revolver for close quarters, but the Unionists withdrew pursued by Moore and his party in the direction of the Duncan home at which they made a stand and passed some words with the Confederates.

The Unionsts were heard to exclaim that "one rebel had been busted." This was denied by Moore and after a fierce interchange of shots the Unionists disappeared in the direction of West Union.

This skirmish was a surprise and began about 10 o'clock in the morning and the Unionists that I have talked with give Captain Allen, Luni Silva and the four or five others who crossed the field and opened fire on the Confederates flank and checked the charge, the credit of enabling the party to get away. While the Confederates were held in check Colonel Young attempted to rally paring beef for their use. He rallied about twenty men at Verdant Valley, now Harter. C. L. Moore, a member of the 31st Virginia, being at home on furlough, volunteered as one of the scouting party.

The party was on the move early Sunday morning, came down the Greenbrier River by Marlinton, along the public road to Kee's thence across by the Joe Buckley place to Daniel Kellison's.

By dinner time Gay's party reached Kellison's and took a Sunday dinner with that hospitable citizen as Gay had proposed to his men upon leaving Verdant Valley.

While Captain Gay and his party were taking dinner and were enjoying their restful smoke at Kellison's, Colonel Young was at the bridge as mentioned previously.

Captain Gay concluded to spend the night in the Levels and then return to take breakfast with Peter Beverage early Monday morning. This worthy citizen lived some miles farther up the Swago Dry Branch.

So after their much enjoyed dinner Gay's party went on to the Levels, where they disbanded and found lodging with different families near Mill Point.

Monday morning Gay's men assembled before day, as agreed upon as to be in time for breakfast at Peter Beverage's, retracing the way to Kellison's and going up to Swago towards Beverage's. Upon coming in sight of the house a Union picket was noticed and the party halted for consultation. Whereupon it was decided not to advance until something could be ascertained of the strength of the Unionists.

When ready for action Captain Gay instructed C. L. Moore with twelve men to charge the dwelling, while Captain Gay with the remainder would wait on the flanks to intercept any that might run ing his revolver for close quarters, but the Unionists withdrew pursued by Moore and his party in the direction of the Duncan home at which they made a stand and passed some words with the Confederates.

The Unionsts were heard to exclaim that "one rebel had been busted." This was denied by Moore and after a fierce interchange of shots the Unionists disappeared in the direction of West Union.

This skirmish was a surprise and began about 10 o'clock in the morning and the Unionists that I have talked with give Captain Allen, Lum Silva and the four or five others who crossed the field and opened fire on the Confederates flank and checked the charge, the credit of enabling the party to get away. While the Confederates were held in check Colonel Young attempted to rally behind a large red oak log, but was supported by one soldier, John Armstrong, who being soon wounded in the arm, he and the Colonel followed the rest towards the Duncan home thence deployed to the left towards West Union.

The lamented Bernard Sharp was mortally wounded by the opening Confederate volley, James Rogers was wounded in the thigh. Moffatt Wanless received a slight wound in the shoulder and William Gay my informant, lost his blanket. Clark Dilley fired from West Union schoolhouse at a Confederate beyond Duncan's barn and he was seen to fall. This is supposed to have been the only Confederate casualty and my information is to the effect that this wounded Confederate was the late Davis Kennison, Esq., near Academy

As a result of this skirmish Colonel Young's detachment became separated. Some were with Captain Allen, the others were with Colonel Young. The party with Allen

Monday morning Gay's men assembled before day, as agreed upon as to be in time for breakfast at Peter Beverage's, retracing the way to Kellison's and going up to Swago towards Beverage's. Upon coming in sight of the house a Union picket was noticed and the party halted for consultation. Whereupon it was decided not to advance until something could be ascertained of the strength of the Unionists.

When ready for action Captain Gay instructed C. L. Moore with twelve men to charge the dwelling, while Captain Gay with the remainder would wait on the flanks to intercept any that might run from the house.

In the meantime by some wireless means the Unionists had learned something and vacated the premises and so when Moore reached the house none were in sight. Moore was emphatically assured by the "women folks" that "not a Yankee had been around" for they would "know better than to come about where they lived."

With all their respect for the ladies, however, the scouts in gray were incredulous and after some searching a fresh trail was discovered which the Confederates followed in direction of William Beverage's where the Unionists were seen making ready to take a bee gum.

Gay's men seeing it would not be prudent to show themselves lay down in the grass and awaited developments.

The Unionists took the honey and crossed over the crest of the mountain while the Confederates came to the house and found Mrs. Beverage "out of fix" about her bees and she told all she knew as to who James Rogers was wounded in the thigh. Moffatt Wanless received a slight wound in the shoulder and William Gay my informant, lost his blanket. Clark Dilley fired from West Union schoolhouse at a Confederate beyond Duncan's barn and he was seen to fall. This is supposed to have been the only Confederate casualty and my information is to the effect that this wounded Confederate was the late Davis Kennison, Esq., near Academy

As a result of this skirmish Colonel Young's detachment became separated. Some were with Captain Allen, the others were with Colonel Young. The party with Allen at once made their escape to Elk by way of Red Lick Pass.

Colonel Young's party became bewildered, veered around during the night and found themselves at Andy Taylor's on Laurel Run about two miles from the bloody exciting scenes of the previous day.

With William Gay as pilot the party renewed the attempt at escape and reached the divide between Crooked Fork and Gauley by way of Spruce Knob.

Upon gaining this point Colonel Young came to the front and took the lead once more. It soon became evident that he was in danger of repeating the maneuvers of the preceding day and had to be closely watched and politely cautioned.

Finally all came out at John B. Hannah's, the old field fork of Elk. This incident touchingly illustrates how strangely people will act in war times.

With very few exceptions the sixty or seventy persons concerned in this affair had been boys together and grew up as

Senior Class Play—Outdoor Drama

A unique feature of Marlinton High's Senior Class Play is the fact that it will be presented on the football field outdoors. "The Great Big Doorstep" which was first produced on Broadway in 1942 is a comedy in three acts about the Crochets and the magnificent doorstep they found floating down the Mississippi River. They set it up in front of their poor little shanty, and from then on, with both humor and pathos, they're trying to live up to their great big doorstep.

Directed by Mrs. Florence Bailey and Loren Jackson, the cast includes:

From "Bill" Gardner . . .

My name is William C. "Bill" Gardner, and I have filed as a Republican candidate for Sheriff of Pocahontas County, West Virginia, as you will note from advertisement found elsewhere in this paper.

I was born and reared at Clover Lick, attended local schools, and graduated from Marlinton High School in 1938. I am a member of Grace Episcopal Church. My mother is Catherine H. Gardner, of the same community. My father, William C. Gardner, is deceased. My wife is the former Pauline Buzzard, of Huntersville, and we have four children—a daughter, Carol Ann Mullenax, of Durbin, three sons, Rodney W., a student at WVU, R. Lee, at home, and Fredric P., a student at Green Bank High School.

I have been a farmer, logger and heavy equipment operator all of my adult life. I am also a veteran of World War II, having served in the Navy at that time. I am also a strong supporter of our local organization.

This is the first time that I have sought public office, as I feel that more people should become involved in such affairs. The only promise that I make is that I will be diligent, honest, and fair in the execution of the duties of the office to which I aspire.

POCAHONTAS COUNTY

Board of Education

Marlinton, West Virginia

May 6, 1968

TO THE CITIZENS OF POCAHONTAS COUNTY:

I would like to thank Mrs. Jane Sharp and Mrs. Virginia Haddock for their local newspaper coverage on the School Bond Issue, and to especially thank Mrs. Sharp for providing space for the opinions column which has produced many fine comments.

I have read the various opinions concerning the Bond Issue and some were written from an emotional aspect while the majority were stated from a reasonable approach. I believe the latter should govern the decisions for our county. It is well and good that the schools of Pocahontas County have produced the type of individuals who are still concerned about Pocahontas County, even though they do not live here. However, I feel when any individual studies the basic educational problems of Pocahontas County that he will not find the solutions easy. We have many difficult problems that must be corrected by reasonable approaches and not by emotional desires.

The Board of Education and the Administrative Staff have studied the problems of Pocahontas County with the following findings:

A. A dedicated teaching staff
B. A good school program that could and should be better
C. Inadequate unsafe buildings in which the young people are housed
D. Buses that are getting too old to operate safely and economically
E. Teacher recruitment almost an impossibility, due to the fact, that teachers in the small high school are called upon to teach subjects for which they have not been professionally trained
F. An adequate curriculum does not exist in any of the three high schools to meet the needs of the majority of the students
G. A declining population
H. A county citizenry that is not united in effort to better themselves

WHY THE BOND ISSUE?

- It will build a centralized high school which will house grades 9-12, approximately 650 students, which is a small school population.
- The vocational training subjects will be expanded to take care of the majority of high school students.
- College bound students will be better prepared to meet the competition as well as the challenge of college work.
- It will unite the Pocahontas County people in order that future problems of the county can be solved more readily.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN YOU FAIL TO EXERCISE YOUR RESPONSIBILITY AND VOTE AGAINST THE BOND ISSUE? Here are some of my personal predictions:

I predict that

- the population of Pocahontas County will steadily decline.
- people who leave Pocahontas County will sell their land to the federal government, therefore, creating a greater tax burden on the landowners remaining.
- both tanneries will close within five to seven years because of an inadequate labor supply.
- some businesses will close due to the lack of volume sales; when you lose people you lose customers.
- the National Radio Astronomy Observatory will cut back to a skeleton crew, therefore, depriving the communities of Pocahontas a payroll which is largely spent in our county. Contrary to popular opinion, the majority of the Observatory employees own their own homes and many are building their homes in our communities.
- there will be classrooms full of students without teachers. We now have eighteen teachers who could retire with thirty-five years of experience, if they so desire.

I am not trying to scare anyone into voting for the Bond Issue, but I close with this one thought. It will cost you a 60% increase in taxes now. If you fail to VOTE FOR the Bond Issue, what is it going to cost you and your children's children in the future?

Thank you for your support in our endeavors.

Sincerely,

Grey M. Cassell

A FORMER CITIZEN LOOKS WITH [illegible] ON POCAHONTAS COUNTY

As a former citizen of the Marlinton area, and still very much concerned as to the future progress and general welfare of my native county, I have been reading with growing interest in the Pocahontas Times many opinions regarding the proposed school bond issue to be decided May 14. My deep concern is responsible for these thoughts which I hope will be a worthwhile contribution to a wonderful challenge to the people of a great county.

Quite naturally, I am proud of Pocahontas County and the high class of human products emanating from the schools and college of its largely rural areas. Its contribution to society, even in earlier days when advantages were of necessity limited, has been of high quality. It continues to produce, and to serve well. It must look to the future, and be certain that tomorrow's men and women, now products of Pocahontas County Schools, who will soon assume leadership and responsibility are eminently fitted to compete and serve in a fast-moving and complex world of electronics, mass production, automation, atomic know-how, space endeavors and kindred fields.

It is for this youthful and vivacious segment of our population, and for unborn children to follow that we must provide the ways and means that they may find security and happiness and useful service. It is for them that we must build!

We must remember that for any commodity, or service that is worth having there is always a price tag. It is true for the necessities, it is true for the luxuries, and many times require hard work and sacrifice. It costs to live, and life is a constant effort and fight. But the rewards by way of convenience, service, time-saving and satisfaction make the efforts worthwhile, and a sound investment. And we are glad we dared to look ahead, and to act.

And now, less than one month away, there is the opportunity to go forward, to make progress by united effort and strength to give Pocahontas County a new and modern school facility for all the children, regardless of race, color or creed. Much can be said about the excellent records of Hillsboro High School, Green Bank High School, Marlinton High School; each has contributed a much needed service and have served their area well. Likewise, our one-room rural schools performed the needed service that their day required, but development and progress have outdated them.

In the same manner, our small high schools, so vital over the many years, are rapidly becoming inadequate. An effective union of the schools at a central or suitable point will combine our resources and make available a modern school plant with up-to-date classrooms, modern equipment, better opportunities for the teachers, with the natural result of increased interest and pupil progress.

Let us pay tribute to the many loyal and dedicated teachers who have spent their teaching careers in Pocahontas County when perhaps they could have obtained more lucrative positions elsewhere; we are very indebted to them.

If we would have the best, we must be willing to pay the price. We believe in our youth today. We believe they are willing and ready to endure the inconvenience of early morning and late evening bus travel. We believe they are yearning for the opportunity to extend themselves in longer hours of hard study, and work, and preparation, and that their achievements in school and afterwards will more than pay for the modern facilities we provide for them now.

I have no children, nor do I have a vote in my native county of Pocahontas, but I have many relatives and scores of friends and associates whose children need my support and for whom I am deeply concerned. I would like to see better opportunities for them than it was my fortune to have. The preparation and requirements for living and competing in tomorrow's world is greater than it was yesterday, and adults of today must not fail them.

I believe these spirited young Americans today, direct offspring of rugged mountaineers of the "horse and buggy" days who accomplished so much the "hard way," will respond in the brilliant manner so characteristic of the early pioneer, and that they will meet every test, and every challenge of a strenuous, complicated and fast-moving world.

I would love to hear on the [illegible] of May 15 that the Pocahontas County friends of my childhood have taken a great step forward in education, and have overwhelmingly passed the bond proposal that assuring better preparation for the leaders of tomorrow.

I shall await voter reaction with great interest.

Bear Meeting

If there had been any illusion in Charleston that Pocahontas farmers weren't vitally concerned about the bear refuge in the Back Country, it was dispelled Monday night when a hundred fifty or more interested citizens met with Director of Natural Resources T. R. Samsell. Samsell was noticeably on the defensive as he explained his Department's responsibility under law for all of the renewable resources of the State of West Virginia, which include game, for the good of all 1,800,000 of her citizens; the latest addition to its responsibility was control and reclamation of strip mining areas. The Department has 645 employees for enforcement, parks, game and fish, water control, etc.

Mr. Samsell presented information concerning the game program and then fairly and sympathetically heard all opinions and comments.

First he had Jim Ruckol explain the Southeastern Disease Cooperative Project, with veterinarians and other research people from the University of Georgia making a study of diseases and parasites of our wildlife, also in Michigan, Maryland and Kentucky. They studied 23 deer a few years ago and are taking 15 or 20 grouse a year plus entrails of wild turkeys during hunting season

Town Council Motorists Take Note

Monday night the Citizen's Committee met with Marlinton Town Council and discussed various proposals for better law enforcement and better police protection. The Council decided to tighten enforcement on parking meters to see if enough additional money can be raised to hire a policeman from 1:00 a. m. to early morning. Parking time will be checked more carefully as will illegal parking, especially in alleys.

District's 125,000 acres, they are clear cutting about one percent, or 1250 acres, a year. This is part of a hundred year plan. The tracts average about 100 acres and he feels this will improve both forest and wildlife habitat.

Sherman Beard, Harvey Galford and Bert McMillion gave actual examples of how the 100,000 acre bear refuge is a real threat to their livelihood forcing them to abandon thousands of acres of good grazing land.

Tom Edgar suggested that the boundary of the refuge area be moved back.

Argile Arbogast and others were seeking a clarification as to whether or not they could pursue a sheep killing bear into the refuge. Mr. Samsell would not state that was permissible now.

After much discussion, Mr. Samsell summarized as follows:

(1) Desire to follow and eliminate the sheep killing bear.

(2) Compensation

(3) Sheepraiser to select hunter and notify the Conservation Officer.

He proposed the selection of a representative group to Wayne Bailey told of the livetrapping and banding of 1500 to 2000 turkeys for study of their range and life habits, leading to better hunting regulations. Also, he said some 275 turkeys - 20 or 30 a year, mostly out of Watoga State Park—had been moved to other counties until now most every county had some turkeys. Over half the plantings did reasonably well. Some were exchanged with Illinois for deer. None has been moved for the last two or three years.

Some deer, also from Watoga, had been moved, about 20.

All of this led to the meat of the program—bear.

Pete Zurbach estimated the bear population in West Virginia at about 500, which is concentrated in the eastern section, including Pocahontas, but bear have been sighted in all counties, now coming back in deserted coal areas. The kill in West Virginia averages around 50 compared to 100 to 400 in Virginia. He estimated bear hunters spend $1,300,000 each year, making those bears worth about 2600. (In comparison, the sheep industry is worth three to four million dollars.) The main breeding places are Otter Creek, in Randolph, Flat Rock, Tucker, the Cheat area and Cranberry Back Country, and the eastern edge of Monroe.

Ramsell reviewed efforts at legislation for compensation for bear losses and other desirable regulations but none of this passed the Legislature.

All kinds of questions and comments were heard, one concerning the beech trees on the National Forest, on which may be Veart Haynes will give us a report later. In this connection he defended the evenage management, or clear-cutting, of forest land. On the Marlinton

District's 125,000 acres, they are clear cutting about one per cent, or 1250 acres, a year. This is part of a hundred year plan. The tracts average about 100 acres and he feels this will improve both forest and wildlife habitat.

Sherman Beard, Harvey Galford and Bert McMillion gave actual examples of how the 100,000 acre bear refuge is a real threat to their livelihood, forcing them to abandon thousands of acres of good grazing land.

Tom Edgar suggested that the boundary of the refuge area be moved back.

Argile Arbogast and others were seeking a clarification as to whether or not they could pursue a sheep killing bear into the refuge. Mr. Samsell would not state that was permissible now.

After much discussion, Mr. Samsell summarized as follows:

(1) Desire to follow and eliminate the sheep killing bear.

(2) Compensation

(3) Sheepraiser to select hunter and notify the Conservation Officer.

He proposed the selection of a representative group to meet with the Department of Natural Resources within the next ten days or so to work towards a solution. The following men were named:

Homecoming

The Marlinton Copperheads will be playing their last home coming game when they meet the Green Bank Golden Eagles at Marlinton on Friday, September 27, at 7:30.

For this reason, the Junior Class is planning for and hoping to have the the largest attendance ever for this event. We hope to have many of the Alumni present, both old and young.

The band will take part in the half-time ceremony which will include the crowning of the Football Queen. The Queen's attendants will also be included in this ceremony.

Chosen to reign as queen for this celebration was Nancy Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin C. Anderson, of Marlinton.

Nancy was class reporter during her Freshman year and is secretary of this year's Senalso on the Committee for the Junior-Senior Banquet. She was a cheerleader her Freshman year and is now one in her Senior year. She attended Camp Horseshoe, leadership Camp sponsored by the Woman's Club.

Miss Anderson is a member of the Marlinton Presbyterian Church; belongs to the Presbyterian Choir. She was treasurer of the Presbyterian Senior High Fellowship her Sophomore year and secretary her Senior year.

Eighth Grade attendant, Rachel Slaven, escorted by Ricky L. Moore.

Seventh Grade attendant, Karen Underwood, escorted by Robert Shinaberry.

Debbie Pennybacker will carry the Queen's crown and Monty Cassell will carry the scepter.

The Homecoming dance will be held in the Gym after the game.

This year marks the fiftieth anniversary of Green Bank High School. Graduates of the school may be found in every walk of life. The School has reasons to be proud of graduates who have added materially to society. If present plans of the Board of Education are carried through, this will be the last Homecoming. The Board of Education hopes to have the consolidated high school ready for occupancy by the opening of the 1969-1970 term of school.

Thomas C. Edgar of Hillsboro, received the Distinguished Alumnus Plaque at the Greenbrier Military School National Alumni Association Banquet Saturday night. Edgar has served in the State Legislature for eight years. He lost both legs in action at Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge while serving as commander of a gun company in a tank destroyer battalion. He was a captain when wounded and was retired from the army in 1947 with the rank of major. He is a 1936 graduate of Greenbrier Military School.

Mrs. Edgar is the former Betsy Jordan and their children are George Thomas, now living in Hopewell, Virginia, and Martha Irene, a college student.

C. C. Coleman, II, (class of 1956) of Lyndon, Kentucky, succeeded Edward S. Yarid (class of 1943) Lewisburg businessman, as president of the national association. Yarid was given a wall plaque, symbolic of his year's service as president. He now automatically becomes a member of the Board of Directors.

Alumni enjoyed a busy week end beginning with the GMS Junior Varsity-Greenbrier East JV football game Friday afternoon, an informal reception at the home of C. C. Coleman Friday night, and including a buffet luncheon, a varsity football game, a dance and the annual Alumni Banquet on Saturday.

OLDSMOBILE DEALERS UNVEIL 1969 MODEL SEPTEMBER 26

Oldsmobile, for 1969, is introducing completely restyled 88's and 98's, a longer and sleeker Toronado with a major change in rear end appearance, and power train improvements designed for greater economy and performance in F-85 models.

The new Oldsmobile will be on display at Sheets Garage, Green Bank, on Thursday, September 26, it was announced today by Clarence A. Sheets.

"Oldsmobile styling and engineering advancements, as attractive as they are, will compete for the customer's attention this year with a wide range of new safety-related product improvements," Mr. Sheets said.

These include side impact bars inside the doors of 88's and 98's, a more uniform rate of energy absorption in all Oldsmobile steering columns, head restraints as standard equipment, larger rear view mirrors, and a sloping interior header bar from roof to windshield to reduce the likelihood of head injury in case of accident.

From a marketing standpoint, Oldsmobile has simplified its medium price class lineup. All cars in the '88' family are Delta 88's. These cars, with wheelbases increased to 124 inches, are the Delta 88, the Delta 88 Custom, and a newly-created top-of-the-line hardtop coupe, the Delta 88 Royale. The latter car has a distinctive backlight, chromed front fender side louvers, identifying hood ornamentation, and a vinyl top as standard equipment.

The new 98's also have been completely restyled and are longer looking cars with longer hood, longer rear deck, and greater luggage capacity. The popular 98 Luxury Sedan has been expanded to two models. Previously available only in a 4-door pillar version, Oldsmobile in '69 is offering a companion car, the 98 Luxury Hardtop Sedan.

The 1969 Toronado, lengthened 3½ inches, displays a dramatically redesigned rear end, clean-tailored and involving a new deck and rear quarters.

The new Oldsmobile F-85's have undergone just the right degree of change (front, rear and interior) to achieve a sportier look. Oldsmobile's high-performing 4-4-2 becomes even more distinctive in 1969, aided in part by a special rally hood paint scheme replacing the previous side rally stripe.

Among major engineering advancements by Oldsmobile in 1969 is the expansion, on many F-85 models, of the power train philosophy introduced on full-sized Oldsmobiles in 1968. This has been accomplished by combining an all-new 3-speed automatic transmission with a lower 2.56-to-1 axle ratio, resulting in performance and fuel economy gains.

Other improvements include extension of availability of the Oldsmobile-pioneered rim-blow steering wheel. Optional only on tilt-and-telescope steering wheel equipped cars last year, in 1969 it will be available on all models, including the F-85.

The easy to use but very efficient cruise control system introduced on the F-85 in 1967 is now planned for all Oldsmobiles. In this optional system, the engage button is located in the end of the turn signal lever and operates with simplicity and greater convenience.

A swing tailgate, hinged to open either as a door or as a loading platform, is optional on 1969 Oldsmobile Vista Cruisers and Cutlass station wagons. A deep well luggage compartment is a standard feature in all 1969 Oldsmobile wagons. Fuel tank capacity in all wagons has been increased to 23 gallons for greater cruising range.

Visit our Showroom for a look at the New 1969 Oldsmobiles!

There Ain't No G in Marlinton

A smart and stylish man was he,
He had a college-bought degree,
He wished to buy some timber land,
And so he took his pen in hand,
But when it all was said and done,
He hurt his friend in Marlinton,
He did a capital crime you see,
Spelling Marlinton with a G.

There ain't no G in Marlinton,
There ain't no G in Marlinton,
There ain't no G in Marlinton,
There ain't no G in Marlinton.

Jacob Marlin, a hunter bold,
Settled here in days of old,
He camped in a hollow tree,
And spelled his name with nary G.
His partner, a hunter, also came,
Stephen B. Sewell, was his name,
The year was seventeen-fifty-one,
They founded the town of Marlinton.

While they dwelt in solitude,
Sewell got in an ugly mood;
He took his knife and on a tree,
Cut M A R L I N G.
Then Jacob Marlin, mighty quick,
Fell on him like a thousand brick,
For it always riled his family,
For folks to spell the name with G.

Old Jacob Marlin died in bed,
Sewell--the Indians killed him dead.
It was an awful fate, but he
Was prone to use the extra G.
Let all take warning from his fate,
And when our town they designate,
They sure must mind their p's and q's,
This awful G we can't excuse.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Arbogast:

It is my great pleasure to inform you of the recent advancement of your son, Samuel, to Aviation Machinist's Mate (Jet) First Class. This certainly is a most noteworthy achievement and particularly indicative of his ability and fine character as a man.

The Navy's system of advancement is complex but thoroughly comprehensive, justly fair, and extremely effective in selecting only the best qualified individuals for positions of greater responsibility. The selection process becomes all the more impressive when one considers the large number of men competing for the relatively few positions within the Petty Officer ranks. You can be assured that the Navy has many good men and they all put forth their very best effort in anticipation of qualifying for advancement. Therefore, for Samuel to attain his advancement, he had to excel over many deserving and qualified men. He succeeded in answering this challenge by exerting additional individual effort in the study of technical and professional subjects, in the application of acquired skills, and in his consistent excellence in military behavior. You may be justifiably proud of your son.

I have personally congratulated Samuel, and I speak for the officers and men of Training Squadron TWENTY-TWO, when I say that we are privileged to have Samuel as a member of our command, and we share with you the pride and pleasure of his accomplishment

Sincerely,
W. F. Moore

THURSDAY, DEC. 19, 1968

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone around about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace and good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is to come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told to them concerning this child.

And all that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

Obituary of a Wise Old Buck

Old Crooked Foot of Crooked Fork, born sometime before 1959, died peaceably December 5, 1968, between the two old grades near the Rock Low place in Crooked Fork of Elk by one 30-30 bullet fired by Jackie Gibson.

Practically all local hunters of Elk, Edray, Woodrow and Williams River have known and hunted him, since the late fifties. His right front leg always made a peculiar track in the snow, so we named him Old Crooked Foot and every year since 1959, we always gave him chase and sometimes we could get sight of him, sometimes getting a shot at him, although he always managed to survive. Many a mile we have tracked him and each and every time he would always outsmart us and we would have to come home tired and hungry hoping for another day or another season to get the pleasure of seeing him or having the thrill of getting him for our trophy, and our hunting tales, as we grow older.

Thursday was a cold and windy day, with about four inches of snow on Crooked Fork and all four of us hunters were about frozen and almost ready to give up the hunt when Crooked Foot walked out on our last drive of the day and made his last and fatal mistake by letting young Jackie Gibson take aim and putting him down to rest with a bullet directly through his heart.

We found that old Crooked Foot did not really have a crooked foot but he only had 3 feet and his right front leg had been shot off years ago between the ankle and knee and had grown over to be a fine peg leg. He had 18 points to his horns and was in good shape although not too awfully fat and I would guess before he was hog dressed he would go about 225 pounds.

Now that he is gone, us Crooked Fork hunters will miss our favorite old timer.

Jackie Gibson, Jim Gibson, Don Sharp, Odie Cutlip and all the hunters who knew of him

Buffalo Dam

Washington—"The 21-acre Buffalo Fork impoundment in Pocahontas County is nearing completion," U. S. Senator Robert C. Byrd (D-W.Va.) has announced.

The lake, which was constructed by the West Virginia Department of Natural Resources, was funded by the federal Economic Development Administration and the State of West Virginia.

It cost about $300,000 and is located three miles from Thornwood in the Monongahela National Forest.

"Construction began in the fall of 1967," Byrd said. Completion is expected within the next few months.

"In addition to providing boating, swimming and other recreational facilities, the lake will provide water storage and flood control for the downstream communities of Bartow, Frank and Durbin.

"Camping facilities are planned by the U. S. Forest Service," Byrd added.

Mrs. Charles McQuain, Jr., of Dunmore, says there may not have been any human accident injuries during hunting season but their television set got shot. The McQuains live in a mobile home and about 8:30 one morning the television set started popping. After disconnecting it and moving it on the porch, the picture tube continued popping and breaking other tubes for five minutes. They found where a bullet from a deer hunter's gun had gone through the side of the house and into the TV set. Providentially, the little boy wasn't interested in the Today Show so wasn't at his customary place in front of the set; also the set had been moved a little or the bullet would have gone on through the rooms.

Tannery Workers

The national bi-monthly publication, Tempo, of the FLM Joint Board, for December has a full page featuring a story on Durbin and Marlinton Tannery workers.

Marlinton and Durbin Tanneries have voted to change union representation from District 50, United Mine Workers, to Fur and Leather and Machine Workers of America. A hearing was held in the Regional Office of the National Labor Relations Board in November asking for the change and the decision is expected at any time.

Durbin Local 13064, representing about 200 workers, and Marlinton Local 12961 with 120 members, made the request at meetings this summer and fall after becoming dissatisfied with District 50.

Representing the locals at the hearings in Pittsburgh were Durbin union president Ralph Stone, Charles Cover and James Finley and Marlinton president Norman McClure, Leonard Combs, Mason Vaughan, Marvin Doss, Grant Sharp and Ray Warren.

Those attending the funeral of Sgt. John R. Williams from out of town were:

"For pete's sakes, how much does a guy have to go through to take his girl to a dance?"

This is the big question to be answered November 15, 1968 at Hillsboro Auditorium, Hillsboro, when the Junior Class presents, "Seventeen is Terrific." The three act comedy will begin at 8:00 p. m. and promises to keep everyone on the side of a young couple's dilemma in getting to the annual dance.

Dr. Allenby, portrayed by Donald McNeel, is no help as he has business and personal problems of his own including the "worst pair of feet in the world." Grandma, characterized by Linda Hill, is restrained by Dr. Allenby and his constant needs. Hanna, the hired girl from the country, played by Jan Bevins, is in a constant stupor over men.

Janie Allenby, in real life Lana Gilkerson, keeps the entire family in an uproar with her cheerleading yells during family cri es. Billy Allenby, or really Billy Kershner, who is probably the noisiest neighborhood pest in the world, is aided and abetted in sleuthy procedures by Patsy Gardner, (Sylvia Pritt), his 13 year old counterpart.

Nancy Pomeroy, portrayed by Barbara Pritt, just doesn't have it with the boys, but can be ready in "one-second's notice" to go to the dance. The cast rounds out with Ginny Grant, played by Sandra Bruffey, and George Bennett, characterized by Harold Adkins.

The play will be under the direction of Franklin Holstein and production will be in charge of the Junior Class and sponsors, Blix McNeill and Eugene Lousch.

FHA Family of the Year

Mr. and Mrs. William "Mack" Vandevender and children, of Bartow, have been selected as Farmers Home Administration "Farm Family of the Year," for Greenbrier and Pocahontas counties. This award is an annual award bestowed upon the family from each unit who has done an outstanding job of raising its standard of living and making progress in farming. This selection was recently announced by Hayward L. Hinzman, County Supervisor for the Lewisburg unit, which serves the two counties.

For many years the Vandevenders were tenants on the farm of the late C. R. Beard. With the aid of Farmers Home Administration funds, the farm was purchased, stocked with cattle and mechanized. Ownership proved to be a catalyst; with their own initiative the family repaired the dwelling and outbuildings, erected fences and acquired additional livestock. Income from the farm, until recently, has been from devenders converted to a beef operation.

The good standard of living the family enjoys is, in part, due to the efforts of Mrs. Vandevender and daughters, who raise an excellent garden, and freeze or can much of the winter's food supply. Home killed pork and beef are added to the winter's larder during the fall. The cellar resembles a cornucopia after the bountiful harvest.

The farm has truly been a cooperative enterprise with the Vandevenders. Mr. Vandevender is steadily employed at the Frank tannery. Each evening the next day's work was assigned to each son to be accomplished while the father is at work. As mentioned before Mrs. Vandevender and daughters are responsible for the home and garden.

The assumption of responsibility has molded good citizens. While many of the urban youth are dodging the draft, William Vandevender, a son, is serving in Viet Nam. Judy, a daughter, is at home while her husband is on active duty in the aforementioned Southeast Asia

Plane Crash

A light plane, a single engine Cessna 150, crashed on Tea Creek Monday morning. The plane was completely destroyed but the pilot, J. F. Johnston, 23. Parkersburg, walked away from the wreck. He walked three to five miles and was pick ed up by hunters and brought to the hospital here. He was treated for cuts to his face and eye and released Tuesday morn ing.

Johnston, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Johnston, of Parkersburg, was flying from Atlantic City, New Jersey, to Huntington, where he had rented the plane. He was running low on fuel and was trying to make Elkins airport. He started losing altitude and figures he blacked out, regaining consciousness after the crash.

The plane crashed high on the mountain in rugged country, accessible only by walking. Corporal C. C. Beck and Joe Roy walked to the scene to investigate.

Bear Tales

By way of Baltimore, we have some bear tales from Odey Cassell. Earl Shelsby, of the staff of the Sun Sports, was in Cass for the first part of the bear season and writes:

It took me a lot of searching, but I think I have found the world's champion tough-luck bear hunter. He is Odey Cassell, 82-year old native of Cass. Nearly everyone who has hunted bear seriously has a sad tale or two to tell but Odey has a dozen.

On the eve of West Virginia bear season, Cassell was using his stories of how bears have avoided his rifle during sixteen years in hunting in prime bear country. When the evening ended, there was no indication that he had completed his long list of sad bear stories.

Some of his misadventures with bears made "The Shelby Jinx" sound like a happy ending. The first of several Cassell tales is about the bear that he did get. He doesn't count this one because he didn't get him with a gun.

"I was 17 at the time," the former logger, pullmiller, and farmer began. "These friends of mine have a trap line right up above my farm.

I heard them hollering and whooping one day and I knew what they had. I answered them and they told me to come up to them.

When I got there, they had One time I was leaning on a spruce tree that was laying down about waist high and felt a thud. First I thought the tree was breaking, but I bounced up and down on it and found it solid. When I did a bear came out from under the tree and just about ran over me. I had to jump back to get out of his way. When I did I was unable to fire a shot before he was gone.

Cassell told another story about being 40 feet away from a bear and thinking it was his neighbors missing pig.

He first noted that the grounds had been rooted up just like a pig would do. Then he saw the back of the bear and thought it was the back of the pig. He didn't realize his mistake until the bear caught wind of him and snorted and quickly disappeared.

Successful Hunts

Cassell told how several other bear escaped his gun, but he also intermingled stories of the many successful hunts in which he has participated.

"I have been in on many cases in which a bear was killed, but I have never been able to make the kill," Cassell said.

He told of one friend who knocked down a bear but it got up and ran away. By the time he reloaded, a bear was a bare length in front, a bear that he thought was the same bear he had shot. He shot this one also and it turned out that his friend had killed two bears in less than a minute.

I was about 240 pounds then and didn't know my own strength. They gave me a club and told me to hit the bear on the head.

One Paw Free

The bear had its left front paw in the trap, but what I failed to realize was that the other one was free.

I took a swing at the bear with all my strength and just as I did the bear threw up its other paw and the club flew back striking me right on the forehead and knocking me back 12 feet.

It gave me a nose bleed and a wonderful hurt.

We finally killed the bear but the only way we could do it was to line up the other two fellows so we could all swing clubs at the same time.

I don't know whether it was my lick or someone else's, but we got him right across the back of the neck and paralyzed him.

We didn't have any scale, but he must have weighed 450 pounds.

Bear hunting is a tradition in this section of West Virginia. It grew out of a necessity of protecting sheep and other livestock from bears. There is a bounty on bear in Pocahontas County today.

Missing In Action

Mrs. D. W. Williams was notified Tuesday morning that her son, John Ray "Chipper" Williams, has been missing near Da Nang, Viet Nam, since Thanksgiving Day.

Schools

A good group of interested citizens attended the presentation of the architect's plans at the Board of Education meeting Tuesday night.

Core drilling for suitable places for a well has been done on Hively's property but the ground has been too soft for well-drilling this past week.

Coon

William Akers killed a coon Friday which would probably break some records in the heavy weight class. It tipped the scales at twenty-one and a half pounds and was shot on the Luster Shrader farm above Huntersville. Raymond Bowers and then Akers himself were telling about the coon and up cropped an old coon story told for many years on Lum Riddle so it ought to be good for such a big coon as this. A good coon dog properly trained can save a man a lot of work and Lum had a jewel of a dog, which gave him a little more time in the rocking chair. He had that dog trained so all he had to do was put the pelt board out on the porch and the dog would size it up, take off, and come back with a coon whose skin would make a perfect fit for the board. One day he was busy outside and he heard that dog give a sort of bewildered yelp and then saw him take off to the woods. That dog hasn't come back yet—he is still trying to find a coon big enough for the out sized ironing board Lum's wife left on the porch after she finished her work!

So when William Akers came home and saw the ironing board on the porch he knew why he had to wait three hours for his coon dog to find that big coon.

Curious Jar Lid

Stanley Loudermilk has an unusual antique jar lid. It had been in a trash pile for at least 50 years. The zinc canning lid is in excellent condition; the odd part is an extension of the glass liner of the lid that is in the shape of a large collar button. This must have been to hold the canned objects beneath the liquid, There are several patent dates in the middle 1800's. If you know any thing about this type canning lid, let us know.

The second section of the Scenic Highway was completed except for eleven posts when weather forced the crews to stop work last week. They were to be installed any day the weather permits. Frank Hill says the temperature was 10 to 15 degrees with the wind blowing 50 to 60 miles an hour last Thursday there.

PIONEERS COME TO THE FORESTS

By DR. ROY B. CLARKSON

[Another in a series based on "TUMULT ON THE MOUNTAINS" by Dr. Roy B. Clarkson—Prepared by West Virginia office of Public Information]

THE FIRST WHITE MEN to settle in this area arrived in the Eastern Panhandle in the early part of the 18th century. It was not until 1748, however, that the first settlement west of the Allegheny Mountains, at Marlinton, Pocahontas County, was made.

The first settlers along the rivers must have been overwhelmed when they contemplated the time and effort it would require to remove the gigantic oaks, walnuts, elms, silver maples, and other trees that thickly covered the rich bottomlands.

When a building site was selected in a new area the first task was to clear away the trees in preparation for the new home and for growing crops. Timber was absolutely worthless in this section of the country at that time.

A few selected trees were utilized in constructing the dwelling; chestnut, black walnut and cherry were used in making "worm" or "rail" fences. The beech, ash, sugar maple and other trees were girdled and later burned or cut and rolled into huge piles and burned.

Enlargement of the farm meant a continuation of this toil, year after year. The very best timber in the state was thus destroyed.

The first dwellings of the settlers were rude affairs, built without the use of any instruments for sawing. All parts of the house—the log walls, the clapboard roofs, the puncheon floors (if such a luxury was obtained) and the furniture—were shaped with the axe, the adz, and the frow.

Later settlers brought with them whip saws which made it possible to saw rough planks for floors, doors, roofs, and furniture. The whip saw was a rude, hand-operated saw with hooked teeth, from five to seven feet long with a handle at each end.

Squared With Axe

The timber intended to be sawed was first squared with a broad axe, and then raised on a scaffold six or seven feet high. Two able-bodied men then took hold of the saw, one standing on top of the log, the other under it, and commenced sawing. The labor was excessively fatiguing and about 100 linear feet of plank or scantling was considered a good day's work for two hands.

An alternate method was to roll the squared log over a pit dug for the purpose. The workman who stood on top of the log and guided the saw along a chalk-line was supposedly the better man and was called the pit-man, a name that later was applied to the wooden beam attaching the saw to the crank of the water-powered sawmill.

Despite their shortcomings the whip saws supplied the needs of early settlers and continued in use in some parts of the state until after 1900.

With the increase in population and the growth of towns an increased demand for lumber made the erection of sawmills a necessity.

It is not known when or where the first sawmill was built and operated in West Virginia. It is probable, however, that there were a few built by the early settlers who occupied the valleys of the Potomac River and its tributaries prior to the year 1755.

The first sawmill west of the Allegheny Mountains was built in 1776 near the town of St. George in Tucker County by John Minear. These first mills were run by waterpower and usually were combined with a grist mill. They utilized a device known as the "sash" or "gate" saw, a name derived from the immense wooden sashes or gates to which the saws were fastened.

In some mills the carriage was "walked" back by stepping on wooden pins extending outward from the circumference of a large wheel connected to the carriage by cogs. The strokes were up and down in vertical fashion and in earlier mills were made at a speed of less than 80 strokes a minute.

Water Power Wasted

In the early water sawmill more power was wasted than was delivered to the sash. Nevertheless, the sash sawmill was a great improvement over the whip saw and allowed two men to cut up to 500 linear feet of lumber in one day with much less back-breaking labor.

Improvements continued to be made in water mills, including the rigging of several saws side by side, so that several boards could be cut at one time.

One of the largest water mills in the state was located on the Great Kanawha River at Kanawha Falls, some two miles below the junction of the New and Gauley rivers.

Here, Maynard A. Cheney's sawmill, powered by water through a rock-cut flume from the 22-foot high falls, attained 225 horsepower. It had a daily capacity of from 30,000 to 40,000 feet.

Hundreds of mills operated throughout the state during the 19th century. As late as 1860, seven-eighths of the lumber sawed in the state was sawed by water power.

While lumbering was beginning to take its toll on the forests of the state, other practices of the settlers were reducing thousands of acres of virgin forest land to farms, pastures, or wastelands. One of the most destructive practices previous to the Civil War was the clearing of large tracts of land, by a system known as "hacking," for the purpose of providing pasture for cattle.

This process including "girdling" all of the best timber on the land and leaving it to die. In a few years the tract would be burned over, and this usually was all that was necessary to make conditions favorable for a natural growth of bluegrass which soon occupied the land. Hundreds of other acres, in limestone sections, burned over in this manner, were revegetated with bracken fern which covers them yet today.

Deaths

Mrs. Eva Jane Carpenter

Mrs. Eva Jane Carpenter, 52, of Maidsville, died Wednesday, August 21, 1968, in the Monongalia General Hospital, following a long illness. She was born June 7, 1916, at Frametown, a daughter of the late Adam and Myrtle Collins Fluharty.

Survivors include her husband, Charles C. (Red) Carpenter; two sons, Charles L. Carpenter, Seattle, Washington, and William C. Carpenter, of Auburn, Washington; three sisters, Mrs. Anna Lougrey, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. Opal Biles, of Westover, and Mrs. Lucy Radabaugh, of Masontown; a brother, Bud Fluharty, of Westover; and five grandchildren.

Funeral services were held Saturday at Chapel of Prayer, Fred Jenkins Funeral Home, Morgantown. Additional services were held Sunday afternoon at the Dunmore Methodist Church with Rev. Travis C. Wells, Jr., in charge, with burial in the Dunmore Cemetery.

To know her was to love her and until the very end
Her thoughts were of others and the welfare of her friends
Her work on earth is over
Her sorrows here are done
She bore her suffering to the last with a smile for everyone

Gone to rest, but sadly missed by sister-in-law, Ida Carpenter, relatives and friends.

Drilling for a well will probably be done within the next week. It is hoped ground can be broken soon after the bonds are sold.

Robert Jackson, Route 1, Marlinton, is a new teacher at Huntersville. He and Miss Wilma Carr are teaching the fifth and sixth grades at Huntersville, which will be part of Marlinton Graded School. Mr. Jackson, the son of Mrs. Lucy Jackson, graduated from Glenville College in May.

The following delegates from Pocahontas County attended the Republican State Convention at the Civic Center in Charleston, August 14th:

Adolph Cooper, Bill Harper, Tom Moore, Doug Dunbrack, Jim Dean, Osborn Buchannon, Dottie Kellison, Bee Gladwell, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Stanley, and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bamrick.

Last week a prisoner in the Monterey Jail pretended to be sick and when the jailer's wife brought him some medicine, he knocked her in the head and escaped. He stole a truck, which stopped below Frost, and he tampered with the ignition wires on several cars and trucks before finding a spare set of keys in the glove compartment of Rebecca Sharp's new Mustang. Saturday the car was found abandoned in Indiana, and returned with 2000 miles registered and a spare tire gone, but the prisoner has not been apprehended.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Jack, Eddie Gibson, and Helen Oscar, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Miller spent a few days in Richmond, Indiana. This is the latter's first time home in twelve years.

Deaths

Mrs. Moser Alexander

Mrs. Mattie Jordan Alexander, 82, died at St. Margaret Hospital in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on Friday, August 16, 1968. She had been in ill health the past three years.

Born August 22, 1885, at Huntersville, she was the daughter of the late Aaron and Jennie Jordan.

She was first married to William Reynolds, who died about 1924. To this union were born two children, James William Reynolds who died in 1951, and Mrs. Eva Primyon, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. On April 23, 1934, she was married to Moser Alexander who, with two brothers, Arthur Lee Jordan, of Denmar, and John Andrew Jordan, of Marlinton, also survive her.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Rising Mount Zion Baptist Church, of which she was a member, by the Rev. R. L. Petty. Burial was in the family cemetery between Huntersville and Minnehaha Springs.

Forestry Money

The twelve West Virginia counties containing National Forest land have received $216,998 from the U.S. Treasury. This sum represents 25 per cent of the fiscal year 1968 income of the Monongahela National Forest and the portions of the George Washington and Jefferson National Forests which are located in West Virginia. Each year 25 per cent of the income from these Federal lands is paid to the counties in lieu of taxes.

The $216,998.52 is allocated to the counties in proportion to the area of National Forest land in each county:

Grant	$ 3,751.44
Greenbrier	25,708.82
Hampshire	187.80
Hardy	3,432 00
Monroe	434.40
Nicholas	6,048.49
Pendleton	19,160 21
Pocahontas	72,285.74
Preston	1,000.54
Randolph	44 356.50
Tucker	23,988.54
Webster	16,644.04
	$216,998.52

The total area in the three National Forests in West Virginia is 920,117 acres with the great bulk of it in the 814,600 acre Monongahela National Forest which is entirely in West Virginia.

The amount paid to the West Virginia counties is 23.6 cents per acre. This is 10 per cent more than last year and will be spent by counties for roads and schools.

Attempted Arson

Another frightening incident was discovered Tuesday morning at Hillsboro High School where somebody had pulled off a screen, left the window raised about six inches, and set fire to some oil-like substance on rags in the band room. Fortunately it burned itself out and did very little damage but it could have been another building lost. The State Police and the State Fire Marshal were investigating Tuesday but no official statement was made. About two years ago a similar attempt was made in the Hillsboro Graded School.

The Battalion, a direct support artillery unit, is made up of five batteries, a Headquarters Battery, three 105mm Howitzer Batteries each armed with six Howitzers and one 4.2" Mortar Howtar Battery. Normal complement is 52 officers and 630 enlisted marines.

Lieutenant Colonel Byrd recently returned from Vietnam where he served as Executive Officer, 1st Battalion, 11th Marine and Fire Support Coordinator for the 1st Marine Division. He was the Fire Support Coordinator for the 2nd Marine Division prior to assuming cammand of the 3rd Battalion.

Colonel Byrd is authorized to wear the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V", The Presidential Unit Citation, Marine Corps Expeditionary Medal, American Campaign Medal, European-African Middle Eastern Campaign Medal, World War II Victory Medal, Navy Occupation Service Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Armed Forces Reserve Medal, Vietnam Service Medal and Vietnam Expeditionary Medal.

He and his wife, the former Opal Gay, reside in MOQ 2621 with their four children, Ann, a sophomore at Alderson-Broaddus College, Rick, a rising senior at Camp Lejeune High School, and Jackie Sue and Doug, eighth and sixth grades respectively.

the County Extension Office or your fertilizer dealer.

The lime and fertilizer should be worked into the soil prior to seeding. Use only high quality seed of recommended varieties and mixtures, Jett advises. For even distribution mix the seed with sand or corn meal, then run the seeder in two directions.

Several publications relative to the preparation and seeding of new lawns are available free at the County Extension Office. Call or write for this information.

Mrs. James W. Carpenter, of Dunmore, and Mrs. Judy Schriner and son, of Hampton, Virginia, spent Labor Day weekend touring Washington, D. C. and other points of interest. They visited the graves of John F. and Robert Kennedy in Arlington, Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Gay, of Marlinton, Mrs. Curtis Sharp and daughters, Melva and Loretta, visited their daughter and sister and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stafford and daughter, Barbara, in Philippi, last week; they were accompanied by Mrs. Rosa Waugh; while there Mr. Gay went to the Philippi hospital for a checkup.

Mrs. Florence McNeel and her son, John, spent the weekend with her other son, William McNeel. John also visited Camp Nimrod, near Millboro Springs, Virginia; he returned Monday as a second year student at Louisville Seminary.

Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Weiford and son and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Weiford, Jr., of Baltimore, Maryland, visited relatives in Marlinton, this weekend, and other relatives and friends in Pocahontas County.

and Location G, Bluestone Lake," Colonel Bicher said.

An essential component of the study has been an extensive public involvement program. Project fact sheets were mailed to more than 24,000 families in the study areas. Informal meetings were held in each study area and a formal public meeting was held in a central location to provide public information and to obtain comments and views.

The study process to date has resulted in the following findings regarding the next stage of the study:

—An evaluation of the potential for developing conventional hydroelectric generating facilities at Sutton, Summersville and Bluestone Dams will be made in greater detail.

—The potential for a Local Protection Project at Marlinton will be evaluated in greater detail if municipal and county officials so desire.

—The potential for pumped-storage hydroelectric generating facilities adjacent to Bluestone Lake will be evaluated in greater detail. This evaluation will include an assessment of environmental, social and economic impacts.

—Further detailed evaluations of pumped-storage hydroelectric power at Locations A, B, C, and E are not recommended at this time. Information on these locations will be presented in a report to be used as reference data should the energy situation and national priorities require further analysis at some future time.

Colonel Bicher pointed out that the detailed studies of the measures selected for the next stage of the planning study will require about two years to complete and that a feasibility report should be complete in late 1979.

Strange Event

I have always heard stories about ghosts on Droop Mountain but have never believed them until last week when my husband and sister and I were cutting wood for winter, at the Baber property on the Park road. My husband was cutting down a dead tree next to the line fence when we saw what appeared to be a soldier standing not too far from us. He had his right hand over his heart and he seemed to make a moaning sound like he was suffering. We ran to the car and watched from a distance. It wandered around and the last time we saw it it went out of sight toward Caesar Mountain. We asked between us but no one could remember seeing a face. There was a full moon that night. My father has always told us there was a soldier's grave close there. You better believe we never stayed around to see if it came back. This was an experience we'll never forget. If anyone ever tells you they have seen ghosts on or around Droop Mountain State Park, you had better believe it.

Louise McNeill to Speak Author's Day

The Pearl S. Buck Birthplace Foundation in Hillsboro is pleased to announce that Dr. Louise McNeill Pease will be guest speaker for this year's Author's Day on August 6, 1977, 1:30 p. m., at the Stulting Place.

Dr. Pease received her Ph. D. from West Virginia University in 1959, earning the bachelor's degree from Concord College in 1936 and her masters from Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, 1938; soon after she married Roger W. Pease.

Her literary works, which have focused around the soul of West Virginia, have merited her numerous recognitions, most recently being chosen along with Governor John D. Rockefeller, IV, as son and daughter of the year by the West Virginia Society of Washington, D. C.

The program will be open to the public and there will be no charge for the program. Refreshments will be served immediately following.

C&O

On the front page we have a notice about the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the application by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway to abandon their Greenbrier line from North Caldwell to Durbin. This hearing will begin on Monday, August 15, at Marlinton. A week has been scheduled by the ICC for this hearing but it is doubtful that more than two or maybe three days will be necessary. For this reason it is recommended that anyone wishing to testify should be at the hearing on the first day.

If this hearing is conducted in the usual way for such hearings, the order of wit-should be at the hearing on the first day.

If this hearing is conducted in the usual way for such hearings, the order of witnesses will probably be as follows: The railroad will present its case first. They will have four or five people involved; someone with knowledge of the costs and revenues involved with this line, personnel from the operating and traffic departments of the railroad, and a witness from the engineering staff to discuss maintenance of the line. After the C&O people have testified and been cross examined, a representative from the W. Va. Railroad Maintenance Authority will present the state's point of view on the abandonment. He will be followed by those making prepared, formal protests.

sentative from the W. Va. Railroad Maintenance Authority will present the state's point of view on the abandonment. He will be followed by those making prepared, formal protests. At the end, time is usually allowed for informal, personal type protests. The hearings are conducted very much like a court proceeding but without as strict rules of evidence.

We have received up to date traffic, costs, and revenue figures which will be used by the C&O to justify their request to abandon and this information paints a dismal picture for the possible future of the line.

These figures showed that traffic to and from points on the line to be abandoned (Cass and Mar-

These figures showed that traffic to and from points on the line to be abandoned (Cass and Marlinton) dropped to 61 cars in 1976 compared with 511 in 1973, 278 in 1974, and 148 in 1975. Traffic to and from Durbin-Bartow section which is not to be abandoned has also declined but not as badly—773 cars in 1973 down to 583 last year. The Railroad states that their 1976 deficit on operating the line was $328,200. Put in another way this comes to $5,380.33 per car for each of the 61 cars. The loss figure is based on revenues of $31,806, branch line costs of $348,565, and costs of $11,441 prorated to the line from overall system operating costs. The C&O estimates that the net salvage value of the rail and other materials on the line is $2,530,689.

In a document called a "reroute analysis" the Railroad claims to prove that the benefit of the value of the rail and other materials on the line is $2,530,689.

In a document called a "reroute analysis" the Railroad claims to prove that the benefit of the abandonment to the Chessie System (C&O, Baltimore & Ohio Railway, and Western Maryland Railway) will be a $651,665 increase in the net systems operating income.

We have detailed information on these figures which we would be happy to share with anyone who wishes to study it.

A check on the progress of plans for the new building for Hanover Tuesday revealed that the money for site preparation has been approved but the application to EDA had to be reprocessed, which is being done. By request of the State Industrial Authority—who will see that the additional money is available—the plans are being changed to raise the level of the area about three and a half feet to protect it against a one-hundred-year flood projection. The Pocahontas County Supervisors of the Greenbrier Valley Soil Conservation District have announced the selection of Dale Armstrong as the Conservation Farmer for 1977. He will be in competition later this month with Greenbrier and Monroe County Conservation farmers for District honors and consideration for the State Conservation Farmer of the Year award.

farm is an unusual type of operation for Pocahontas County. It is a grassland operation used entirely for pasture except for 29 acres of woodland. Yearling steers are purchased in the spring and sold the following fall. No livestock is carried over the winter.

All of the 138 acres of pasture have been treated at least once in the past four years. Some was treated with a tractor spreader, some by aerial fertilization and some by hand. All treatment is based on soil test recommendations. The areas that are accessible to farm machinery have been treated several times during this period.

This year, even with all the dry weather, this farm is providing adequate grazing for 101 yearling steers. In more favorable growing seasons Mr. Armstrong has also been able to put up some hay. In addition to liberal fertilization, part of the credit for his production level must be given to his pasture rotation system.

In addition to his stock truck, the entire line of equipment used to operate this farm consists of one small tractor with ments. This includes improving his livestock, watering and salting facilities, cutting brush and weeds, removing, replacing and rearranging fences and in general improving the efficiency and appearance of his farm.

Dale Armstrong has been a Cooperator with the Greenbrier Valley Soil Conservation District since 1973 and has a conservation plan. He uses the Agriculture Conservation Program of the Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service and consults regularly with the Cooperative Extension Service.

Award

Arlie B. White, of Marlinton, has been selected to receive the annual Penn's Woods Wild Turkey Restoration Award for 1977. This award is presented to turkey research and technical workers for outstanding performance in the field of wild turkey restoration.

The award is sponsored and will be presented by Penn's Woods Products, Inc., of Delmont, Pennsylvania. In addition to a plaque, a check for $250 is also being given to Mr. White as part of the award. The award reads in part: "Although you experienced many lonely hours and hard work in and around the turkey blind, it should be comforting to know that many dedicated turkey hunters and conservationists appreciate your efforts. Again, Arlie, congratulations. You have done a great service for future generations."

Catholic Pastor Appointed

Effective this week, July 19, the Most Reverend Joseph H. Hodges, Bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston, has appointed Father Roy A. Lombard Pastor of Pocahontas County.

Efforts have been started to erect a Church-Hall-Rectory combination building on the recently purchased lot at the corner of Tenth Avenue and Route 39 in Marlinton.

For the present, however, Father Lombard will reside in St. Mark Catholic Church in Bartow.

White Pine Camp Meeting

The White Pine Camp Meeting of Arbovale will hold its 39th encampment July 14—24

Elaborate plans, the greatest in the camp's 39 years, have been completed. This is in keeping with the camp's growing attendance. More and more people are planning to spend all or part of their vacations at the camp. Trailer, camper and cottage accommodations are available.

A total of 8 are on the Camp's list of evangelists, singers, children's workers and Bible teachers. This does not include the traveling group of eight men musicians who have visited the camp two days for the past two years. This is a group worth driving a long distance to hear. They come by a large Greyhound bus and spend Saturday and Sunday, July 16 and 17 at the camp. Don't miss the greatest men's group ever to visit the camp.

Bertolet and Dr. Ellsworth Nothstene, are nationally known ministers very successful in their field. The song leader, Rev. Fred Shuss, is well known and this will be a return trip for him to the Arbovale camp.

The Shindledeckers are full-time pastors and are on the Board of the camp and have been very successful in Christian and Children's work at camps and pastorates.

The Harold Murrays are the youth workers again this year and they have a very effective program. Both of the Murrays are very active Church workers and come to the camp with a fine program.

Dr. Henry Shilling, Freeport, Pennsylvania, is the president of Transylvania Bible School and president of the camp. This is his seventh year to serve as Bible teacher for the camp. He brings some of the Transylvania students to camp each year.

This is White's greatest effort for a fine camp. Plan to attend. Services are daily 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. with an afternoon Bible study at 4 p. m.

Golden Anniversary

On Sunday, July 10, from 2 to 5 p. m., the children of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil B. Harris, Sr., will hold an open house in Green Bank in honor of their parents' Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Marcel Keener and Virgil Harris were married on October 1, 1927, in Cowen. They have five children, George, Virgil, Nancy, Jenny, and John, and fourteen grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris began a 46 year long career in education in Normantown in 1924. They both taught in the Braxton County Schools and Mr. Harris served as superintendent of Braxton County Schools until they moved to Pocahontas County in 1945. Mrs. Harris was teacher and principal of Dunmore School and a first grade teacher at Cass and Mr. Harris was principal of the Green Bank schools until their retirement in 1970.

Friends and relatives are cordially invited to share this happy occasion of a Golden Wedding Anniversary with Virgil, Macel, and their children on July 10. The family requests that gifts please be omitted.

Pioneer Days Play

On Friday, July 8, of Pioneer Days the Greenbrier Valley Theatre will present "Stop the World, I Want to Get Off," by Leslie Bricusse and Anthony Newley, at the Marlinton Methodist Church.

Two performances - 8 pm, $2 and 8:30 pm, $3.

Box office - Pocahontas Pharmacy - open June 27 - July 8, 10 am to 2 pm

Season tickets to the Greenbrier Theatre will be honored for those living in the County but must be checked for seats at the Box Office. All seats reserved.

SOCIAL SECURITY

A Social Security representative will be at the Court House at 10 am on the first and third Thursdays of each month in first floor conference room and at the Pine Grove - Arbovale Community Center on the first Wednesday of each month at 10:30 am.

The Fire Fee covers the same services for all subscribers—in or out of Town. Services at no charge are fire calls and ambulance transports to the Pocahontas Memorial Hospital. For transports to other hospitals the following rates apply to fire fee subscribers with rates for non-subscribers in parentheses: To Elkins or Clifton charge $95 ($125). To Fairlea or Richwood $90 ($90).

This topic has been bored long and hard so I be brief. It is way past to stop the arguing on fee and for everyone to their share in supporting the vital fire and ambulance service that this fee is to finance. For the services provided, the fee is cheap. At $15 for a resident it comes to a huge total of 4.11 cents per day. Anyone thinks the fire fee expensive wait until you have your first fire insurance bill after the Fire Department ceases to exist (provided, of course, you can get insurance). Or, better, think of the feeling you will have if you call for an ambulance needed by a loved one only to be told that the service is no longer functioning due to lack of funds.

Think about it and support your Fire Department!

C & O

A public meeting was held last Thursday to discuss the proposed abandonment of the North Caldwell to Durbin portion of the Greenbrier branch line of the C&O. The meeting was called by the West Virginia Railway Maintenance Authority (RMA), the agency responsible for rail transportation planning within the state and represents the state in railroad abandonment cases such as the present one affecting the Greenbrier line. The meeting was conducted by John Killoran, Executive Director of the RMA, along with Fred Wengenroth of the RMA and John Snyder from the Office of Economic and Community Development (former Department of Commerce).

About 30 shippers, government officials and interested citizens were in attendance and a wide range of topics concerning the line and the upcoming Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) hearings on the abandonment were discussed.

Mr. Killoran reviewed the history of the line and the results of a recent study the right-of-way will be maintained so that track can be easily replaced should the need arise. The present thinking is to give the Department of Natural Resources a recreation easement on the right-of-way for a hiking trail. As for C&O property in Marlinton, the Railroad plans to retain the land between 8th and 9th Streets to the west of the right-of -way and what they own north of 8th Street east of the right-of-way. The right-of-way and other property will go to the State. The RMA plans to donate the station and adjacent property to the town.

Many questions were raised during the meetings in addition to the above. A question was asked about the possibility of a scenic railroad operation along the Greenbrier and it was explained that this had been tried by a Greenbrier County Group in the early 70's for several years.

The possible use of the line by Vepco for their dam construction project in Virginia was mentioned. Mr. Killoran stated that the RMA had contacted Vepco officials and they had informed him that the Droop Tunnel prevents them from using the line to bring in heavy and oversized equipment as they thought might be possible several years ago.

Cal and Hunter Sharp, of Newberry South Carolina, are visiting their father, Dr. John C. Sharp, in Renick for two months.

Scholarship

The first annual Charles E. Moore Scholarship award has been presented to Miss Peggy Hovatter, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hovatter, of Arbovale. The recent graduate of Pocahontas County High School plans to attend Fairmont State College and major in elementary education. While in high school, Miss Hovatter was actively involved in cheerleading, student council, FHA, Pep Club, Band, and as a contestant in the Junior Miss Pageant.

The Charles E. Moore scholarship was started this year by the Pocahontas County High School Class of 1978 and their faculty sponsors in recognition of Moore's long years of service to education in Pocahontas County. The award will annually be presented to a senior planning to major in education in college.

Do I Want to Go Home

By Harry E. Duncan

Price $1.95

In this slim volume Mr. Duncan shares with his readers his memories of Cass, Spruce and Slatyfork in the 1920s, 1930s and 1940s. Many county residents will want to read his book because they too experienced these times and happenings and will recognize many of the people he speaks of. But the book has an appeal too, for newcomers and visitors to the County who have only seen the Cass of the 1970s, teeming with tourists by day and yet deserted after the last train has come off the mountain. Mr. Duncan answers their often-asked day and yet deserted after the last train has come off the mountain. Mr. Duncan answers their often-asked question, "But what was Cass like in its boom time?" He evokes the bustling, prosperous lumber town of the 1920s with a population of over 2000 people. He describes the benevolent dictatorship and its rigid hierarchy that were inherent in the "company town," yet his personal anecdotes show it to be a good place for a child to grow up in.

School Construction

Construction activity on the three new classroom buildings for Pocahontas County Schools has gotten well under way.

At Green Bank the concrete for the footers was poured on Monday. At Hillsboro, demolition of the old elementary school building started this week. The photos showing this building were taken on Sunday and Tuesday. At Marlinton the temporary classrooms in the construction area are being moved. Work on the foundations at Hillsboro and Marlinton is scheduled to begin next week.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced that public hearings on the future of the railroad line along the Greenbrier River will be held on July 25, 1977, at Marlinton. The 92 mile Chesapeake and Ohio Railway branch line has been under abandonment application before the federal agency since early 1975.

The short announcement by the I. C. C. noted that the hearing would begin at 9:30 a. m., but said that the location of the meeting would be announced at a by the I. C. C. noted that the hearing would begin at 9:30 a. m., but said that the location of the meeting would be announced at a later time.

Meanwhile, the West Virginia Railroad Maintenance Authority (RMA), a state agency, also announced that a preliminary public meeting and information session would also be held in Marlinton. This meeting, which will begin at 8:00 p. m. on Thursday, June 23, will be held in the Marlinton Municipal Building at Marlinton.

"The purpose of the preliminary state meeting is to inform the general

"The purpose of the preliminary state meeting is to inform the general public, shippers, local government officials, and other interested parties," said John Killoran, RMA Executive Director. "Our agency is charged by both federal and state laws with determining the best future course of the line. Our especial interest is assuring the best future need for the line while keeping the public costs to the lowest possible level," he continued.

The RMA also announced that its planning coordinator, Fred Wengen-

The RMA also announced that its planning coordinator, Fred Wengenroth, is attempting to meet personally with each shipper and community leader this week in order to determine the opinions of the users of the branch and citizens of the area. "We will also advise these persons on the methods used in I. C. C. formal hearings and of the elements of evidence which are used," Killoran said. "We will also make our findings available to the public," he continued.

able to the public," he continued.

For the past year, the RMA has studied the history of rail service on the line, which runs from North Caldwell to Durbin. In addition, a national consulting firm assisting with the writing of the West Virginia state rail plan has completed an extensive study of the line and alternatives for its future use.

Based on 1975 traffic data and costs, the RMA said that only 148 cars of freight were delivered or loaded on the branch line. When costs were figured on the public subsidy of continued service on the rail-

Based on 1975 traffic data and costs, the RMA said that only 148 cars of freight were delivered or loaded on the branch line. When costs were figured on the public subsidy of continued service on the railroad (using a federally-required formula), it was found that each car would require $3,500 in public subsidy. The traffic on the line has declined further since 1975, and costs have risen, according to the state planning study.

RMA intends to offer a suggested conclusion to the abandonment based on retention of necessary tracks, preservation of rights of way for public purposes, and insuring that a route for rail service is available for future need, authority planners stated. This strategy will be finally adopted after the community interviews and the preliminary public meeting in Marlinton are completed.

The Authority-Director said he recently learned that the C & O might request a delay of from two to four weeks in the I. C. C.

said he recently learned that the C & O might request a delay of from two to four weeks in the I. C. C. Marlinton hearing. "While the decision is strictly up to the Judge on such a delay, the authority has advised the commission that such a limited delay would be acceptable," Killoran said, "with the understanding that the delay is being requested in order to have the latest railroad cost figures and other data available for public use."

Early Settlers on the Greenbrier River and its Watershed

By J. T. McAllister, Hot Springs 1914

In the preparation of some historical work I have been fortunate enough to secure a list of the surveys which were made of lands in this territory, now covered by Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Monroe Counties. Deeming the information of some interest to the readers of your paper, I am enclosing a copy of it, so that if you care to publish it you may do so. Some of the localities referred to in the surveys are not well known to me. I should be glad to have any additional notes which your readers may have which

Most of these surveys were made early in 1774. If, as was the case in all probability, these parties were then living on these lands it furnishes a very valuable list of men, most if not all of whom must have taken part in the Revolutionary Wars, beginning with the Battle of Point Pleasant.

911 mapping ordinance to be revised

At the County Commission meeting on Tuesday it was decided to make some revisions to the proposed 911 Addressing and Mapping Ordinance following the two public hearings on the issue. It was noted that there were a number of good suggestions for fine tuning the ordinance made at the hearings.

The revised ordinance will be on the agenda at the Commission's March 15 for its first reading. Another public hearing will be have to be held for the issue can come up for approval on the second reading.

it. As a politician, one has to expect to be in the public eye and expect public challenges. If those challenges have no merit, the governmental system and the public will see that.

What concerns me is the growing number of people who are vocally challenging the editors of The Pocahontas Times to silence Mr. Alderman. I feel that The Pocahontas Times is handling the challenge of presenting both sides of the issues very well.

Remember, these are public challenges against public officials by a private citizen and should not be kept quiet. They should be presented in a public should be presented in a public forum for everyone to read and decide upon.

Attempting to silence Mr. Alderman or any citizen for that matter by not printing his letters or allowing him to speak freely on radio programs would be as much of an outrage as no longer printing the county commission reports or refusing our public officials the right to speak in print on on the air.

Everyone who thinks Mr. Alderman needs to be silenced has the right to that opinion and has the right to say so in print. I praise the editors of The Pocahontas Times for not bending to the will of the vocal minority or the vocal majority on any issues.

Green Bank girls, Marlinton boys are victorious in county tournaments

by Erin Coleman
Sports Writer

Green Bank and Marlinton Middle Schools matched up for the annual County Basketball Tournament last Tuesday. Both schools could claim victories as the Green Bank Lady Eagles and the Marlinton Copperheads took home trophies.

Fans filled the gym to watch the evening's competition.

The girl's team started off the night.

Green Bank took an early lead in the game as they outscored the Lady Copperheads 8-0 in the first. Marlinton finally got on the board in the second and had soon cut Green Bank's lead to 16-10 going into the half.

Both teams played extremely well in the second half as the Copperheads continued to creep closer to the Eagles.

As the minutes ticked away it looked to be anybody's game, but Green Bank held together to take a 31-28 County Tournament Championship.

Jaenna Burns and Amy Sharp from Marlinton and Kachine Jonese, Erica Arbogast, and Kendra Taylor from Green Bank were named to the All-Tournament Team. Green Bank also was awarded the GPA trophy with a composite of 3.38.

Next, it was Marlinton's turn for a victory as the Copperheads dominated the court the entire game.

By the half, Marlinton had gained a comfortable 28-9 lead. Green Bank struggled against their fast and well-rounded team, but showed intensity and drive as they gave it all they had until the last second.

Marlinton took the 56-26 win and the County Tournament Championship.

Cyrus Bennett, Lucas Faulknier and J.J. Bennett, from Marlinton, and Adam Wright and Dustin Rexrode, of Green Bank, were named to the All-Tournament team. Green Bank was presented its second GPA trophy of the night as the boys won with a composite of 3.31.

Becky and Butch Perry

Rotary honors couple for community service

On February 9, at the Annual Valentine's Day Party, the Rotary members, Honorary members and guests honored local residents 'Butch' and Becky Perry for their outstanding service to the community over past years.

This special evening began with Isabelle McElwee presenting each lady with Valentine's Day Chocolates in memory of her late husband, Charles "Mac" McElwee. Following the Pledge of Allegiance and grace for the meal, the participants enjoyed a buffet dinner of Shrimp Fettuccini, roast pork, vegetables, rolls, coffee, tea, and red velvet cake for dessert.

Special guests were the family of Marvin 'Butch' Perry who was unanimously selected this year to receive the highest honor the club can bestow on a member—The Paul Harris Award for Service Above Self to the community.

Past President and Paul Harris Fellow, Jim Gibb, was the spokesperson for the Paul Harris Fellows (Roy Gibson, Roger Trusler, Ed Stemple and Glen Wade) who jointly presented the Medallion and Certificate of Honor on behalf of the club members.

Becky Perry was made an honorary member of Rotary International in recognition of her outstanding example of the organization's guiding principle of 'Service Above Self.' Following the presentation to 'Butch', the current club president, Luther Crouthamel, presented Becky with a gold and diamond oval pin bearing the Rotary Symbol and a certificate of recognition. In honor of Becky and 'Butch', all the honorary members will be given matching Rotary pins this year.

'Butch' and Becky have been active in the community for many years and were part of the group that worked so hard to obtain the new library for the town. Both have been dedicated and tireless workers for many years, not only for many Rotary Projects accomplished over the past years but also for their church, community and local school. They were always present to work at Rotary Community activities. At the Annual Pancake Supper they were always among those who arrived first and the last to leave after clean up.

Budget time - staff cuts to be made

Groseclose appointed to fill seat on BOE

Jesse Groseclose was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Kermit Friel on the Board of Education at a special Board meeting on Tuesday. The vote was 3 - 1, with Bernard King voting against the motion to appoint Mr. Groseclose.

The Board took the action following interviews with Mr. Groseclose, Emery Grimes, and Richard Johnson. All three are candidates for the Board at the Primary Election in May.

The unexpired term will end on June 30. Mr. Groseclose took the oath of office following his appointment.

The Board of Education met for regular meeting on Monday.

School Superintendent Patrick Law gave the Board a summary of the impact the school system's continuing decline in enrollment and the corresponding reduction in state funding will have on staffing for the 2004-05 school year. The amount of money coming to county school systems under the state school aid formula is based almost entirely on enrollment.

Dr. Law said enrollment was 1505 in the 1997-98 school year and had dropped to 1404 students in 2002-03. This year saw another drop in enrollment, to 1369 students. The number of teachers in 1997-98 was 114 with a decrease to 105 last year. This year began with 104 teachers with an increase to 106 now due to need for additional special education positions.

In order to keep the number of personnel within the number funded by the state aid formula, Dr. Law said ten professional and service positions will need to be cut. He said this number will probably be made up of one position in the central office, 4.5 teaching positions, 3 aide positions, and 1.5 cook positions.

Staff members to be impacted by these cuts have been visited, Dr. Law said.

Dr. Law reported that the Curriculum Committee at the high school has voted in favor of using weighted grades. He said when the school will start using weighted grades and which classes will have them are decisions yet to be made.

The agenda included an item to accept the bid of High Point Construction Company for the PCHS science room renovations and addition. However, Dr. Law

Commission has routine meeting

The County Commission met for a regular meeting on Tuesday of last week. Unlike the other meetings this year, this one was routine, with no one bringing to the attention of the commissioners their shortcomings or those of other county officials.

The Commission decided to make some revisions to the proposed 911 Addressing and Mapping Ordinance following the two public hearings on the issue. It was noted that there were a number of good suggestions for improving the ordinance made at the hearings.

The revised ordinance wil be on the agenda at the Commission's March 15 for its irst reading. Another public heaing will be have to be held forthe issue can come up for approval on its second reading.

Deputy County Clerk Sue Helton reported that Pocahontas Woods has returned $78,85 to the Commission. This is the money allocated to the group from the second year payment to the Commission from the Safe and Secure Rural School Act. The money comes from natural resource sales on federal government land. Most goes to support schools, but a new law that allows school systems to receive a fixed amount each year rat-

Dr. Law reported that the Curriculum Committee at the high school has voted in favor of using weighted grades. He said when the school will start using weighted grades and which classes will have them are decisions yet to be made.

The agenda included an item to accept the bid of High Point Construction Company for the PCHS science room renovations and addition. However, Dr. Law said the bid needs "further study" and took the item off of the agenda.

Four bids have been received for the project. High Point was low with a bid of $1,117,000. The other bids were from Huffman Corporation, $1,138,000, Agsten Construction Company, $1,283,700, and Flint Construction Company, $1,135,915.

Approval was given to increase the cost for adult meals at the schools to $2.25 for breakfast and $3 for lunch, effective April 1. The present charges are $1.85 and $2.50. Roger Trusler explained these increases are required because the cost of preparing these meals has risen to $2.08 and $2.78. The law does not allow the school meal program to subsidize the cost of meals for adults, he said.

A policy on the video and audio recording of Board meetings was approved. Purpose of the policy is to allow for the record-reading. Another public hearing will be have to be held for the issue can come up for approval on its second reading.

Deputy County Clerk Sue Helton reported that Pocahontas Woods has returned $78,856 to the Commission. This is the money allocated to the group from the second year payment to the Commission from the Safe and Secure Rural School Act. The money comes from natural resource sales on federal government land. Most goes to support schools, but a new law that allows school systems to receive a fixed amount each year rather than a variable amount based on each year's income provides a small amount of money to county commissions. The commission's money can be used in a limited number of ways; including forest related educational opportunities. Based on this, the Commission has granted its money to Pocahontas Woods for its after school forestry programs.

The Commission had Pocahontas Woods return the second year payment after a question was raised about whether a public comment period had been provided for the second year funds.

A public comment period for this money will be set at Trailer can stay on Varner property

Durbin Council to form ordinance committee

by Jason Bauserman
Contributing Writer

Durbin's new mayor was greeted by standing-room-only town council meeting Monday night.

Mayor Mike Vance set the rules for the heavily attended meeting early on, telling the audience they would "conduct [themselves] as ladies and gentlemen."

"No excessive talking or you will be considered out of order," Vance further warned.

Apparently the crowd gathered to discuss the controversial trailer permit granted to Traci Douglas-Rexrode for location on a lot owned by Kenneth "Buster" Varner.

In a letter to the editor on February 19, Douglas-Rexrode explained each complaint about her trailer site.

She also pointed out that the ordinance states, "No mobile unit will be permitted in the business area."

Douglas-Rexrode said the term "unit" is specifically used in the ordinance and not the word "home." Further, "business district" is specified by "the" instead of "a."

Council agreed the ordinance was confusing and that a new ordinance should be written.

Council member John Riffe made a motion to form a committee to review and discuss town ordinances, which passed. Vance, Riffe, former mayor Paula Dilley, councilmembers Tom Kinder and Donald Peck, and residents Frank Proud and John West were appointed to the committee.

The council decided to return two unopened bid packages to engineering firms because the legal advertisement was placed without approval of council in a meeting. Riffe noted he was supposed to speak with other organizations before the ad was placed.

Bill Grimes suggested the bid packages be returned unopened with an explanation.

Council voted to readvertise for bids with specific information.

In other business:

•Vance said he had a past due bill left on his desk for the Environmental Protection Agency for $850 for a permit to dump into the river from the lagoon.

•Treasurer Sandy Varner announced the final levy and estimate budget is due in Charleston by March 28. Council will call a special meeting to finalize the budget.

•Council wants a copy of the town charter, which may be found at the court house in Marlinton.

•Vance said he would contact Sheriff Bob Alkire about a COPS grant for a town policeman.

•Francine Lambert is the new town recorder. She replaces Sandy Varner, who resigned.

•Proud spoke to the council about the goals of the newly-formed Upper Pocahontas Community Cooperative, a non-profit group designed to work for the town for fundraisers the town could not sponsor. The UPCC would donate its proceeds to the town coffers, Proud said.

Proud said the UPCC recently received a $20,000 grant from the Catholic Campaign for Human Development. That money will be designated for the town sewer project.

Deputy County Clerk [illegible] Helton reported that Pocahontas Woods has returned $78,858 to the Commission. computer at the end of each day till he is finished. I have been told that there are about 600 miles of roads in the county. Currently, he is driving them anyway. With this system a more accurate knowledge of everyone's home would be achieved, no roads have to be renamed, the postal service need not be involved, no threats to citizens have to be made, nor monthly costs imposed and no new liabilities have to be created.

I would strongly urge the County Commission to immediately halt the activities it has already begun. The carrot is not as sweet and tasty as you think and the cart you are pulling is not loaded with hay, but explosives.

Dear Editor:

Can the West Virginia Legislature go back to the previously passed Tax Increment Financing (TIF) Act and customize both ethical and other key provisions to fit Snowshoe Mountain Resort's corporate and legislative needs in the form of House Bill 4624, overriding the objections of the local community and circumventing the West Virginia Ethics Commission's opinions?

House Bill 4624 would amend the impediments of those pesky conflict of interest provisions in the recently passed TIF legislation that, for instance, prohibits Commissioner Reta Griffith from voting on the Snowshoe TIF project located where her husband is employed and also prohibits Commission President Joel Callison, who is part owner of a condominium at Snowshoe and other property at the ski resort, from voting. And further, as reported by The Charleston Gazette on March 3, this amendment (HB 4624) would legislatively "remove a provision that requires commissioners or other government officials to report what property they own within a TIF district. [Brian] Helmick said the requirement was unnecessary."

Are ethics really "necessary" in the State of West Virginia, or is this scenario exactly why ethics provisions are part of the original TIF legislation? And, by the way, is this TIF a form of corporate welfare for Snowshoe, subsidiary of a foreign corporation, Intrawest (NYSE), with 2003 annual revenues of $1.6 billion that the taxpayers of West Virginia will be asked to subsidize in the end through higher taxes? After all, who is going to pay for the $25 million revenue shortfall to the state school funding created by this TIF for a resort? And is this only the beginning of the TIF tax benefits to this billion-dollar corporation's asset Snowshoe at the expense of public education?

Is it ethical, legal, or for that matter, a conflict of interest in West Virginia for a father—in this case, Walt Helmick, Senate Finance Chairman—to advise and consent on House Bill 4624, already by the House and now pending in the Senate, which may directly benefit his son, Brian Helmick, a "bond lawyer" for Jackson Kelly and lobbyist for the Snowshoe Mountain Corporation and its TIF proposal?

Will the Helmick family be allowed to use the West Virginia Legislature to rewrite the legislative provisions and ethical safeguards of the TIF Amendment voted for by the people?

If the Helmicks have no conflicts of interest, isn't it nice to know there's a family in the West Virginia Legislature that can customize the ethics to fit your legislative and corporate needs?

Perhaps, the impending vote this week on HB 4624 will answer these questions for the citizens and taxpayers of West Virginia.

Urge your Senator to vote "no" to this special interest law stripped bare of ethical consideration. Let Snowshoe, Intrawest's second most profitable resort, pay its own way like every other hardworking taxpayer in West Virginia.

The vote is this week. Contact your legislators now or pay later.

Genealogy group to meet

The McClintic Library will host the first area genealogy group meeting on Tuesday, March 16, at 6 p.m.

The new group will be dedicated to furthering genealogy research in Pocahontas County.

"We are very fortunate here in the county that we have resources such as those found in the Heritage Room of the library," said Nancy Smithson, library assistant director. "People from all over the country write the library wanting information on their ancestors."

The group was the brain child of Nancy Smithson and Gail Hyer. Both women boast a long line of ancestors in Pocahontas County.

Some anticipated projects of the group include indexing the genealogy and history works of the Heritage Room, assisting the web master of the Roots web site with county information and family history, an information and look-up system for researchers outside of the local area, an education effort to assist researchers who travel into the county to gather information.

A long term project the group hopes to accomplish is the indexing of names and events from the microfilmed versions of the Pocahontas Times newspapers which are in the library's Heritage Room.

With the advent of the Internet, people can easily find some basic information about their ancestors from popular genealogy sites. Further delving into the family often times requires researchers to make trips to the county to verify information through records in the courthouse. Cemetery searches and exploration are also vital in confirming family history.

Allen Johnson, Executive Director of the Marlinton Library, stated, "We will support their efforts in any way we can. We are thrilled to see this surge of people wanting to know more of their wonderful Pocahontas County family."

For further information about the group or about local genealogy contact Nancy Smithson at the McClintic Library at 799-6000 or Gail Hyer at 799-6756.

Deaths

Douglas Dunbrack

George Douglas Dunbrack, age 62, of Marlinton, died Tuesday, March 16, 2004, at Raleigh General Hospital, Beckley. He had been hospitalized since Thursday after complications developed in his treatment for cancer.

Mr. Dunbrack was the present Mayor of the Town of Marlinton, being first elected to that position in 1981, and had served as Director of Pioneer Days for about thirty years. He was a member of Rotary and Moose. Active throughout the state, he was a member of the Municipal League, served on the Board of Region IV Development Council, was a Director of First Citizens Bank, and had businesses of Dunham and Style Light.

The son of the late Winters and Virginia Reynolds Dunbrack, he was born at Campbelltown February 3, 1942. He was married to the late Donna Jean Bickford Dunbrack.

Surviving him are a daughter Addie Dunbrack Pennington of Barboursville; three stepgrandchildren; a brother, Tom Dunbrack, of Marlinton; and three sisters, Anita Nelson, of Marlinton, Phyllis Jackson, of Charlottesville, Virginia, and Linda Sue Vickery, of Valdosta, Georgia.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete at press time.

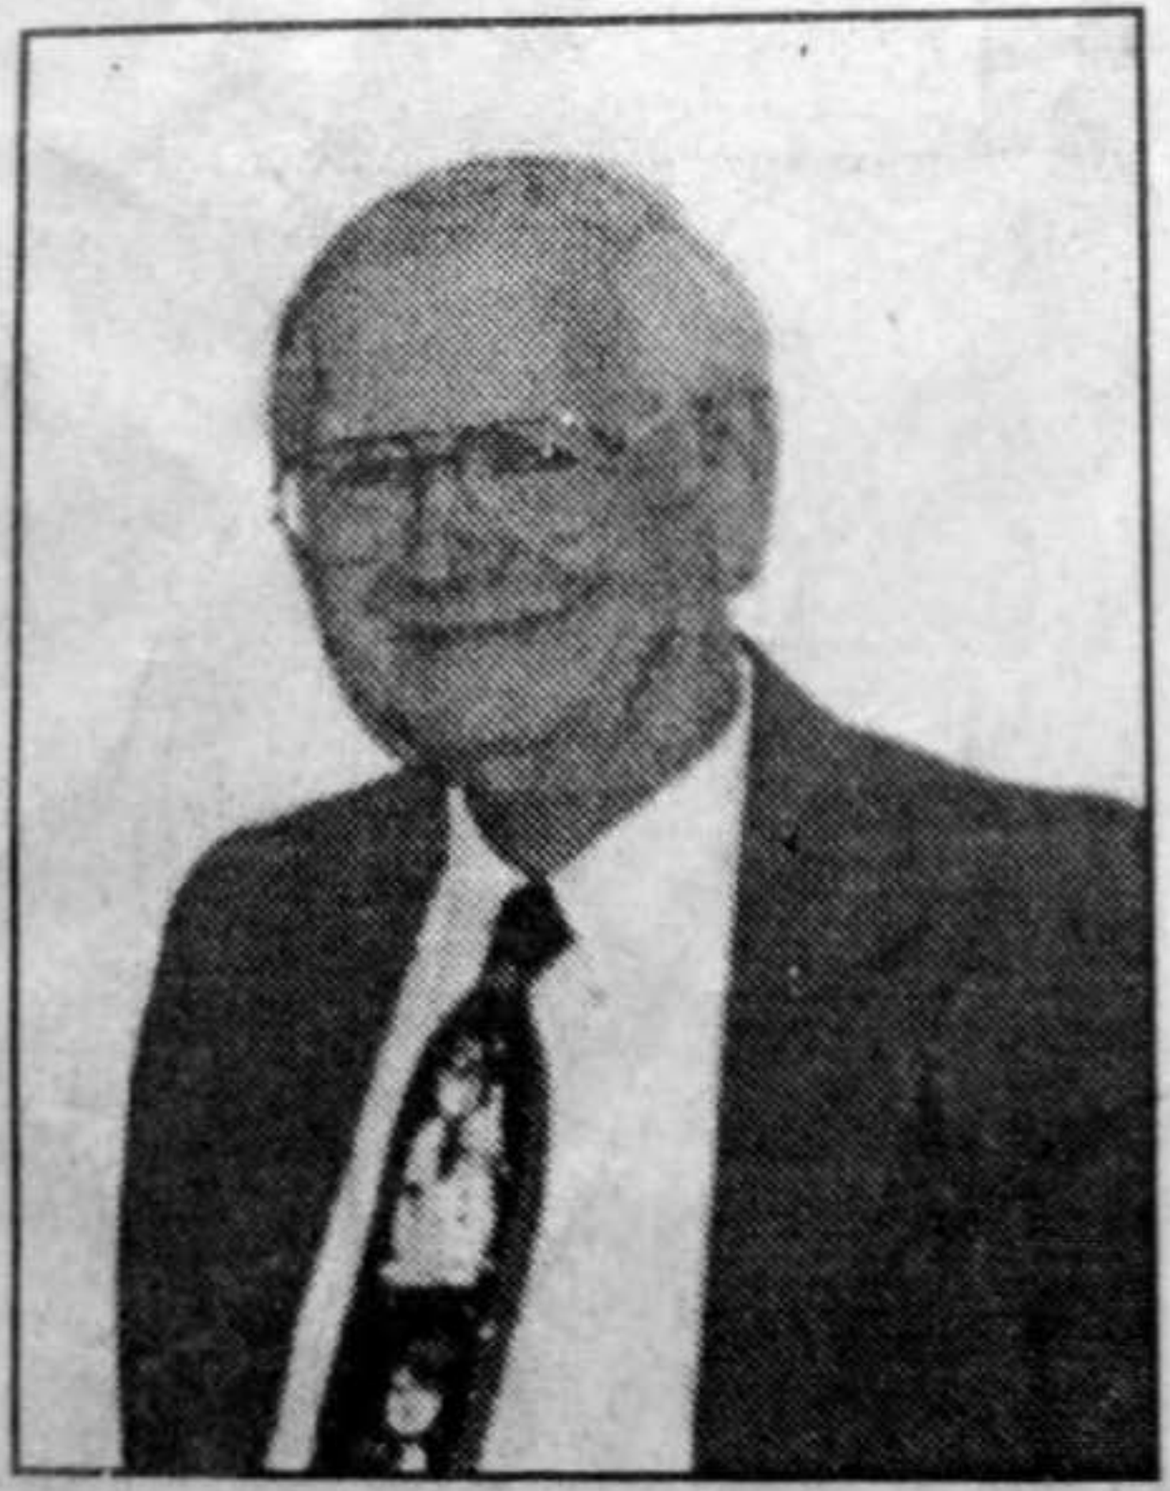
Marlinton Mayor Dies



Doug Dunbrack

Dotty Kellison Assumes Duties

The flag at the Marlinton Municipal Building was lowered to half staff on Tuesday morning following the death of Marlinton Mayor Doug Dunbrack, earlier in the day. Mayor since 1981, he died of complications from cancer treatment.

Later in the morning, town Recorder Dotty Kellison was sworn in as Mayor by Circuit Clerk Earl Michael.

Man sentenced to life escapes from custody, later captured in Georgia

by Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

A man sentenced to life here Friday escaped from custody en route to the Southern Regional Jail that afternoon and was subsequently captured in Georgia Sunday.

Joseph Eugene Howard, 43, was convicted as a recidivist, or habitual criminal, February 18 after a Pocahontas County jury determined he was the same man who committed felonies in both Georgia and Virginia.

Howard was convicted here last summer of felony burglary and grand larceny. He was charged with stealing several guns, a set of handheld radios and binoculars from Argile Arbogast in April, 2002.

Shortly after the conviction here, Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford filed an Information seeking to try Howard as a recidivist, a conviction that carries a life sentence.

Chief Judge Frank Jolliffe sentenced Howard to that term Friday morning.

While he was being transported that afternoon, Howard apparently threatened the corrections officer, saying he would spray him with an aerosol can and then set him on fire, according to Weiford.

The prosecutor did not say how Howard obtained either the can or the lighter.

When the corrections officer pulled off I-64 at the Alta exit in Greenbrier County, it began a journey through three counties and an alleged crime spree that leaves Howard charged with kidnapping and possible charges of aggravated robbery, grand larceny and breaking and entering, all felonies.

All those charges could carry further life sentences, Weiford said.

Saturday, a Georgia police officer on a routine patrol saw an out-of-state truck parked on a landing near the Ocmulgee River, according to Telfair County Sheriff Jim Williamson.

When the officer approached, Howard fled, the sheriff said.

After Howard ran the truck into a ditch, Howard fled on foot, and remained at large for several hours, Williamson said.

The Georgia sheriff said officers gathered information, formed a search party and captured an exhausted Howard without incident approximately 12 hours later in a swampy area.

Three Georgia counties participated in the search, Williamson said.

Georgia officials seized a .22 pistol from the truck, while Howard was in possession of a butcher knife, Williamson said.

Howard told Williamson he'd sold a 30-30 rifle "for $24," the sheriff said.

Howard refused to waive extradition after an arraignment in Telfair County Monday afternoon, Williamson said.

Wiliamson said Howard denied allegations that he escaped with intentions to kill the man responsible for his brother's death.

The former fugitive is housed in the Telfair County Jail, approximately 140 miles southeast of Atlanta.

Greenbrier, Nicholas and Fayette counties may all file charges against Howard.

"It would be my hope they would bring whatever to bear they can," Weiford said.

Bomb threat at Hillsboro Elementary School on Friday

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Officers of the Pocahontas County Sheriff's Department and the West Virginia State Police responded to a bomb threat at Hillsboro Elementary School last Friday, March 12. According to the Sheriff's Department, the caller stated a bomb was set to go off at noon that day.

Shortly after the call was received at 9:35 a.m., the school was evacuated and sealed off until cleared by school personnel, bomb technicians and a bomb dog which was flown in from the WV State Police in Charleston, according a Sheriff's Deprtment press release.

Hillsboro Volunteer Fire Department personnel redirected traffic off US Route 219 and around the school.

A spokesperson for the Hillsboro Elementary School said the students were moved to the Presbyterian Church accross US Route 219. Parents were then notified by phone and were allowed to pick up their children from the church. By 12:30 p.m., all students were picked up and school was cancelled for the rest of the day, the spokesperson said.

School personnel made a final sweep of the building around 1:15 p.m. and went home for the day, she continued.

According to a press release issued by the Sheriff's Department, the incident was investigated by both the Pocahontas County Sheriff's Department and West Virginia State Police.

The press release also stated that suspects had been identified, and the Sheriff's Department expected to obtain felony warrants on Monday.

Dear Editor:

I guess I should feel flattered that my neighbor thinks that putting my name in a letter to the Times is a way to bolster his argument. I don't.

I really am not well-informed about 911 addressing, and just made the comment that using GPS would probably make everything else obsolete in a few years. Actually, if I had a "normal" physical address for my business, it would make it easier for people to get directions on the internet from mapping programs. Right now, they can't find me on those programs.

I have always been an admirer of the folks who do EMS and who are volunteer firefighters and think their efforts should be better-funded. Unfortunately, it is not legal right now to fund them from the hotel tax, as some have suggested, but the county has discussed taking some of the $100,000 earmarked for medical services from hotel tax monies and giving it to EMS.

As the county grows, we will have to make adjustments and do some things differently. I hope the County Commission will make the right decisions and make good plans for the future. Of course, citizens should always have input into planning. Thanks to The Pocahontas Times for affording us the opportunity to express our opinions (often at great length!) And thanks to the people who serve the community on boards, as volunteers, and as elected officials. It's not always easy.

to build high rises or big buildings or destroy the old ones or the beauty to grow. It's like people: you can recognize most of them 10 years later, but they've changed inside, they've learned and grown.

It's been more than 25 years since I had to leave what I consider home and one day hope to retire there. But is that the way it should be? Shouldn't I have had an opportunity to make a fair living there and lived?

Even Pioneer Days is not as big as it was back then. I would just like to hear other people's comments on this matter, especially the students getting ready to graduate and city council.

Dear Editor:

Thank you, Pocahontas Times, for your open forum. It is indeed refreshing.

Now, for those who may have found my earlier letter less than understandable, it may be for two reasons: one, their minds are made up and facts are only confusing or no longer acceptable, or they are not willing to learn from the lessons of history.

Ladies and Gentlemen, we don't live in a perfect world. If it were, we would not have a full time military. Terrorism is a fact of life, and all too true for millions living in Europe, and we are just as vulnerable. Terrorism has touched millions... and it is a problem for the entire world community, not America to deal with alone. However, when the going gets tough, the

Richard Thompson

Hello. My name is Richard Thompson. I have lived in the Green Bank area for 27 years. My children were educated in our public schools and have gone on to complete their education. We have two daughters, Tanya and Jacki, and a son, Richard.

I taught at Pocahontas County High School for 23 years as the Welding Instructor. I have touched many families the years I taught. It was a great pleasure working with our young people—very rewarding indeed. I received my training at the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company as an apprentice welder; no vocational classes existed then as they do now. Consequently I was certified by the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as an unlimited High Pressure Nuclear and Non-Nuclear Code Welder anywhere in the U.S.A.

I also served five years as a Police Officer with the Baltimore County Police Department.

While serving in the Army, (three years in Germany), I saw many changes, from the Berlin Wall going up to the Cuban Missile Crisis. Many things have changed a lot in our country and the world as well. All of us have witnessed change for the most part.

Change again is happening in every facet of our country. One thing remains the same, the need for the best possible education for our young people is primary for all families. Keeping pace is never-ending. Academically from entry-level to the completion of the 12th grade, our children prepare for the future. Vocational Education also prepares many of our young for employment upon graduation. In either case they have to decide whether to go on to college, trade school, apprenticeships, or seek employment elsewhere. They have big decisions ahead of them. Remember?

If I am elected by the citizens of Pocahontas County for the Board of Education, I will attempt to:

1. Make every effort to supply the needs for all classes;
2. Enhance learning conditions as needed;
3. Have a positive learning atmosphere;
4. Help each student where they are academically, and help them attain the highest achievements possible;
5. Encourage responsible attitudes for all students and staff.

As a Board Member, I will serve by example with integrity and do my best to serve our students and the citizens of Pocahontas County.

McClintic Library hosts Open House in honor of new Legal Research Center

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Representatives from the Law Library of the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals were present at Monday's open house for the Legal Research Center at McClintic Public Library.

Jeannie Bess, State Law Librarian, and Denise Ferguson, Field Services Librarian, answered questions and gave a demonstration of the Legal Research Center's capabilities and resources.

Bess spoke to those in attendance about the background of the pilot project that has placed nine such centers throughout West Virginia. Six of the pilot centers are in public libraries. According to Bess, prospective sites were surveyed and chosen based on their accessibility and technological capabilities.

The Legal Research Center at McClintic Public Library was installed in November, 2003. It consists of two computer workstations that have access to the State Law Library website and the Lexis-Nexis Legal Database.

The Legal Research Center is also equipped with Black's Law Dictionary, binders that outline self-representation in court and other binders that contain copies of West Virginia legal forms. Tutorial guides on legal research and legal letter writing are also available.

The Legal Research Center has already received much use, and Allen Johnson, Director of Pocahontas County Free Libraries, expressed his excitement at the potential for the center to become a useful research tool for Pocahontas County students. The Lexis-Nexis database is a standard research tool at many colleges and universities.

Funding for the Legal Research Center is provided by a grant from the State Justice Institute and by the Supreme Court Law Library. The grant was used to purchase the equipment, hardware and furniture for the center, while the Law Library, according to Bess, will provide ongoing funding for the subscription to the Lexis-Nexis database.

Bauserman graduates

Jeffrey Alan Bauserman graduated with an Associate's Degree in Practical Ministry from Fellowship of International Revivalists and Evangelists School of Ministry in Charlotte, North Carolina, on November 23, 2003.

Jeff's short term goal is to be a youth pastor and worship leader. He has been an active part of the worship team at Word of Faith Church and Revival Center in Monterey, Virginia.

The Bartow native graduated from Pocahontas County High School in the Class of 2000.

He is a certified electrician with a journeyman's license. Also, he is part owner of Bauserman & Sons, Inc., a family-run spray foam insulation and roofing business.

He plans to return to F.I.R.E. School to pursue a bachelor's degree in Practical Ministry.

Durbin citizens want library to stay in town

by Jason Bauserman
Contributing Writer

Pocahontas County Free Library Board heard from Durbin citizens who want to keep their library in the town limits.

Board member Beth Little said the old octagon building at Green Bank is now an option and the board's president, Gibbs Kinderman, said he would check to see if it could be moved.

But business owner Frank Proud said he felt the octagon building would be out of place on Durbin's Main Street.

Sue Ann Heatherly, who is both a board member and a Durbin resident pointed out that the library, health clinic and magistrate office are all the same issue. She said she felt funding could be obtained from a Main Street Revitalization grant, a 50-50 grant cost-share and the Pocahontas County Commission has already committed $20,000 to the library.

Kinderman added that the library and town could partner and apply for a Small Cities Block Grant. Heatherly noted it is a yearly process to apply for grants and Pocahontas County is no longer considered a distressed area.

The Durbin Library is presently renting its space from the BFD Fire and Rescue Squad. Squad treasurer Janet Ghigo said the building was constructed in 1953 by the department, but is on land still owned by CSX. She said the squad would entertain offers from PCFL to purchase the building.

Proud said he felt the present building was the best option based on location and recreation. and he sees the library as the center of activity in town.

Durbin town councilman Donald Peck and businessowner Ed Phelps spoke in favor of the library remaining in town. Library volunteer Ruby Teeter said either the site at East Fork Industrial Park or a Durbin location would be all right with her.

Durbin Mayor Mike Vance said he would help however he could.

PCFL director Allen Johnson said he has had a discussion with David Caplinger, Superintendent of Seneca State Forest and Cass Scenic Railroad, about developing a railroad collection for display. Board member Denise McNeel offered the services her husband, Bill, to help with the project. Johnson said he hoped the project could be moved from library to library.

Durbin librarian Tara Bauserman reported that the library's use has increased and some fundraising efforts have been held in town.

Little announced other funds would have to be drawn upon in order to meet payroll and Green Bank Library still needs $20,000 to pay off its debt.

Kinderman introduced a sign reading, "#1 Rural Library, USA, 2003."

Bing Brothers to appear at Opera House

The Bing Brothers, a mainstay in West Virginia traditional music for more than 25 years, will perform at the Pocahontas County Opera House in Marlinton on Saturday, April 3, at 7:30 p.m. All tickets are $5 and will only be available at the door.

The Bing Brothers have become musical ambassadors for the Mountain State, taking Appalachian music overseas and to the airwaves, appearing regularly on television and radio. Current band members include Mike Bing, mandolin and vocals; Tim Bing, old-time banjo; Danny Arthur, guitar, vocals and fiddle; and Larry Combs, flatpick guitar.

In addition to being outstanding performers, The Bing Brothers are also keepers of the flame of old-time music, teaching a new generation of pickers and singers at the Allegheny Echoes workshops that are held in Pocahontas County each summer.

This concert is part of a performance series sponsored by the Pocahontas County Opera House Foundation with financial assistance through a grant from the West Virginia Division of Culture and History and the National Endowment for the Arts, with approval from the West Virginia Commission on the Arts. Financial support is also provided by Pocahontas County Dramas, Fairs and Festivals.

Concerts at the Opera House are casual and family-friendly. For further information, call 800-336-7009, or (304) 799-4636.

Wedding

Stricklin–Bauserman

Tara Lee Stricklin and Jonah Lee Bauserman were united in a Christ-centered marriage at the Word of Faith Church and Revival Center in Monterey, Virginia, on August 23, 2003.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Steve and Donna Stricklin, of Green Bank. The bridegroom's parents are Jason and Julia Bauserman, of Bartow. Grandparents of the bride attending the wedding were Patricia Stricklin, of Crossville, Tennessee, and Lois Lightner, of York, Pennsylvania. The groom's grandparents are Don and Helene Snider, of North Manchester, Indiana.

The bride wore a lovely white organza A-line dress with beaded white lace and an empire waist and lace train. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Her veil of lace cascaded from a tiara of lace and pearls belonging to her grandmother, Patricia. She wore her mother's Spanish pearl necklace.

Rose Hendrickson, of Colorado Springs, Colorado, was the maid of honor. Joining them were bridesmaids Malorie Pitsenbarger, of Monterey, and Jamie van der Laan, of Colorado Springs, friends of the bride. Jessie van der Laan, of Colorado Springs, friend of the bride, was flower girl.

Jeffrey Bauserman, of Bartow, served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Jeremy Bauserman, of Bartow, brother of the groom, and Joel Johnson, of Berea Kentucky, friend of the groom. Gavin Halterman, of Arbovale, nephew of the groom, served as ringbearer, and John van der Laan, of Colorado Springs, friend of the bride, was usher.

The bridesmaids wore two-piece silk gowns of white and sage and carried bouquets of white roses accented with sage and lavender. The mother of the bride wore a gown of ivory lace, while the mother of the groom wore a gown of sage with lavender roses.

The groom wore a tuxedo with tails, accented with silver vest and tie. The groomsmen wore tuxedos accented with sage vests and ties.

Chip Hill, pastor of Word of Faith Church, officiated the inspiring ceremony. Julia Bauserman, mother of the groom, sang, "Only Hope," while accompanying herself on the keyboard.

Wedding guests included friends and relatives from Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Angel Ministries Revival Tent on the WOF grounds in Monterey, hosted by Sarah Rickets and friends. The master of ceremonies was Rob Hayes, of Hot Springs, Virginia. Katie Patrick was wedding coordinator, Kelly Potter, the photographer, and Lon Rickets, the videographer.

The couple enjoyed a honeymoon at Deep Creek Lake, Maryland. They now reside in Durbin. Tara is head librarian in Durbin and assistant librarian in Green Bank, hosting pre-school and after-school programs. Jonah is electronics technician at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory.

Will Snowshoe Get Your Taxes For 30 Years To Buy Snowshoe A $25,000,000 Hotel?

Last week I asked the following question: Can the West Virginia Legislature go back to the previously passed Tax Increment Financing (TIF) Act and customize both ethical and other key provisions to fit Snowshoe Mountain Resort's corporate and legislative needs in the form of House Bill 4624, overriding the objections of the local community and circumventing the West Virginia Ethics Commission's opinion?

The answer is yes. HB 4624 is passed. The Governor is next and then the cash is on to the public trough. Now the next question is how fast can Snowshoe run to the Pocahontas Co. Commission to request a vote on a 30 year TIF project (retroactive, of course to 2002, thus escaping the 40% 2003 property tax increase). A yes vote would transfer the public's tax wealth to Snowshoe for 30 years and, therefore, your children and grandchildren will still be paying taxes in 2034 to fund Snowshoe's next corporate asset, a $25,000,000 hotel euphemistically called a "Convention Center."

The only things between Snowshoe and your $25,000,000 tax dollars are two Pocahontas Co. Commissioners. Joel Callison cannot vote. This TIF amendment stripped base of ethical standards and twisted with the greatest political care will allow Reta Griffith to vote when her husband works for Snowshoe! Will Mr. Griffith's job be "outsourced" to Colorado along with the accounting department? Let's remember the development department was "outsourced" to Orlando, Florida, where Intrawest is now building for Disney. So this leaves James Carpenter with a tremendous responsibility, standing alone, with the financial fate of the county in his hands.

And what is the opinion of the Pocahontas Co. Tax Assessor? As reported by the Charleston Gazette, 3-11-04, Dolan Irvine compared this TIF to his teachers salary 30 years ago which was $4,200. "That wasn't a bad salary then, but if you tried to live on $4,200 today, you'd have a terrific problem."

For you see, fellow citizens, the West Virginia Legislature has transferred its Constitutional right to spend your hard-earned money to corporations like Snowshoe, a subsidiary of Intrawest, a foreign corporation with revenues of $1.4 billion in 2003, enough to pay the projected 4 year state deficit of $1.4 billion!

Now instead of the government taxing & spending tax payer monies for public education and public infrastructure, like roads and schools that, in turn, belong to the public, our Co. Commission could vote for a Snowshoe TIF and then your tax dollars would buy more corporate assets for a billion-dollar corporation asset, Snowshoe.

Why should our tax dollars be used to build wealth for Snowshoe? Let's use the $25,000,000 to build wealth for Pocahontas County.

If you're feeling sorry for Snowshoe, may I repeat a few rumors? One, Snowshoe is buying the 3000 acre "Company Farm" adjacent to Snowshoe in Randolph Co. Two, Snowshoe is pursuing a 2000 acre parcel in Lewisburg. If Snowshoe can afford to purchase 5000 acres of land then, perhaps, they should make the hard business decision to either have 5000 more acres or a hotel called a "Convention Center."

According to Snowshoe's trickle down economics, this proposed TIF will create jobs until the seasonal layoffs or unless the jobs get "outsourced" to Florida or Colorado. Here's an alternative plan: Let's build schools, roads and employ more teachers with our $25,000,000 instead. This would help Sen. Helmick, Chairman of the Finance Committee and the state's "funding crisis" of $1.4 billion over the next six years. Let's see how. The Charleston Gazette quoted Sen. Helmick on March 10, 2003. "It's a matter of perceptions out there. We've said we don't have any money and we don't." "He [Helmick] said it simply would be fiscally irresponsible to approve pay raises [for teachers and judges] until the legislature get's a handle on the states funding crisis." But, of course, it's not "fiscally irresponsible" for Sen. Helmick to approve legislation for Snowshoe's proposed $25,000,00 TIF which, in turn, reduces funding for the WV Department of Education so those same teachers can't be paid more unless our taxes are raised to pick up the Snowshoe TIF tax shortfall. Well, at least, Sen. Helmick is consistent. Here's that alternate plan again. Let's keep our tax money and give our teachers and judges the pay raises the state and Sen. Helmick can't afford because of legislation like TIF.

And if you're also feeling sorry for Sen. Helmick's state "funding crisis" well consider this: Brian Helmick, his son, a "bond lawyer" for Jackson Kelly and "lobbyist" for the proposed Snowshoe TIF may receive a 1% bond fee of $250,000 for this $25,000,000 hotel bond financing. So the Helmick family may survive the "funding crisis" to write more legislation like TIF. And, by the way if Snowshoe defaults on these bonds who is responsible - the tax payers or Snowshoe?

The creation of a Snowshoe TIF would pose many more fundamental questions that must be answered:

How many other Snowshoe property owners want to be excluded along with Silver Creek, Mountain Development and others from the proposed TIF?

Will Snowshoe use TIF legislation condemnation against their own property owners?

Will Snowshoe use TIF legislation to expand the original TIF?

And what will happen to the surrounding land at the base of Snowshoe?

Will Snowshoe continue to use its legislative influence to rezone competing land with Senate Bill 454 passed this session?

Will your land be condemned for a Snowshoe Park or "green space" or identified as "that sprawl is not advantageous to a community" [like Snowshoe] SB 454 ARTICLE 15 A-1-1 (4)

You say that can't happen to my land. Linwood property owners do you remember Snowshoe's proposed and defeated Hawthorne Valley sewer plant that excluded you? Do you remember that the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) cannot stop Snowshoe from violating EPA and state environmental laws — even now? Do you remember the multi-million dollar highway built for Snowshoe from Route 66 to the Snowshoe Village courtesy of the taxpayers and Snowshoe's political influence?

If the Commissioners still insist the taxpayers buy a hotel called a "Convention Center," then let it be owned by the people who paid for it, Pocahontas Co. tax payers. I know several property owners, including myself, that would welcome a $25,000,000 hotel project. If Indian tribes can have hotels and casinos why can't we, the tax payers, own a hotel and "Convention Center?"

Can the county afford the Snowshoe trickle down economic theory or is it a gamble the county cannot afford to lose?

Contact your commissioners now before Snowshoe gets to the public trough. The Helmicks' TIF legislation has changed all the rules, even notification of a public hearing. Is this still Pocahontas County or is it Snowshoe County?

County budget balanced without need to increase tax levy rate

At the end of their budget work session on Thursday of last week, the County Commission had prepared a balanced budget for the 2004-05 fiscal year in the amount of $4,118,338.

The budget prepared for the present fiscal year totals $4,043,496.

The budget was balanced without the need for the Commission to raise the tax levy rate above the rate set by the workings of state code. Due to the large increase in the assessed value of property in the county for the new fiscal year, the tax rates will actually be lower then the rates for the present fiscal year.

Following the property value reappraisal process, which takes place every three years, the state code allows tax revenue to increase by only 3% from the property that has been reappraised. Thus the tax levy rates have to be adjusted downward to keep the revenue within the allowed limit. (Owners of new property on the tax books also benefit from the lower tax rate.)

The proposed tax levy rates for this year, per $100 of assessed valuation, will be 12.34¢ for Class I property, 24.68¢ for Class II, and 49.36¢ for Classes III and IV for the County Commission. Last year the rates were 14.18¢, 28.36¢, and 56.72¢. (Added to these rates are the levy rates for schools and a small rate for the state, to give the taxpayer his total tax rate.)

At the Commission meeting on Tuesday of last week, commissioners approved holding a hearing on raising the rates to 13.42¢, 26.84¢, and 56.68¢. The code allows commissions to raise the tax rates by no more than 10% but a public hearing is required be the increased rates can be approved.

The Commission took this action due to concern that additional revenue might be needed to balance the budget, which was not completed at the time of Tuesday's meeting.

The public hearing, set for Friday at 10 a.m., will still have to be held, since the Commission has no way to cancel it at this time. A special Commission meeting is set for 11:30 a.m. to approve the 2004-05 budget.

The major revenue items in the budget are:

* $1,745,671 in property taxes
* $700,000 in Hotel/Motel taxes
* $400,000 in federal In-Lieu-of-Taxes payment
* $115,000 in property transfer taxes
* $40,000 from the synthetic fuel tax
* $50,000 in earnings in the County Clerk's office
* $75,000 in Interstate Registration Plan fees (paid by trucks that operate in several states)
* $64,000 in prior year taxes
* $40,000 as the county's share of Magistrate Court fines
* $45,000 from the 9-1-1 fund as reimbursement for salary expenses of 9-1-1 dispatchers

Other income items include interest, earnings from the various county offices, dog tax, wine and liquor taxes, oil and gas severance taxes, motor vehicle license fees, reimbursements, and a variety of other miscellaneous sources of revenue.

The budget estimates a carryover amount of $400,000.

Also included in the budget is a $350,000 revenue line item, with a corresponding expense line item, to handle any grants that may be received from either state or federal sources.

The expense categories are:

* $2,283,226 in General Government Expenses, which includes the budgets for the Commission, the offices of the elected officials, and court house operation. The grant line item is included in this section, as are election expenses, regional development costs, and contribution to the extension office.
* $1,056,662 in Public Safety Expenses, which includes law enforcement, county jail, regional jail, home confinement, and humane officer.
* $130,200 in Health and Sanitation Expenses. The Health Department and the $100,000 contribution to Pocahontas Memorial Hospital from Hotel/Motel Tax funds are in this category.
* $605,000 in Culture and Recreation Expenses, including distribution of the balance of the Hotel/Motel Tax funds to the Visitor Bureau and other agencies.
* $18,250 in social service expenses. The only expense in this category is the costs of the facility for the Family Law Master.
* $25,000 in capital projects.

A separate account, the Coal Severance Tax Fund has a balance of $110,000 with $12,500 in revenue expected. This money is budgeted to the Commission.

The proposed budget includes a $100 per month salary increase for court house employees. Elected officials also receive a pay raise in the new budget due to the increase in the assessed value of property putting the county into a new classification.

JOB FAIR

The Region 1 WorkForce WV Career Center and partnering agencies will be sponsoring a Job Fair on Friday, March 26, from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. at the Greenbrier Valley Mall. The Greenbrier Valley Job Service will be present to register job seekers. Resumé writing assistance will be available throughout the day. There is no fee for this service.

In a TIF

Understanding tax increment financing and its potential impact

Jove Tanner
Staff Writer

Since the Snowshoe tax increment financing district proposal was first presented to the Pocahontas County Commission last October, TIF has become a hot topic of debate and discussion.

While some have said the economic opportunity of a TIF financed project is one that the county would be foolish to pass up, others contend that allowing a TIF district at Snowshoe amounts to diverting desperately needed county tax dollars into a government subsidy of an already successful resort.

Proponents of TIF cite projects that have revamped blighted and deteriorating areas, increased the number of jobs in an area and encouraged businesses to set up shop in an area they might not have otherwise considered.

Those opposed to TIF cite examples of abuses by corporations like Wal-Mart and other box stores, the creation of low-paying jobs and little economic benefit to the surrounding community.

What is TIF?

Historically, TIF was developed as a way to finance urban renewal projects. California was the first state to pass TIF legislation in 1952. Currently, 48 states and the District of Columbia have TIF laws on their books.

While it is easy to find numerous examples and case studies of TIF being used to redevelop urban areas and to literally pave the way for strip malls and Wal-Marts, examples of TIF being used in an area as rural as Pocahontas County are harder to find.

TIF case law also offers a mix of examples and one notable case took place in neighboring Kentucky.

The State Supreme Court ruled in Miller v. Covington Development Authority that TIF unconstitutionally diverted tax funds collected for educational purposes. According to the court, "[i]f tax increment financing will confer any benefit on the school districts involved, it is purely incidental, fortuitous, far in the future, and at this point speculative."

How does it work?

Under current law, tax increment financing in West Virginia works by taking any increase in property tax revenue that would be created by developing an area and then depositing that money into a TIF fund which is used to finance projects approved for the TIF district.

A county or municipality first establishes a physical, contiguous area as a TIF district which may be so designated for up to 30 years. Projects eligible for tax increment financing may be established within that district. Approved projects may then draw from the TIF fund to subsidize their cost.

TIF is reserved only for projects that "but for" the existence of such financing would otherwise not be built. In other words, the project would not be possible without the tax break that TIF would provide.

The proposals for a district and projects may be submitted together or individually. Proposals are then subject to a public hearing process, the approval of a county commission or municipality and the approval of the West Virginia Development Office.

In order to be approved by the Development Office, TIF districts and projects must go through a thorough analysis of their economic feasibility, their short- and long-term effects on jobs and the local economy, the need for tax increment financing, the terms of the financing and the effect of tax increment financing on local levying bodies such as school districts.

The analysis must also show that a TIF district or project also promotes the economic development of the area by eliminating or preventing a blighted area, increasing employment, and/or encouraging jobs and commerce to stay in West Virginia.

When the original TIF Act was put on the ballot and passed in November, 2002, Pocahontas County was one of four counties to vote against it.

Recent changes

Earlier this month, both houses of the West Virginia legislature passed a bill that would amend the TIF Act. The amendment, which originated in the House of Delegates in February, would reduce the act's restrictions on conflicts of interest.

This change, according to Elliot Perry of the West Virginia Development Office, was prompted by the situation that arose in Pocahontas County in October, 2003, when J.D. Morgan, Director of Business Development at Snowshoe Mountain Resort, approached the County Commission with a proposal to create a TIF district.

The proposed TIF district would have encompassed all of Snowshoe Mountain Resort's 11,000 acres for the maximum allowable 30 years, said County Commissioner Reta Griffith.

IN EXCHANGE FOR development, the county would forego tax increases from the developed area for up to 30 years if a TIF project is approved.

According to Griffith, a member of the public brought to the Commission's attention the potential conflict of interest Snowshoe's proposal presented.

Griffith's husband is employed at the resort, while Commission President Joel Callison owns property that would be affected by the proposed TIF district. As a result, both commissioners submitted letters to the State Ethics Commission for a ruling.

That body ruled neither a commissioner whose spouse is employed by a business proposing a TIF district nor a commissioner whose property would be included in a proposed TIF district should vote on such a matter. The ruling also notes that the TIF Act's conflict of interest provisions are "more restrictive than the limitations in the Ethics Act."

Since the process was stalled, the proposal never received a public hearing.

To be or not to be?

However, even if the amended legislation allows Griffith and Callison to vote on the matter, all three commissioners say they oppose the creation of a TIF district that includes Snowshoe Mountain Resort's property.

Griffith said she saw "no benefit" for Pocahontas County in "freezing 43% of the county's tax base for 30 years," adding that Snowshoe itself has only been in existence for about 30 years and has changed hands several times. Considering the rate of growth at Snowshoe, a 30 year freeze of property tax revenue is too long, Griffith added.

Callison said that Snowshoe's proposal would have diverted too much money away from the county.

Commissioner James Carpenter stated that he had a problem with subsidizing development for a private corporation as large and as successful as Snowshoe with Pocahontas County tax dollars. Carpenter added that given the prevailing wage stipulations of the TIF legislation, labor costs for a project within the TIF district would run approximately 30% higher than if the project were financed privately.

'No definitive plan'

While Snowshoe's original proposal has been withdrawn and there is "no definitive plan" to submit another, the resort is still evaluating its options, according to Morgan. One of the projects being considered, said Morgan, is a $20-25 million dollar "conference and convention facility," but the project is "simply an idea."

Morgan said the resort has a list of parties that expressed an interest in hosting an event at Snowshoe, but cannot due to the limitations of the resort's current facilities.

Snowshoe's vision is to facilitate the conference and convention center as a "project of Pocahontas County," Morgan continued. If Snowshoe chooses and is able to go ahead with such a project, Morgan said he hopes residents of Pocahontas County would give their input on the center's design and facilities.

Morgan suggested that such a center could even host a Pocahontas County Free Libraries location, as well as meeting and training facilities for the use of county residents.

Given how young West Virginia's TIF legislation is, it remains to be seen how TIF will play out in the state and Pocahontas County.

Regardless, West Virginia can expect tax increment financing to remain both a topic of discussion and controversy.

Understanding tax increment fina

Drew Tanner

Since the Snowshoe tax increment financing district proposal was first presented to the Pocahontas County Commission last October, TIF has become a hot topic of debate and discussion.

While some have said the economic opportunity of a TIF financed project is one that the county would be foolish to pass up, others contend that allowing a TIF district at Snowshoe amounts to diverting desperately needed county tax dollars into a government subsidy of an already successful resort.

Proponents of TIF cite projects that have revamped blighted and deteriorating areas, increased the number of jobs in an area and encouraged businesses to set up shop in an area they might not have otherwise considered.

Those opposed to TIF cite examples of abuses by corporations like Wal-Mart and other box stores, the creation of low-paying jobs and little economic benefit to the surrounding community.

What is TIF?

Historically, TIF was developed as a way to finance urban renewal projects. California was the first state to pass TIF legislation in 1952. Currently, 48 states and the District of Columbia have TIF laws on their books.

While it is easy to find numerous examples and case studies of TIF being used to redevelop urban areas and to literally pave the way for strip malls and Wal-Marts, examples of TIF being used in an area as rural as Pocahontas County are harder to find.

TIF case law also offers a mix of examples and one notable case took place in neighboring Kentucky.

The State Supreme Court ruled in Miller v. Covington Development Authority that TIF unconstitutionally diverted tax funds collected for educational purposes. According to the court, "[i]f tax increment financing will confer any benefit on the school districts involved, it is purely incidental, fortuitous, far in the future, and at this point speculative."

How does it work?

Under current law, tax increment financing in West Virginia works by taking any increase in property tax revenue that would be created by developing an area and then depositing that money into a TIF fund which is used to finance projects approved for the TIF district.

A county or municipality first establishes a physical, contiguous area as a TIF district which may be so designated for up to 30 years. Projects eligible for tax increment financing may be established within that district. Approved projects may then draw from the TIF fund to subsidize their cost.

TIF is reserved only for projects that "but for" the existence of such financing would otherwise not be built. In other words, the project would not be possible without the tax break that TIF would provide.

The proposals for a district and projects may be submitted together or individually. Proposals are then subject to a public hearing process, the approval of a county commission or municipality and the approval of the West Virginia Development Office.

In order to be approved by the Development Office, TIF districts and projects must go through a thorough analysis of their economic feasibility, their short- and long-term effects on jobs and the local economy, the need for tax increment financing, the terms of the financing and the effect of tax increment financing on local levying bodies such as school districts.

The analysis must also show that a TIF district or project also promotes the economic development of the area by eliminating or preventing a blighted area, increasing employment, and/or encouraging jobs and commerce to stay in West Virginia.

When the original TIF Act was put on the ballot and passed in November, 2002, Pocahontas County was one of four counties to vote against it.

Recent changes

Earlier this month, both houses of the West Virginia legislature passed a bill that would amend the TIF Act. The amendment, which originated in the House of Delegates in February, would reduce the act's restrictions on conflicts of interest.

This change, according to Elliot Perry of the West Virginia Development Office, was prompted by the situation that arose in Pocahontas County in October, 2003, when J.D. Morgan, Director of Business Development at Snowshoe Mountain Resort, approached the County Commission with a proposal to create a TIF district.

The proposed TIF district would have encompassed all of Snowshoe Mountain Resort's 11,000 acres for the maximum allowable 30 years, said County Commissioner Reta Griffith.

Performi

t financing and its potential impact

IN EXCHANGE FOR development, the county would forego tax increases from the developed area for up to 30 years if a TIF project is approved.

According to Griffith, a member of the public brought to the Commission's attention the potential conflict of interest Snowshoe's proposal presented.

Griffith's husband is employed at the resort, while Commission President Joel Callison owns property that would be affected by the proposed TIF district. As a result, both commissioners submitted letters to the State Ethics Commission for a ruling.

That body ruled neither a commissioner whose spouse is employed by a business proposing a TIF district nor a commissioner whose property would be included in a proposed TIF district should vote on such a matter. The ruling also notes that the TIF Act's conflict of interest provisions are "more restrictive than the limitations in the Ethics Act."

Since the process was stalled, the proposal never received a public hearing.

To be or not to be?

However, even if the amended legislation allows Griffith and Callison to vote on the matter, all three commissioners say they oppose the creation of a TIF district that includes Snowshoe Mountain Resort's property.

Griffith said she saw "no benefit" for Pocahontas County in "freezing 43% of the county's tax base for 30 years," adding that Snowshoe itself has only been in existence for about 30 years and has changed hands several times. Considering the rate of growth at Snowshoe, a 30 year freeze of property tax revenue is too long, Griffith added.

Callison said that Snowshoe's proposal would have diverted too much money away from the county.

Commissioner James Carpenter stated that he had a problem with subsidizing development for a private corporation as large and as successful as Snowshoe with Pocahontas County tax dollars. Carpenter added that given the prevailing wage stipulations of the TIF legislation, labor costs for a project within the TIF district would run approximately 30% higher than if the project were financed privately.

'No definitive plan'

While Snowshoe's original proposal has been withdrawn and there is "no definitive plan" to submit another, the resort is still evaluating its options, according to Morgan. One of the projects being considered, said Morgan, is a $20-25 million dollar "conference and convention facility," but the project is "simply an idea."

Morgan said the resort has a list of parties that expressed an interest in hosting an event at Snowshoe, but cannot due to the limitations of the resort's current facilities.

Snowshoe's vision is to facilitate the conference and convention center as a "project of Pocahontas County," Morgan continued. If Snowshoe chooses and is able to go ahead with such a project, Morgan said he hopes residents of Pocahontas County would give their input on the center's design and facilities.

en-and-egg question here. Do people leave the area due to lack of opportunity or does opportunity evaporate because people leave the area? Think about it.

One other problem I have with Mr. Miller's point of view is that he seems to believe, as do some others, that the Powers That Be in Pocahontas County could easily step in and "fix things" if they wanted to.

This is much easier said than done, unfortunately. I would be willing to bet that it just might be possible to bring enough new business into the county to employ as many as 5,000 people. But you would have to "give the county away," more or less, in order to achieve it. Something very much like this has occurred in various parts of Upstate New York and other places as well. Do you really want the economic well being of the county controlled by the whims of a few large corporations? Think about it.

Respectfully yours,

Dear Editor:

There has been much rumor and innuendo floating around regarding the proposed "TIF" (tax increment financing) for a convention facility that would be owned by you the taxpayers of Pocahontas County.

Our point of view comes from the experience we have had over the last 30 years or more. We arrived and purchased property in Pocahontas County in 1980. Through the years we have seen Pocahontas County move forward with positive community growth and we have seen times when there were few bright spots in the economy for local citizens.

We are now on a good positive upswing and the proposed "TIF" is a way to extend this positive trend and provide a long-term benefit to all of us.

We have paid our taxes here since 1980 and will continue to play our part in the positive growth and development of Pocahontas County. We strongly support the "TIF" concept for the benefit of all county residents.

Don't be fooled by attention getting misstatements and statements published without a factual basis. It's easy to complain and say no to anything. Have the courage to take a positive step and support the "TIF."

Sincerely,

Genealogy group outlines new projects

The first meeting of a new genealogy group in Pocahontas County met Tuesday evening at the McClintic Library in Marlinton.

The group decided to foster several enterprising projects for the first year. One of the most exciting projects will be an Orphan Photo Project. The McClintic Library will host a display of unidentified photographs of people who are believed to have lived in Pocahontas County many years ago. The same photo will be displayed on the library's web site at www.pocahontaslibrary.org and in The Pocahontas Times newspaper.

Visitors to the library and the site will be encouraged to assist in identifying the person featured in the photograph. Committee member Ruth Taylor commented "This is an exciting project to help others. There is a rich family heritage in our county and this project will match photograph and knowledge together."

The Pocahontas Times newspaper is stored at the library on microfilm. The group is investigating having the microfilm processed or digitized so it can be easily accessed both at the library and over the Internet. Mike Hill, from the Charleston area, said he would check with the Charleston paper, which uses such a digitizing system for more information and details.

Allen Johnson, Executive Director for the Pocahontas County Free Libraries, said "The genealogy of our county currently rests with our older residents who have stories and accounts and so much information to share with others." Allen will be working on a committee with Doug Jackson and B. J. Gudmundsson on a project to interview some of the older residents in our county. "The young people in our area are good with the new camcorders and video hardware. We really want to get them involved and have this be a cross-generational project."

The interviews would be on video and then duplicated to CD so the family would have a copy and also one at the library. Volunteers for this project are encouraged to call Allen Johnson at the McClintic Library.

Ruth Taylor suggested that people look around the house and if they have old yearbooks from the county to either bring them to the library's Heritage Room now or stipulate in their will that their desire is to have their high school or college yearbook go to the library.

The group is also asking that people who have been doing genealogy for years in longhand consider making copies of their work and donating it to the library. "Many people come into our library to do genealogy work. Someone last week came all the way from Idaho. We want to become a center-point for people to come and find information about their family," said Johnson.

The next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, April 20, at 6 p. m. at the McClintic Library.

Attending were Mike Hill, Doug Jackson, Gail Hyer, Ruth Taylor, David Cain, Jane Price Sharp, Pamela Johnson, Mary Fischer, Nancy Smithson, Allen Johnson.

Wilderness District Pinewood Derby

The Wilderness District Pinewood Derby will be held Saturday, April 10, in Richwood, at the Richwood High School cafeteria at 10 a.m. 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners, along with the Grand Champion winner from the local level, may go and compete at this district level. Please call Lisa Brown, 799-6390, if you have any questions.

Pack #33 holds Annual Father & Son Bake-Off

Nineteen scouts and their fathers or a helper gathered at the Marlinton Elementary School on February 21 to compete in the annual Cub Scout Father & Son Bake-Off. The categories for competition are cakes, cookies and pies. This year, a large selection of cakes were presented, along with two sets of cookies and one pie. Each entry had a specific theme for the baked good which showed the imagination and creativity that these young boys possess.

The baked goods are all judged by the following: presentation/display, taste, and the degree of difficulty. Jean Hite, Butch Michael, and Demetria Moore were the judges. During the judging process, Sally Rose, of Green Bank/Arbovale Pack #112, gave a presentation on "Family Friends of Scouting" for the Buckskin Council. After upcoming events were announced, Cub Scout mugs were given to Ken and Reta Griffith, Dwayne Kennison, Brian and Dawn Buchanan, and Matt McPeak for their hard work and dedication to the scouting program for the current year. Cubmaster, Lisa Brown, along with Sally Rose, led several rounds of action songs. A game of "Simon Says" was led by Ken Griffith, Webelos Leader. Finally the wait was over and judging was complete.

All boys who didn't receive a trophy received a participation ribbon and a "Cake Bake 2004" patch.

Following the awards ceremony, Col. Jack Phillips auctioned off our baked goods. With the support of several businesses and individuals, $720 was raised and donated to Cub Scout Pack #33. This local support of Cub Scout Pack #33 will help give these fine young boys the opportunity to experience what scouting has to offer them in Pocahontas County.

Cub Scout Pack #33 holds Pinewood Derby

Twenty scouts, their families, friends and the public enjoyed an afternoon of competition, scouting, and fun at the Marlinton Municipal Building on Saturday, March 13, for Pack #33's Annual Pinewood Derby race.

Cubmaster, Lisa Brown, presented some patches earned earlier in the scouting year to those boys who participated in the "Scouting For Food Drive" held in November 2003. Announcements were given for upcoming events and then the race was on! Scouts compete by dens: Tiger Cubs, Wolves, Bears, and Webelos. Greg Lash, Scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop #33, and Boy Scout Nathaniel Lash managed the double elimination races to determine which cars qualified for 1st, 2nd, and 3rd places. After great competition and sportsmanship, the winners were announced.

Tiger Cubs:
1st place - Jason McPeak, 2nd - Jesse Yardley, 3rd - Justin Pickron.

Wolves:
1st - Dylan Jack, 2nd - Richard Smith, 3rd - Dylan Weatherholt.

Bears:
1st - Derek Hamman, 2nd - Brandon Buchanan, 3rd - Andrew Gibb.

Webelos:
1st - David Irvine, 2nd - Alex Griffith, 3rd - David Barb.

Grand Champion: Wolf - Stephen Simmons.

Best Showmanship: Bear - Brandon Buchanan.

All boys who didn't receive a trophy were awarded a participation ribbon and all boys received a "Pinewood Derby 2004" patch.

With good sportsmanship, fellowship, and fun in hand, those boys who received 1st, 2nd and 3rd places and the Grand Champion may go on to compete on April 10, at the Richwood High School in Richwood at 10 a.m. for the Wilderness District Pinewood Derby and they can also go on to Charleston on April 24, for the Buckskin Council Pinewood Derby at 10 a.m. in the Town Center Mall.

Many scouts represented the Wilderness District, which includes Pocahontas, Greenbrier, Nicholas, Braxton, Webster, and Clay counties. Those scouts representing Pocahontas County and Marlinton Cub Scout Pack #33 were: Stephen Simmons, Seth Ramsey, Joey Friel, and Derek Hamman.

Although their entries didn't win at this level, the scouts and their families enjoyed their day at The Greenbrier Resort and each scout received a Wilderness District Bake-Off patch for their participation.

PDA announces shoe factory clean-up progress

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Pocahontas Development Authority president Frank Proud said he would mark the day on his calendar with a star.

At the PDA's meeting on Wednesday, March 24, Tom Allen announced that all the solid and hazardous waste had been removed from the shoe factory on Second Avenue in Marlinton earlier that day. The Greenbrier County Solid Waste Authority removed solid wastes and Safety Clean removed the drums of chemicals and fluorescent light bulbs from the site.

Allen, the former owner of Greenbrier Footwear, has been working at the site since the PDA agreed in November to pay him $10 per hour to sort out the equipment and waste at the facility. The money is being applied toward the $13,000 Allen owes the PDA in back rent, utilities and insurance as a result of the Greenbrier Footwear operation.

Treasurer David Cain said that the approximate total cost of the disposal was $5000. PDA vice president J.D. Morgan noted that this was well below a possible $90,000 figure the DEP had once mentioned. Allen added that just for disposal of the hazardous materials, Safety Clean had once estimated a price of $16,000.

The PDA hopes to wrap up sorting and identification of the equipment and raw materials that remain in the facility. Allen estimated that he was 95% finished with sorting the remaining equipment and projected the job

Morgan and Proud reminded Riffe the date the facility would be available is still uncertain and no commitments would be made, but it would be fine for Riffe to show Grimes the building.

Another item on the agenda that brought up substantial discussion was the PDA's approaching audit. According to Proud, Leland O'Neil, of Oak Hill, will conduct the audit after the PDA accepted a bid from O'Neil to do the job for $4900.

Norman Alderman approached the PDA in regard to the audit and the authority's finances. Alderman requested from the PDA a copy of the settlement agreement resulting from First Citizens Bank and Trust v. Pocahontas Development Authority in March, 2003.

Alderman also asked that the PDA work with the County Commission in approaching First Citizens and City National banks to get back the $35,000 in certificates of deposit that have been a point of contention and confusion since 1997.

Alderman and PDA members discussed the history of the CDs and the money that the County Commission paid to the Greenbrier Valley Soil Conservation Agency in 1997. After the discussion, Jim Gibb made a motion that Proud write a letter to the bank requesting the return of the CDs to the PDA.

The motion was approved.

Other agenda items included:

The reading and approval of the previous meeting's minutes. However, Morgan noted that the term of the PDA's secretary him $10 per hour to sort out the equipment and waste at the facility. The money is being applied toward the $13,000 Allen owes the PDA in back rent, utilities and insurance as a result of the Greenbrier Footwear operation.

Once the equipment is sorted, the PDA plans to review a list of the inventory and check for any conflicting claims for equipment among the parties involved. Morgan suggested that the PDA invoice the parties for their share of the solid waste and hazardous waste disposal, releasing equipment and materials to each party once its invoice is paid.

Cathy Cash expressed her frustration to the PDA about the length of time it has taken to get to this point. Cash also brought to the PDA's attention that, as time passes, her office equipment at the shoe factory is losing value. Noting what Allen had said about having the equipment sorted by the end of next week, Cash said over several months she has accumulated a stack of emails from Allen repeatedly claiming the job would be done "in two more weeks."

In the monthly treasurer's report, Cain noted there are several outstanding bills and checks, but once those items clear, the PDA's balance will be $14,378.16. This figure includes the invoice for shoe factory waste disposal that took place earlier in the day.

Morgan made a motion to table the report until all proper documentation for the balance sheet and the year-to-date profit and loss statement is provided.

Robin Mutscheller, in the report on election of new officers, recommended that the current officers: Proud as President, Morgan as Vice President, Cain as Treasurer and acting secretary John Riffe serve a second term.

A motion was made and approved by the board to that effect, and those officers will remain in place through the current year.

Riffe continued that Grimes' operation has the potential to create up to 20 jobs. James Carpenter, the County Commission's representative on the PDA, added that the demand for firewood is substantial, noting that a potential client from California estimated he could take up to 250 truckloads from Pocahontas County.

Candidates upset about sign removal

by Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

Candidates for several offices from State Senate to Board of Education were upset last week because their campaign signs were removed from public rights-of-way.

Several of those candidates alleged that a sheriff's deputy removed their signs and subsequently disposed of them in a dumpster near the jail.

Sheriff Robert Alkire said he would, "take full responsiblity" for the action, however, he would not confirm it was a deputy who removed the signs.

Alkire said sign location had been an issue in the three elections in which he has been a candidate.

The signs were illegally placed, he said, some with wooden stakes nailed to guardrails.

"Not only is that illegal, it's dangerous," the sheriff said. "If you remove one, you have to remove them all."

The law does state that signs cannot be placed in the right-of-way of any public road or highway, but gives the power of removal to the Commisioner of Highways.

Thompson said "everyone would have been fired where I come from. "This would not be tolerated. For every action there is an equal and opposite reaction."

"Why this year?" complained sheriff's candidate Dean Jones. Jones said he got a call that his signs were in a dumpster by the jail, but could not locate them.

When he confronted Alkire about his missing signs, Jones said the sheriff told him he was "sorry for his loss."

Thompson said he had lost about $70 in signs, time and gasoline, but Jones could not put a value on the signs he lost.

Jones said if the sheriff claimed responsibility, then he would hold him responsible.

State Senate candidate Bruce Bennett said he replaced some of his missing signs Tuesday.

Alkire said he has the duty to enforce every law in the State Code.

While some candidates are angry that their signs have been removed, others have called to apologize they had done something illegal, Alkire said.

"If this is unpopular, the candidates need to talk to the legislature and change the law," the sheriff said. "I can't change the law."

"If this is unpopular, the candidates need to talk to the legislature and change the law," the sheriff said. "I can't change the law."

Although Division of Highways Right-of-Way Agent Brad Rainey said it is impossible to remove all signs in all rights-of-way, safety comes "first and foremost."

"Whoever is removing the signs can't know if they're in the right-of-way or not," Rainey said, "unless the signs are in the berm."

Rainey said he didn't blame the candidates for being upset, but if the DOH does remove signs, they are disposed of.

Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford, who has lost one sign he knows of, said he didn't think the general public was particularly outraged.

"I don't think this is a big issue to anyone but the candidates," Weiford said.

Dear Editor:

I would like to commend the County Commission for their labors on the new "9-1-1 ordinance" and most warmly for their willingness to listen to the people who took time from their personal concerns to study and comment on this issue.

But the new version of the ordinance still does not look like a community concerned in due measure about safety and liberty.

A complete index of property owners would be established under this new law. It is none of Government's business to keep track of the whereabouts of private citizens, and such monitoring, which was a prominent feature of the Soviet Russian state, should not be allowed to begin here.

A commissioner was on the radio happily quoting the line from the new ordinance, "...County Commission will rely on the people to comply with this ordinance." How refreshing, we are supposed to think.

But the paragraph continues, "...Commission may initiate any necessary actions to enforce compliance." The fine before was to be $500 per day, but with this ordinance. How re-freshing, we are supposed to think.

But the paragraph continues, "...Commission may initiate any necessary actions to enforce compliance." The fine before was to be $500 per day, but now evidently beatings in a windowless cell are not off the table. "Any" means any. Do you trust Government that far?

Commissioners, we need one more try at this thing, if your intention is really to help out your fellow citizens, and not to build for us a nicely padded and gaily painted cage.

To be compatible with our nation's tradition of freedom, this ordinance needs to expressly forbid the creation or maintenance of any index of persons, and to incorporate unambiguous language making display of assigned addresses voluntary.

More than three centuries before Christ, Demosthenes said, "There is one safeguard...to democracies...: Distrust." Just before our own American Revolution, John Curran said, "The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance, which condition if he break, servitude is ...the consequence..."

Dear Editor:

Here's Your Study!

I've been reading, with interest, all of the letters being published on the Tax Increment Financing (TIF) recently and first would like to thank The Pocahontas Times for allowing each of us to express our opinions.

I believe each of the letters includes something the public can learn from if they are open minded and willing to learn.

One letter that caught my interest seemed to indicate that we don't know if TIF is good or bad because we haven't done a study. I've also heard a county commissioner saying there was not enough information yet to make a decision. Below is some information that may help in that area.

FACT: TIF can freeze the amount of property taxes paid for an area in a TIF Zone for up to 30 years.

Letters to the Editor

FACT: 46.1% of the property taxes in Pocahontas County came from the Snowshoe area this year.

FACT: There has never been a 30 year period in the history of Pocahontas County during which taxes did not go up.

FACT: There has never been a period of time in the history of Pocahontas County during which expenses for the County did not go up.

Conclusion #1: Property taxes will continue to increase in the future and especially over the next 30 years.

Conclusion #2: Expenses will continue to increase in the future and especially over the next 30 years. Pocahontas County expenses will increase significantly due to the increased travel through the County to Snowshoe and infrastructure needs for police protection, ambulance service, sewer, garbage, water, etc.

Hypothetical Condition: Snowshoe will become a TIF Zone and 46.1% of Pocahontas County Property taxes will be frozen or limited at the current rate for 30 years. Snowshoe will build a multi-million dollar convention center and continue building more condominiums on the mountain.

Guests traveling through the county and staying at Snowshoe will [illegible] significantly years. The Edray Industrial Park and downtown Marlinton comes to mind when thinking of a good use for TIF because there is a problem attracting businesses to those areas.

Any development and employment to those areas would help our economy and employment and possibly give some entrepreneur a chance to go into business who would not otherwise have that chance.

Do you think the 53.9% of the Pocahontas County Non-Snowshoe taxpayers need to subsidize a multi-million dollar corporation to build a convention center? Do you think development at Snowshoe will stop because we do not provide the subsidy they are asking for?

My opinion is "no" in both cases – the convention center will be built and the development will continue as it has in the last few years. The multi-million dollar corporations don't need our tax dollars to invest in profitable businesses.

If, by chance, we are asked to subsidize and pay for new construction in the TIF projects then we should be part owners and reap some of the profits in the future years. Maybe we could get our elected officials and lawyers to change the law again and make us part owners of the TIF projects so we could [illegible] our money

County expenses for ambulance service, road upkeep, sewer service, water consumption, police protection, etc. will increase at the same rate. County employee requirement in our tax office will increase as new properties are developed and more owners are put on the tax roles, however those new taxpayers will not be responsible for helping pay the increase because they have been "TIFFED."

Hypothetical Question: Who will pay for the normal increase in expenses due to inflation and who will pay for the infrastructure and expense increase due to more customers and development at Snowshoe?

Hypothetical Answer: The other 53.9% of the non-Snowshoe taxpayers in Pocahontas County.

This is not a very scientific study; however, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize that if you have taxes of nearly 50% of the taxpayers in the county capped for up to 30 years, expenses and inflation increasing annually, then the other 50% of the taxpayers will have to pay the difference.

What was TIF designed for in the first place? To attract new business to an area where there would not otherwise be new businesses and to help employment and economy in that area.

I don't know if you have been to Snowshoe recently but it is my opinion that we don't have a problem attracting business to that area. It has grown exponentially over the last few years. The Edray Industrial Park and downtown Marlinton comes to mind when thinking of a good use for TIF because there is a problem attracting businesses to those areas.

Any development and employment to those areas would help our economy and employment and possibly give some entrepreneur a chance to go into business who would not otherwise have that chance.

Maybe we could get our elected officials and lawyers to change the law again and make us part owners of the TIF projects so we could get some return on our money in the future.

Giving up current tax dollars for a future income stream sounds like a good idea for the County would be $847,500 short this year. Can our county budget withstand up to a $1,000,000 donation to Snowshoe over the next several years?

It is incomprehensible the amount of growth that will happen at Snowshoe over the next 30 years and the amount of extra taxes that will be generated due to that growth. It is also incomprehensible to believe that the 53.9% of the non-Snowshoe taxpayers should be expected to pay the extra county expenses while the multi-million dollar corporations take all of the profits.

If I should build a new office as my business is increasing and expanding or Dolan Irvine should build a barn to expand his farm, do you think the County Commissioners would "TIF" us and let other taxpayers subsidize our expansion? The answer is not only no but "Hell no."

If Dolan and I can't afford to expand and build this year, what do we do? We wait until our cash flow allows us to build, then proceed – we can't get or wouldn't ask for a handout from the other taxpayers. Suggest the big corporations operate their business the same way – if they can't afford to build a convention center and make big profits as a result – then they should wait till they can afford it.

James Carpenter, Reta Griffith, and Joel Callison are the three commissioners we elected to make those decisions for us.

Pocahontas Woods to hold more woodworking classes

Pocahontas Woods will hold woodworking classes beginning on April 13. We will meet two days per week, each Tuesday and Thursday, in the building trades classroom at PCHS. The after school class will meet from 3:30 to 6:00. The evening class will run from 6:30 to 9:00. The last class in these sessions will be held on May 20. As always, you can join us for as many classes as will fit your schedule.

This class is open to all levels of woodworking expertise

Our goal is to make our class offerings available to everyone interested in learning basic and advanced woodworking techniques. Whether you are a beginner just starting your hobby or an advanced woodworker who is ready to learn new tricks and techniques, our personalized instruction will be geared to your interests.

Beginning students will build Shaker Oval Boxes as their initial project. This unique and decorative piece requires a number of techniques that will advance your woodworking skills including shaping, bending, and finishing. All materials required for these boxes will be available for purchase during the class and our instructors will help you learn at each step in the creative process.

Intermediate students can either hone their skills by building Shaker Oval Boxes or elect to move on to more challenging projects. Many students elect to learn more advanced wood joinery techniques such as dove tailing or mortise and tenoning and then apply these lessons to mantle clocks or CD racks. We will have the required materials for both of these projects available for purchase during the class.

Advanced students may design their own projects in conjunction with our instructors. Ideally, the project will offer a chance for you to learn some of the more esoteric techniques used in furniture creation and will provide an opportunity for you to significantly advance your skills. Our instructors will review your sketches prior to the first class to determine if you can successfully complete the project during the class and if our "borrowed" facility has the equipment required. Because these projects are not a part of our regular curriculum, please be aware that you may be required to provide your own material. Additionally, our temporary facility does not have readily available storage space so you may be required to transport your project to and from class.

Call John Friel at 799-6976 or Duane Gibson at 799-4432 to register for this class. Or you can register online at pocahontaswoods@frontiernet.net. We look forward to seeing you in April.

2004 impaired streams list out for public comment

The state Department of Environmental Protection's Division of Water and Waste Management released a draft list of West Virginia's impaired streams last week.

Water quality data, representing a five-year period between 1998 and 2003, was analyzed to determine which streams belong on the state's 303(d) list of impaired streams. The 303(d) list is a compilation of all the state streams not meeting water quality standards and is a requirement of the federal Clean Water Act. West Virginia's last list was published in 2002.

Overall, 6,170 stream miles were identified as impaired and in need of total maximum daily load(TMDL) development on the draft list. The most common numeric water quality criteria impairments are those related to mine drainage and bacterial contamination. Numerous listings of aquatic life impairments, of unknown or uncertain cause, also are on the list. Those impairments are based on narrative water quality criteria and have been determined through biological assessments of state waters by the DEP's watershed assessment section. Sedimentation and riparian habitat impact are believed to be the leading causes of biological impairments.

Once a stream is deemed as impaired, it is put on a schedule for TMDL development. A TMDL is basically a water quality improvement plan designed to bring a stream back into compliance with water quality standards.

The list is open to public comment until April 30. The 2004 303(d) list is available on DEP's website. Hard copies also are available by calling (304) 558-2837. Written comments should be sent to the Division of Water and Waste Management, ATTN: 2004 303(d) list, 414 Summers Street, Charleston, WV. 25301.

For more information on the 2004 draft (303(d) list, please contact TML Program Manager Dave Montali at (304) 558-2837.

must spend similar amounts on our children's education and heathcare, world hunger, research into alternative energy to reduce our dependence on foreign oil, and head-start programs. But this is hardly the case.

Instead we spend embarrassing small amounts: Education three-and-a-half; world hunger one; alternative energy one-quarter; children's healthcare four; and head start programs three-quarters.

If we were to take just three cookies from the Pentagon's stack: one to provide an education for our children and rebuild our schools, one to perform research to reduce our dependency on foreign oil, one-half to provide 100% coverage for our children's healthcare, and one-quarter to head start programs; and we would have one-quarter left over.

If we took yet another two cookies, we could feed all of the starving children in this world—all of them,

But some might ask, what about our nation's defense?

Glad you asked! As I said above 40 cookies is what we spend annually. The next highest is Russia, which spends seven cookies, and they are our ally. The next is China at five cookies, and they are a major trading partner with the U.S.

But what about the "axis of evil?" Combined they are spending less than one cookie. Add them all up and that's just over 12 cookies. We are spending more than three-and-a-half times as much as the rest of the world combined.

But what about supporting the troops?

Yes, let's definitely consider that. The Pentagon is currently pursuing new space-based nuclear missile systems, new warships (one cookie), new aircraft carriers (one cookie), a new joint strike fighter (four cookies), and an V-22 aircra (two cookies) that even t military has indicated it does n want.

At a time when we alrea hold the largest nuclear capabi ty in the world, why can t same Pentagon not find enou money to outfit our troops wi the most basic gear?

Well, having spent over years in the aerospace industry can tell you that waste aboun and contracts often exist not the benefit of the country or troops, but because corporatic are well versed in lining pockets of those responsible letting those contracts. I can emphasize this point enough.

The GeneralAccounting fice (our nation's accounting fice) for years has failed Pentagon on its account practices. The Pentagon to cannot account for over $1 lion dollars (that's cookies!). In other words, know they received it, but don't know how it was sp Clearly, the Pentagon has too many hands in the co jar.

Remember that leftover quarter cookie I mentio above? Half of that one-qu cookie could pay for impr veterans heathcare progra the same program Presi Bush vetoed a few weeks ag being too costly. We would have $1,250,000,000 left to care for our fallen sol families, proper hazard duty and buy quite a few boo flak jackets.

We can do it, but the P gon needs to go on a diet.

9-1-1 Addressing and Mapping Ordinance a "Sign of the Times"

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

County Commission President Joel Callison called the need for a mandatory 9-1-1 Addressing and Mapping a "sign of the times." Both Callison and County Commissioner James Carpenter noted that Pocahontas County is not as small as it was 10 or 20 years ago at Monday evening's public hearing on the proposed ordinance.

This week's hearing, with eight residents in attendance, took on a different tone than hearings on the previous draft of the ordinance. All three county commissioners responded to questions and concerns, offered clarification when necessary and defended parts of the ordinance.

The revised draft ordinance is much shorter than the previous draft and is significantly easier to read and understand. The specifications of how mapping and addressing will be carried out remain relatively unchanged, while the section regarding enforcement is less drastic and more open-ended.

The open-ended nature of that section was one of the items that caught the attention of those in attendance.

John Leyzorek, of Marlinton, was first to approach the Commission. Citing Section 10 of the ordinance which authorizes the county commission to "initiate any necessary actions to enforce compliance," Leyzorek said the vagueness of section on enforcement of the ordinance er of the evening. Citing a letter he submitted to The Pocahontas Times in March, Rosenthal asked the commissioners to consider using GPS to mark the location of property and homes and suggested that GPS units in ambulances could lead emergency service providers to the exact location of a caller's home.

Griffith responded that finances simply would not allow for a GPS based system, but explained to Rosenthal that the company contracted for the mapping of the county will be compiling the mapping data in a thorough and accurate manner.

Rosenthal went on to say the addressing and mapping system should be voluntary and asked the commission how far it would go to enforce the ordinance. He added that a mandatory system may hold the county liable in a situation where emergency services were unable to locate a victim.

Rosenthal also asked the commission who would be allowed to access the list of property and property owners.

Callison and Griffith assured him and others that access to the list was limited to local and state emergency service agencies and to Verizon. Griffith explained that Verizon has access to the list only for the purpose of verifying telephone numbers with local carriers and has waived any use of the list for commercial purposes.

As the hearing drew to a close, clarification when necessary and defended parts of the ordinance.

Leyzorek also made the same case he had made at the two previous hearings, that such a mapping and addressing system should instead be voluntary in nature. For the Commission to mandate compliance with such a system, according to Leyzorek, "oversteps the bounds of legitimate government."

Tom Lanier, of Slaty Fork, assured the commission that he is not opposed to an address and mapping ordinance but called the section dealing with structures over 50 feet from the edge of the road "arbitrary and capricious." Lanier suggested "common sense" should dictate how visible a structure's address is from the road, rather than an arbitrary distance.

Callison responded that "50 feet is common sense."

Lanier also asked the commission how it planned to keep up-to-date records of property owners, as stipulated in Section 3b, and how the system would distinguish between a person's residence and other pieces of should be voluntary and asked the commission how far it would go to enforce the ordinance. He added that a mandatory system may hold the county liable in a situation where emergency services were unable to locate a victim.

Rosenthal also asked the commission who would be allowed to access the list of property and property owners.

Callison and Griffith assured him and others that access to the list was limited to local and state emergency service agencies and to Verizon. Griffith explained that Verizon has access to the list only for the purpose of verifying telephone numbers with local carriers and has waived any use of the list for commercial purposes.

As the hearing drew to a close, Carpenter remarked how difficult it has been to find a solution that would satisfy the majority of Pocahontas County residents, noting that at previous hearings the ordinance was criticized for being too harsh in its penalties, while the new ordinance is being criticized for being too flexible.

However, Carpenter added later that the ordinance will be worth it if it saves just one life.

The ordinance was scheduled for its second reading Tuesday during the regular county commission meeting.

Jamie L. Green, of Marlinton, appeared before Magistrate William Hevener on March 26 and entered a plea of no contest to DUI. He was sentence to 24 hours in jail and fined $100 with $160 in court costs.

Charles W. Cassell, of Stony Bottom, was arrested on the 30th by State Police Tpr. B. E. Collins and charged with being a mapping and addressing system should instead be voluntary in nature. For the Commission to mandate compliance with such a system, according to Leyzorek, "oversteps the bounds of legitimate government."

Tom Lanier, of Slaty Fork, assured the commission that he is not opposed to an address and mapping ordinance but called the section dealing with structures over 50 feet from the edge of the road "arbitrary and capricious." Lanier suggested "common sense" should dictate how visible a structure's address is from the road, rather than an arbitrary distance.

Callison responded that "50 feet is common sense."

Lanier also asked the commission how it planned to keep up-to-date records of property owners, as stipulated in Section 3b, and how the system would distinguish between a person's residence and other pieces of property that person might own in the county.

Commissioner Reta Griffith explained that the listing of property owners would be maintained with database software from the state and that the software should be able to indicate the owner, occupant, or tenant of any given property. Griffith acknowledged it was likely such confusion would arise as the ordinance is implemented and information is brought up-to-date.

Norman Alderman, of Beaver Creek, approached the commission as well, stating he was not opposed to such an ordinance, but that he was opposed to the idea of the system being financed through the 9-1-1 fee on customers' phone bills.

According to Alderman, the county should have ...

criticized for being too harsh in its penalties, while the new ordinance is being criticized for being too flexible.

However, Carpenter added later that the ordinance will be worth it if it saves just one life.

The ordinance was scheduled for its second reading Tuesday during the regular county commission meeting.

A preliminary hearing was held for Steven D. Rodriquez, of Marlinton, on a charge of wanton endangerment in Magistrate Hevener's court on the 31st. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the Circuit Court.

Chase A. Walther, of Durbin, appeared in court on April 1 in response to a warrant charging him with breaking without entering. He was released on $500 bond. The warrant was obtained by Tpr. Collins.

Norman Alderman, of Beaver Creek, approached the commission as well, stating he was not opposed to such an ordinance, but that he was opposed to the idea of the system being financed through the 9-1-1 fee on customers' phone bills.

According to Alderman, the county should have enough money to finance the system.

Alderman continued by praising the commission on clearly defining compliance in the ordinance, but echoed Leyzorek's concern about the vague language regarding enforcement.

Alderman said that any fines or other measures should be clearly stipulated in the language of the ordinance and questioned the legality of the passage stating that fines would be determined "by policy" of the commission rather than by law. To ensure the section dealing with enforcement is legal, Alderman suggested that the commission consult the prosecuting attorney and re-write the section, adding that he would be the first to take the commission to task if the section is not consistent with state code.

Joel Rosenthal, a Hillsboro area resident, was the last speak-ton endangerment in Magistrate Hevener's court on the 31st. Probable cause was found and he was bound over to the Circuit Court.

Commission makes a few changes in 9-1-1 ordinance

The saga of the 9-1-1 Mapping and Addressing Ordinance continued at the County Commission meeting on Tuesday. The latest version of the ordinance was up for second reading (final approval) at this meeting, but changes to be made in two sections will force the process to be started again.

The purpose of the ordinance is to establish city-style addressing in the county to assist emergency personnel in locating homes and businesses.

Commissioner Reta Griffith reported that the section that made the numbering system center on Marlinton will be removed on the advice of Bruce Heinrich, of Microdata, the company that has contract to do the state-wide mapping for 9-1-1 addressing.

In response to comments made the the hearing on Monday, she said, a maximum fine will be added to the Enforcement section of the ordinance. It will state that fines are not to exceed $5 per day, she said.

Finally, also in response to a concern expressed at the hearing, the Commission will have the ordinance will be reviewed by Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford.

The changes will require the ordinance to have another first reading and public hearing.

James VanReenan, G. N. Casto, and Paul Ranson, representing the Pocahontas County Scottish Rite Club thanked the commissioners for their resolution last August in support of the group's Patriotism Education Program in the schools in the county. The commissioners were given copies of the books that have been supplied to the schools for the program. Mr. Casto said the books have been well received in the schools and other counties are interested in the program.

Deputy Sheriff David Walton told the Commission he needs clarification on the policy on the accrual of sick leave/vacation days. He asked if both are to accrue while an employee is off on sick leave. Commissioners agreed that the policy does call for both to accrue in this situation.

Deputy Walton also asked about the time employees are to be given the benefits of working 20 years; at the start of the 20th year of employment or the 21st year. It was quickly agreed that these benefits do not begin until after an employee has finished the 20th year.

Leslie McCarty met with the Commission and gave an update on the activities of the county Humane Society. She reported that income for the group has been almost the same for 2002 and 2003, at a little over $24,600 each year, from a variety of sources. Not included in this figure is an estimated $20,000 in volunteer time. Ms. McCarty said she is amazed at the support the Humane Society received in the county.

Just at 85% of the money the Society has spent each year has gone for spaying/neutering services, she reported.

Ms. McCarty said the group has had to give up its fostering program because to continue it would will bring a big increase in insurance costs.

She said the Humane Society would still like to have its own facility. Commission President Joel Callison noted that the county Habititat for Humanity group has a building that it is no longer using. He told Ms. McCarty he would ask Habititat about transferring the building to her group. He also offered to seek Budget Digest funds for the

Dear Editor:

The recent debate over TIF prompted me to take a closer look at the issue. I went right to the internet and searched out Tax Increment Financing. What I discovered was enlightening and, quite frankly, I think it would be the same for all your readers. There were lots of facts, definitions and case studies to consider.

I challenge those who oppose TIF to take the time to look at the facts. Go to the library or the internet to do your own research. The information provided there is unbiased. It is factual. It lacks personal opinion which allows you to form your own honest one. Lack of knowledge creates a sense of fear and folks in our county seem to be pretty afraid of TIF. Or better yet, go to White Sulphur Springs and look around. Folks in Greenbrier County seem to be using TIF to great advantage.

As for TIF, what I know so far is, those who support it seem to have a clearer understanding of it, as well as the need for economic development in this depressed area. I also feel pretty confident about the opportunities for this community.

I know there is debate over issues like TIF and anything else that is attached to tourism, and that most of the negativity points to Snowshoe. But just because Snowshoe supports something doesn't make it a bad thing.

tourism element. There are visitors that never step foot onto Snowshoe. But the county has the opportunity to gain economically from these tourists as well as the visitors to Snowshoe.

While the county is positioned for economic opportunity, admittedly this puts a heavier burden on our county in other areas. This is the area that should receive the focus from our citizens. What we do with the opportunity is paramount. The concerns being addressed are valid. There are many models available to guide us in our development. The sooner we come together with our concerns and ideas, the better for us and for the generations to come. So many communities have managed to have responsible development that allowed for growth while preserving the heritage as well as the environment. As for Snowshoe, we owe it to ourselves to maintain a connection to the resort. It has value to the community and can provide much support to the area.

Preserving the culture and heritage of Pocahontas County is vital. Many communities have proven that we can have prosperity from tourism while maintaining our cultural heritage. Understanding our development and getting involved as citizens insures this. It is our heritage that makes us unique. We should be proud enough to share it with the world and secure enough to believe it will

I've been reading the on-going editorial debates with interest. What I have gleaned from the editorial letters is not surprising. Pocahontas County is experiencing change. Change isn't easy, even for those who embrace it. I respect the generations of people who have lived in the county and understand the feelings they have about the changes that are taking place. I can understand the reluctance to accept the land development near Snowshoe. There is no doubt that there will be growing pains and challenges arising from the growth. But there is also much economic opportunity as well.

Obviously, there is no way to stop tourism in this county. All

Many of the fears expressed about the growth of Snowshoe and tourism relate to crime in the community. At the risk of losing the audience here, I make another comment. The crime elements that I keep hearing about in the magistrate court reports and the news reports don't match the opinions expressed in the usual editorial comments. With few exceptions, the crime in this county seems to be DUI, domestic violence, robbery and murder from the citizens of our own county. I don't deny there is a dark element drawn to Snowshoe, but it is inaccurate to blame the resort for crime listen to their hearts but also open their minds. It is easy to listen to opinion, but don't let that substitute for knowing the facts. Take advantage of one of the number of libraries available to do research. Don't be afraid to find out the truth. And be brave enough to involve yourself in saving your community.

Tax money is the way we finance government services to the community. As sure as we live, taxes will go up. Those of us who have property will bear the burden of that. Don't be afraid of taxes. Since tax is based on the value of a property, Snowshoe property will have the highest tax burden. The development of Snowshoe will ultimately benefit us through tax revenues.

Something to remember is the voting population will help determine how the tax money is used. A majority of the Snowshoe property owners aren't even registered to vote in this county, leaving the local community with substantial control. With the elections coming up, anyone with a concern about the county should be registered to vote, and make every effort to do so.

A vote, unlike an opinion, always counts. Choose the candidate carefully. Let them know your expectations and hold them accountable. Look for someone with leadership skills, hon-more into my letter than what is actually there. She seems to believe, for instance, that I am much more affluent than I actually am because I can just barely afford to own 2 houses at the moment. Actually, the fact that we've been able to do it is more of a fluke than anything else, and it's quite a stretch, even so. We will probably be "trading down" soon in Northern Virginia to save a little money. Actually, I would just as soon get out of Northern Virginia completely, but my wife wants to maintain some kind of a residence there, at least for the near future. I would be happy to live in Marlinton even if my house was just a hole in the ground.

She also assumes I plan to retire here. Well, not exactly. My wife is retired. I don't ever plan to retire in the sense that people normally use the word. I came here primarily to bale hay, maybe keep a few draft horses, and do my little bit to try to improve the animal welfare situation in the county. And perhaps help a few people in the process. If all goes well, someday I'll die either on the tractor or behind a team of draft horses in a field someplace.

Oh, by the way, I am bringing new business into the county. I will be starting a new computer repair and consulting business soon. It may never

Dear Editor:

This letter is in response to the letter from Heidi Turner of April 1, regarding my letter of a hole in the ground.

She also assumes I plan to retire here. Well, not exactly. My wife is retired. I don't ever plan to retire in the sense that people normally use the word. I came here primarily to bale hay, maybe keep a few draft horses, and do my little bit to try to improve the animal welfare situation in the county. And perhaps help a few people in the process. If all goes well, someday I'll die either on the tractor or behind a team of draft horses in a field someplace.

Oh, by the way, I am bringing new business into the county. I will be starting a new computer repair and consulting business soon. It may never employ anyone other than myself, but the competition may be good for the economy.

Finally, I would like to relate that a local person congratulated me on my original letter last Friday. He said he agreed completely.

But I doubt this would carry much weight with Ms. Turner, as the person who congratulated me is a member of what she would call a "prominent family." Oh well, as I said in my original letter, what will satisfy one person will not always satisfy his neighbor, or his brother.

Respectfully,
Larry Himes

Jones is candidate for sheriff

My name is Dean Jones and I am a candidate for Pocahontas County Sheriff.

I was born in Turner, Kansas, in 1943 and have two grown sons. My father, a retired Kansas City police officer, and my mother still reside in Turner. I was led to West Virginia as I followed my mother's Nottingham ancestry to Northern Pocahontas County.

I served in the United States Army from 1966-1969. Business Management has been my career for 35 years. I have held positions such as Vice President of Marketing and Sales, National Sales Manager and Operations Manager. Fourteen years ago I founded Pocahontas Realty, Inc., and went on to purchase and manage two NAPA stores

I served in the United States Army from 1966-1969. Business Management has been my career for 35 years. I have held positions such as Vice President of Marketing and Sales, National Sales Manager and Operations Manager. Fourteen years ago I founded Pocahontas Realty, Inc., and went on to purchase and manage two NAPA stores in the county.

Beyond my mark as a business person, I also actively venture to improve the quality of life in our community by participating in a number of civic organizations.

I am currently the president of the Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau board. I am an avid supporter of veterans organizations. I am a life member of the Vietnam Veterans of America, the current Commander of the American Legion Post 350 and an active member of the Pocahontas County Veterans Honor Corps. In addition, I am a member of the Historical Society and an advocate of the Humane Society.

The position of sheriff calls for a great deal of administration, management and public relations. A qualified sheriff must possess knowledge of and experience in all of these areas.

Aside from my administrative and management background, my civic and community involvement more than confirms I am the ideal candidate.

Owning businesses and coming to know many individuals in the Northern and Southern parts of our county have given me an understanding of the needs of the entire county. I am a firm believer that the sheriff and personnel work for the public. These positions are in place to serve the needs of our citizens. A friend once said, "Those that we hire to protect us, we fear the most." This is partially what made my decision to ask you for this job. I believe that we must make an effort to change these negative feelings into positive ones. Citizens should not feel intimidated by those whom we hire to protect us. When children are asked what they want to be when they grow up, they more than likely will say a policeman or a fireman. Working with the youth of our county will be a high priority for me.

I hope that I have offered enough information so you may choose to vote for a well-rounded citizen who has put this county first in his everyday life and would make a great Pocahontas County Sheriff.

You may contact me at 799-6800 if you have specific questions you would like me to answer. Your vote will be greatly appreciated.

Humane Society.

Ms. McCarty also discussed a farmland protection program for the county. Under the law, county commissions can adopt these programs and appoint a county Farmland Protection Board. The Board has the authority to protect agricultural land and woodland from other uses by purchasing conservation easements. In other words, the owner sells the "development rights" to the land. The law also allows the actual purchase of land if the owner wishes.

During the discussion it was stressed that this program is strictly a voluntary one. Once an easement has been purchased on a tract of land, it can continue to be used for farm and farm related purposes. For tax purposes the land shall remain classified as agricultural land.

Funds for county farmland protection boards are to come from the property transfer tax at the rate of $2.20 per $1000 value. Ms. McCarty noted that there is some federal money available for farmland protection at this time.

Earlier in the meeting, Mr. Callison had talked by phone with county Farm Bureau President Don McNeel about that group's opinion on a farmland protection program. He said he was told that the Bureau still had some unanswered questions about the program.

It was noted that there are several people who have expressed an interest serving on the farmland protection board. This board is to have seven members, including a county commissioner. The others are the executive director of the county development authority, three farmers and two other members.

Monroe and Greenbrier Counties have already started farmland protection programs and Ms. McCarty said she would get copies of their farmland protection plans.

The Commission reviewed its copy of a letter from the Public Service District to state Senator Walt Helmick requesting help in paying the salary of the waste water system manager for the planned sewer treatment system for the Snowshoe/Slaty Fork area. The letter noted that the funding for the construction of the system, $13,612,000, is in place and the schedule calls for work to begin in July of next year. The manager needs to be on the job prior to the completion of the project, but the PSD will have no funds to pay for the position until the system is functioning and producing revenue.

At this time the PSD only operates the water system that serves the Durbin to Bartow area. It was noted that when the sewage system goes into operation it will increase the customers of the PSD from about 200 to over 2000.

An advance of $7500 to the PSD was approved. The cost of replacing a broken water line and reduced revenue during winter months while the Hermitage Motel is closed has put the agency in a temporary financial bind. The PSD should be to refund the money to Commission in a few mont

Re-elect
for MAGISTRATE

From Senator Mike Ross:
An Open Letter To Voters

Dear Voters:

During this past session of the legislature we passed a tough new bill to deal with the cost of prescription drugs. One of the biggest problems facing our senior citizens and even employers who provide health care benefits, is the cost of prescription drugs. No one should be forced to choose between buying food or medicine. Our bill is a first step to deal with this problem and I'll continue working to make certain this legislation gets results.

When you elected me to the senate twelve years ago, I promised to go to Charleston and make our voices heard. I've done my best to bring money into this district and to make certain roads and bridges are maintained. I've gotten results. As chairman of the Transportation Committee I've made certain the 15th District's needs were addressed and I'll continue to do just that when you send me back to Charleston.

During my years in the senate I've earned a reputation for questioning how your tax dollars are spent. You pay the bills and when you hired me to do this job I promised to give you an honest day's work for and honest day's pay. You've gotten your money's worth.

This district still has many problems to solve and I'm determined to stay on the job until they are solved. I appreciate the opportunity of working for the people of this district. I stand up for what I believe and always try and do what's best for the people of this district. I can't please everyone all of the time. If I did I couldn't do the job you hired me to do.

Thank you for your support and trust.

BRAZEN HEAD INN owner Will Fanning serenades the Pocahontas County Purple Pansy Red Hat Society at its March luncheon. With Irish tunes in the background, the society dined on tossed salad, stuffed chicken breast, cabbage and ham, rice/vegetable pilaf, the famous Irish paddy (potato cakes), hot rolls and Irish soda bread. For dessert the choices were Irish Creme pie or pound cake with peach sauce. Fanning sang "Red Headed Mary," but substituted "Red Hatted Mary" in the last verse in honor of his guests. O White photo

High Rocks Academy seeking recruits for camp

Girls in the High Rocks will visit eighth and ninth grade classes in area schools soon to talk about their experiences and invite other girls to apply. High Rocks will accept 18 new girls this year who are getting ready to go to high school. High Rocks is a tuition-free leadership program for girls ages 13-18 from Pocahontas County, Greenbrier East and Richwood schools. High Rocks helps build self-confidence, provides leadership and service opportunities and helps girls find and get into colleges of their choice with scholarships they need.

The unique thing about High Rocks is the opportunity girls get to really become leaders—even girls who might not have expected it. Girls come to be leaders first as they learn how to be more sure of themselves and get along better with each other. They then work with different people in their communities through various service projects, including younger children. Later they take on important jobs at High Rocks, like being a junior counselor for new girls or serving on the board. Each girl gets lots of personal

At the end of the summer, the new girls join the older girls in the year-round program, which they can stay in until they graduate from high school. In those four years, they will come to weekly gatherings at High Rocks, where they get chances to take short classes in interesting topics like photography and yoga, and receive one on one help with homework. They have opportunities to travel around the state for conferences, get help preparing for college and visit different colleges on High Rocks trips. They also have a chance to return to the campground every summer for Camp Steele, where they work together on challenging projects. They will also work on community service projects, such as running the after-school program "Use Your Noodle," where they design and teach lessons to elementary school students, and they become advisors to the people who run High Rocks and role models for younger girls in the program.

Each girl gets lots of personal attention and support from staff and from other girls.

Girls who apply and are accepted come to New Beginnings Camp at the High Rocks campground, located outside of Hillsboro, in July. Each day is filled with challenges and fun. What are some of these fun challenges? Learning to communicate with the gentle and patient High Rocks horses; discovering new ways to look at math; exploring the woods in outdoor classes; and thinking in different ways in writing class. There is also "Girls' Group," where girls gather to talk about issues and coping with the pressures of daily life. Each day ends with singing and reading around the campfire. Girls form strong friendships with each other, and are sad to be leaving when camp is over. However, they are excited about the future and look forward to the High Rocks year-round program.

We seek girls who really want to come, and who we feel would get the most out of our program and give the most back. High Rocks is not for everyone; it is for girls who want to expand their experiences and possibilities, and who want to try some real challenges to find and reach their goals. Any girl or parent wanting more information should speak to one of our recruiters: Heather Sharp-Spinks at the Richwood Wellness Center, Christine Campbell at Marlinton Middle, Ruth Bland at Green Bank Middle or Peggy Bovee at Eastern Greenbrier Junior High. You can also call our office at 653-4891. Girls can get applications during presentations at our schools or from the above teachers/counselors.

Election for Silver Haired Legislature June 15

The election for the West Virginia Silver Haired Legislature will be held statewide on Tuesday, June 15. Nominating petitions for candidates wishing to file for election will be available at local county senior centers beginning Wednesday, April 7. The deadline for the filing of nominating petitions is Wednesday, May 12.

To become a candidate for the West Virginia Silver Haired Legislature a person must be 60 years of age or have reached their 60th birthday before June 15, be registered to vote in West Virginia, and reside in the region from which they wish to run. Twenty-five signatures from residents of the region age 60 years or older are required for a candidate to receive a nomination.

The West Virginia Silver Haired Legislature will fill all 134 seats in the Silver Haired Legislature for the 2004-2005 session.

The West Virginia Silver Haired Legislature is a model legislature, composed of representatives 60 years of age or older, who are elected from throughout the state by their peers. Through this program older adults learn about the legislative process and identify solutions to common problems.

Fort Bliss, Texas — Leading a corporation means making money or collapsing into bankruptcy. Leading a football team means producing wins or losses. Leading American soldiers into battle means life or death.

So, it's no wonder that the son of a Durbin couple takes a serious attitude when it comes to supporting hundreds of high-ranking enlisted soldiers at the United States Army Sergeants Major Academy at this fort in El Paso.

Army Staff Sgt. Gary A. Rexrode, son of James R. and Sara L. Rexrode, is a member of the staff at the academy where soldiers have learned to ready themselves for their duties at the top of the enlisted ranks since the school's inception in 1973.

"I manage the administrative section of the non-resident course," said the 1981 graduate of Pocahontas County High School. "I take care of about 1,500 records, help in-process students when they arrive at the school, handle all for the mail, order supplies and create records for all the students."

Established in 1971, the Noncommissioned Officer Education System consists of four levels of instruction—primary, basic, advanced and senior. The academy became the lead agency for all advanced courses, teaching leadership, communications, training management, professional skills and military studies.

"The Army relies heavily on its senior enlisted corps," Rexrode said. "This academy allows the Army to teach these senior enlisted NCOs what it wants them to learn about leadership and where the service is going in the future."

Besides teaching the sergeants' major course, the academy also teaches other important classes. Some of them include: command sergeants major course, command sergeants major spouse course, first sergeants course, and resident battle staff course.

The academy has strong international ties as well.

In the current class, 42 students representing 29 different countries are learning side-by-side with American troops. Soldiers from Niger, Botswana, Hungary, Taiwan, Ghana, Albania, and Argentina are also taking something special from the schoolhouse.

"The most important thing for the students to learn while they are here is how to work with other soldiers from different areas within the Army."

Exploring the Falls of Hills Creek and the Cranberry Glades

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Just off of the Highland Scenic Highway on State Route 39/55 and down the road from the Cranberry Mountain Nature Center, the Falls of Hills Creek lie nestled in the narrow Hills Creek gorge.

Three waterfalls of increasing height and breathtaking beauty are found along a 3/4 mile trail that makes the steep descent into the gorge.

The geology of the Falls of Hills Creek Scenic Area consists of exposed layers of hard sandstone over much softer layers of red shale. As water ran down these alternating hard and soft layers, it began to rapidly cut away the soft shale. As a result, the shale was eroded from underneath the sandstone, causing blocks of stone to break away when there was no shale left to support them. And as the stream coursed over one of these breaks, a waterfall was born.

The trail leads visitors to vistas of each of the three falls in the 114-acre scenic area. The first 1700 feet of the trail is handicap accessible, with a paved surface and gentle grade leading to an overlook with a gorgeous view of the upper falls. Here, one can sit and enjoy the sight and sound of Hills Creek's first 25-foot high cascade.

The U.S. Forest Service brochure and the sign at the trailhead warn "the remainder of the trail is more strenuous." Indeed, Hills Creek makes a descent of 220 feet between the upper and lower falls. The trail between is made up of a series of boardwalks and stairs that can get the heart pumping if you get in a hurry.

The best views are had when the trail is taken slowly. Between the upper and lower falls there is much to be seen – the scenic beauty of the gorge and Creek is swollen with spring rains, the falls are transformed into thundering torrents, filling the gorge with the sound of their roar.

In the winter, the gorge is blanketed in snow, and as the falls freeze, they take on an otherworldly beauty as they are turned into unusual ice formations. In the case of the lower falls, the ice formations are particularly awe-fact, over 40 different species of wildflowers have been recorded in the area.

After crossing Hills Creek over a footbridge, the trail leads to two overlook decks with views of the middle falls, which measure in at 45 feet and are the widest of the three falls.

Then, the trail makes its final descent to the lower falls. Plummeting 63 feet over a sandstone break, the lower falls are the second-highest in the state.

Marsh marigold is one of the first plants to appear in the Cranberry Glades during the Spring. Swamp violets and rare orchids take the stage in the summer.

As the seasons change, The Falls of Hills Creek Scenic Area is a place worth visiting again and again. With plenty of benches along the way – many situated in the comfortable shade of hemlocks – visitors can take their time, enjoy the mid-day sunlight that fills the gorge and absorb the sights and sounds of the falls.

Just up the road from the Falls of Hills Creek Scenic Area lies another unique and beautiful part of the Monongahela National Forest. The Cranberry Glades Botanical Area encompasses the largest area of bogs in West Virginia.

The Cranberry Glades Botanical Area is comprised of four bogs contained within a 750-acre protected area, situated at an elevation of 3,375 feet and surrounded by mountains that range from Visitors to the Glades can enjoy a half-mile trail that passes through two of the four bogs--Flag Glade and Round Glade.

Bogs, or glades, are acidic wetlands more typically found 500 miles farther north in the northern United States and in Canada. The ground in a bog is spongy, consisting mostly of partially-decayed plant matter known as peat. Because of the unique conditions found in bogs, some unusual plants grow in the Cranberry Glades, including carnivorous, insect-eating plants like the sundew. The rare purple-fringed, grass-pink and snake-mouthed orchids also make their home here. As the largest and best example of cranberry glades in West Virginia, the Cranberry Glades Botanical Area was designated as a National Natural Landmark in 1974.

Many of the unique plant species found here are descendants of plants that were forced south by the ice sheets that covered Canada and the northern United States approximately 10,000 years ago. Several plant species ended their migration here and

Journey to the Elephant Rocks

Visitors to the Elephant Rocks will find a unique variety of formations. The rocks are only about two miles off of the Highland Scenic Highway, in the Cranberry Wilderness area.

I was born in Pocahontas County and spent most of my younger years in the county. It was not until I returned home some 50 years later, however, that I first heard about the "Elephant Rocks." It was during a conversation with my cousin, an avid hunter and fisherman, that he mentioned a hunting expedition near the Elephant Rocks. I was immediately intrigued by their mention and proceeded to ask questions about them.

My cousin went on to explain that these rock formations, named for their size, are located off the Highland Scenic Highway in the Cranberry Wilderness Area. He gave me some general directions and I decided I must see the Elephant Rocks. I began searching my Forest Service geological maps and found that the Forks of Cranberry Trail would apparently lead me closest to the rock formations. The distance to them had been estimated as "several miles" but I desired a more definitive estimate. Another friend estimated the distance to be about three miles and a third suggested it might be four miles. I stopped asking questions and hoped the four miles would be the maximum distance. My endurance would probably not last more than four miles!

My wife and I set out on our first journey to the Elephant Rocks on a warm summer day. We were not very well prepared and our first attempt lasted only about a mile. The next year we were better prepared, but still not prepared for what happened. Our small dog, Rowdy, accompanied us and we were nearly two miles along the trail when we heard bear dogs in a chase on the ridge in front of us. I was so concerned that the dogs might attack our small, black dog that I insisted that we return to our vehicle.

This year was to be the year we completed our journey. Age and various ailments might make future tries unlikely. We were prepared and determined to Philosophy of Life: When I die, I hope I have used all my talent and energy to do something positive.

Ruth Taylor

Not that she's ready to die, you understand. But she has the positive part down pat.

Since she left her job as teacher's aide at Hillsboro School, she's managed restaurants and inns, founded the Little Levels Heritage Fair, won a seat on the Board of Education and volunteered for projects and committees all over the county.

Perhaps her greatest accomplishment, at least so far, is the Little Levels Heritage Fair, now in its seventh year. It's a big job, for which Taylor acknowledges she has big help. "If you have 20 people doing one thing, one person doesn't have to do 20 things," she said.

The LLHF is an opportunity for local people to showcase talents, sell crafts, play music, relive the history of the Hillsboro area and have some fun with their neighbors. It differs from other festivals here and other places because it has remained a totally not-for-profit endeavor with no "carnival atmosphere."

"People come here to see things they don't have," Taylor said.

The theme this year is "Early Settlers," for which a book like last years's "Old Homeplaces" will someday be published. The settlers became a larger project than even Taylor and her compatriots could accomplish in one year. But the work continues and the book will be available at a later LLHF, she said.

> Philosophy of Life:
> "When I die, I hope I have used all my talent and energy to do something positive."

And Taylor, a seventh generation Pocahontas Countian, will surely see that book come to fruition.

She was appointed to a seat on the Board of Education and later ran for the post, a nearly-volunteer position that requires a lot of her time and more than a little of her diplomatic personality. Although she has no children of her own, Taylor has a great deal of interest in the youth of the county. In fact, she was instrumental in establishing the Eighth Grade Luncheon at Snowshoe Mountain a decade ago to give Pocahontas County students an idea of what tourism-related jobs are all about.

She's been on the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau Board since its inception in the late 1980s. That board, which gets its funding through the Hotel-Motel Tax, had a difficult birth because so many people opposed the tax. But the tourism industry has grown in Pocahontas County and people keep coming back to our Endless Mountains.

"It's the fun thing to do, provide services for people to have fun (themselves)," she said.

She's now delving into genealogy and Civil War History in her "spare" time and attends a woodworking class as a matter of relaxation. "It's a pleasure to have something with no pressure," she commented.

Well, that's one thing. But for Taylor, always busy, always helping, always positive, the pressure becomes the pleasure in life.

"I do work in the store some," she said as an afterthought. Taylor's Grocery on Rt. 219 just north of Hillsboro has been in business 31 years. Ω

Organic farmer sows garlic and goodwill

Gayle Hyer
Contributing Writer

At first meeting, Timothy Peregoy looks quite out of place straddling a ridge top looking onto Kennison Mountain, not far from Lobelia. His demeanor strikes one as being more comfortable in a middle school teaching youngsters the elements of agriculture and environmentalism. He is well-spoken, knowledgeable and demonstrates a real love of the land.

Rather than passing his days behind a desk, his livelihood and his life are etched from the earth in the rich and uncontaminated soil that lies atop Bruffey's Creek Mountain.

"In order to be truly organically grown," says Peregoy, "the soil in which the plant is grown must not be phosphated for at least seven years. My land here has not had phosphates for over 18 years."

Peregoy's patch of "Almost Heaven" is 30 acres dotted with Allium Sativum, otherwise known as garlic. His favorites include the Elephant varieties of Canadian Jumbo and Music, the spicy Canadian Red and the popular California White. All of the original seed is certified organic.

Garlic may be the oldest cultivated plant by humans and is of the same general plant family as lilies and onions and leeks. More than botanical designations, garlic is a life form, that is, a living plant which continues to remain alive by dividing or cloning itself into many miniature versions of itself and basically consumes its old self in the process of becoming a new plant.

Television cooking shows have recently touted the health and taste benefits of garlic and helped make it the International Herb of the Year for 2004.

"We have nothing but pure spring water here on the farm," says Peregoy, "and the garlic really benefits from that."

When the garlic is ready to harvest, Peregoy removes it from the ground with mere shovel and garden fork. He is careful not to injure it as it is still a living creature and germs can enter through wounds at a time when its ability to ward them off is diminished.

The bulbs of garlic are hung by stalks in the barn to dry for four weeks and then are made ready for market or wholesale. The bulbs are separated into the processed group, the market group and the seed group. He saves some of the cloves as seed stock and replants them and restarts the growth cycle once again. The soft neck California variety is braided. Peregoy's garlic is a staple in salad dressings, relishes, and sauces sold in local markets in Greenbrier, Pocahontas and Summers counties.

A man and his garlic. Peregoy (inset) and his plants.

The farm is pocked with several hot houses full of Asian greens, curly edged and red-hued lettuces and special herbs. Later in the season, they'll be full of cucumbers and tomatoes.

For two years Peregoy, whose company is "Azimuth Organics," has had a farmer's market in Lewisburg at the corner of Lee and Washington Streets and just recently opened one in Beckley. He will decide later this season if he will open one in Marlinton.

He also offers a subscription service where people can subscribe to regular delivery of his fresh vegetables and herbs.

"Some people have me stop by weekly, they leave me a check and I leave them baskets of freshness," he said

Whether a weekly service or a one-time only purchase, Timothy Peregoy makes the act of buying fresh vegetables and garlic, with a pinch of his folk style charm and country knowledge, a delightful experience.

"I deliver my produce to many visitors to Pocahontas County who are always surprised they can find fresh greens and garlic

The Old Clark Inn turns 80

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

As the Clark Inn marks its 80th year, guests will find new faces, as well as some new services and features at the Marlinton bed and breakfast.

Nelson Hernandez and Andrea Biondi, formerly of Asheville, North Carolina, bought the Clark Inn from Leslie Cain last April. As the inn undergoes some small changes that are to be expected with any change of ownership, Hernandez said that many of the things that the Clark Inn has been known for – being a traditional American Inn with a family-oriented, casual atmosphere – will remain. As the inn enters its eightieth year, its new owners plan on expanding the services and amenities available at the bed and breakfast.

The Clark Inn, established in 1924 by Lucy Clark, is located in downtown Marlinton, on Third Avenue. The inn features wood floors in the entry area, several of the guest rooms, halls and the dining room.

Most of the 10 guest rooms have private baths and are furnished with antique beds, vanities and dressers that are original to the inn. On the front porch you can sit and shoot the breeze with friends, other guests or the owners on one of several comfortable wooden rocking chairs.

More modern updates to the inn include wireless web access for up to four computers. Guests can also enjoy the inn's extensive CD collection and satellite radio, or come down to the living room to use the TV, VCR and DVD player, or to read a book by the fireplace.

For breakfast, guests enjoy traditional American country fare – pancakes, French toast, eggs, "whatever I feel like making that day," said Hernandez.

Other services Hernandez and Biondi plan to add to the inn include a day kennel for guests who might want to enjoy a train ride in Cass or Durbin, or just a day out, while resting assured "Spot" is in a safe place. Other improvements Hernandez has planned include fencing in the backyard and installing a fire pit and a grill as compliments to the inn's hot tub.

Inside, the new owners plan to have a computer with internet access for the use of guests as well as laundry facilities.

For those interested in hiking or biking along the Greenbrier River Trail, Hernandez plans on a shuttle service for transporting guests to trail access points.

As someone who enjoys motorcycle touring, Hernandez also plans on adding amenities for guests touring the area by motorcycle in the coming months, including an area for guests on extended trips to change oil, fill their tires or wash their motorcycles.

As a testimony to the cozy, casual feel to the place, Hernandez recalls a group of 20 hikers who recently stayed in the area, several at the Clark Inn. The rest found lodging elsewhere around Marlinton. In the evening, Hernandez found all 20 of the hikers enjoying the evening on the inn's porch and in the dining room. The dining room, which Hernandez described as the inn's "community room" is stocked with games in the china cabinet and has ho pinochle tournament between so guests.

The history of Pocahontas County is well-documented through old photographs and displays of implements and equipment in the Pocahontas County Historical Society's Museum, located on Route 219 south of Marlinton. The museum is the family home of the late Frank R. and Anna V. Hunter and is listed on the National Registry of Historic Places. On the grounds is the original log home of the Kee Family. The museum opens June 14.

Pearl S. Buck won the hearts of Americans with her famous novel, The Good Earth, which won the Pulitzer Prize for Literature in 1932. For the high quality of her literary work she received the Nobel Peace Prize for Literature in 1938. Pearl S. Buck is the only American woman to ever receive both of these awards.

Today the Pearl S. Buck Birthplace, built in 1892, is a historic museum where you can see period rooms which contain some of the original furniture and memorabilia of Buck. Special events and exhibits are held throughout the year; open May 1 – November 1.

Located in the southern portion of Pocahontas County on Route 219, the Droop Mountain Battlefield State Park is where the last Civil War battle in West Virginia was fought on November 6, 1863. The Civilian Conversation Corps (C.C.C.) built the museum, original lookout tower and other buildings in the 1930s.

Stroll this historic battlefield and enjoy the museum, a day park, hiking trails, two picnic areas with shelters, and the lookout tower from which you can view the historic Little Levels of Pocahontas County.

And while you're here, stop by the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau in the old train depot on the corner of Eighth Street and Fourth Avenue. Our staff is very knowledgeable about the area and will assist you in selecting brochures and maps which will help make your visit more interesting.

Pocahontas County home to the only "small rural schools" in the state

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Under new changes made to the No Child Left Behind (NCLB) legislation, Pocahontas County has the only "small rural schools" in West Virginia.

The Department of Education's new definition of a small rural school district is based on a combination of average daily attendance, population density and the district's locale code.

The Small Rural School Achievement (SRSA) program is open to districts with an average daily attendance of less than 600 students or districts where all schools are located in county tal area of 940 square miles. At 9.7 persons per square mile, the county just meets the criteria of the SRSA program.

Dr. Jack McClanahan, Assistant State Superintendent of Schools for West Virginia and Pocahontas County School District Superintendent Dr. Pat Law, said they were surprised to discover the state had only one district that theU.S. Department of Education considered "rural" under the new guidelines.

The Small Rural School Achievement (SRSA) program is open to districts with an average daily attendance of less than 600 students or districts where all schools are located in counties with fewer than 10 people per square mile. Approximately 30% of the 15,944 school districts in the U.S. meet this definition.

Pocahontas County, according to the 2000 U.S. Census has a population of 9,131 and a to-ia of the SRSA program.

Dr. Jack McClanahan, Assistant State Superintendent of Schools for West Virginia and Pocahontas County School District Superintendent Dr. Pat Law, said they were surprised to discover the state had only one district that theU.S. Department of Education considered "rural" under the new guidelines.

McClanahan added that he brought up the issue on a conference call with federal officials shortly after changes were announced, but said there was little that could be done since the policy had already been made.

The changes, announced on March 15, are intended to make it easier for rural schools to meet the requirements of NCLB. While much of the attention paid to NCLB focuses on the increased testing and evaluation of student achievement, last month's changes address the "Highly Qualified Teacher" provisions of the legislation.

According to a fact sheet released by the U.S. Department of Education, a "highly qualified teacher" must have a bachelor's degree, full state certification and must demonstrate competency in each subject taught. To demonstrate competency, teachers must have a major in the subjects they teach, credits equivalent to a major, advanced certification from the state or a graduate degree. A teacher may also demonstrate competency by passing a state developed test or a "High, Objective, Uniform State Standard of Evaluation" (HOUSSE) that shows a Law told board members the long-awaited dedication of the auditorium at PCHS is scheduled for April 25 at 3 p.m. and that the Scottish Rite has presented an American flag to Hillboro School. Members of that organization would like to appear at a board meeting, Law said.

Boardmember Bernard "Fuzzy" King inquired about the breaking and entering of the board office, which took place last month. Law said the laptop computers stolen were completely destroyed; however, the sheriff's department has leads on the culprits, he said.

The superintendent complimented the sheriff's department on its work.

A teacher may also demonstrate competency by passing a state developed test or a "High, Objective, Uniform State Standard of Evaluation" (HOUSSE) that shows a combination of teaching experience, professional development and knowledge gained over time.

Originally, teachers who taught classes in more than one subject were required to become highly qualified in all the subjects they teach by the end of the 2005-06 school year. Now, teachers in small rural schools who are highly qualified in one subject will have until the 2006-07 school year to become highly qualified in additional subjects.

Newly hired teachers in small rural schools will have three years from the time hired to become highly qualified. Originally, a new teacher had to be certified in all subjects he or she might teach and achieve highly qualified status in each of those subjects before being hired.

Hillsboro parents upset about cuts, combined classrooms

by Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

The Board of Education could offer little comfort Monday night to Hillsboro parents upset about staff cuts and proposed combined classrooms at the school next year.

Hillsboro Faculty Senate President Darlene Arbogast, also the mother of four Hillsboro students, said her children would be adversely affected by the staff cut.

Arbogast said Hillsboro has neither music nor art and only half-time physical education classes offered now. An elimination of another position would combine two classrooms next year, she said.

"It's next to impossible to teach state CSOs (Content Standards and Objectives) and also follow the mandates of No Child Left Behind," Arbogast said.

As a parent, Arbogast said she and her husband would have to discuss transferring their children to another school.

"Neither of us feel like our children will get the same education (at Hillsboro) as every other student in Pocahontas County," she said.

"It's not the board, it's the

"Some contractors cost more than that," Stevens commented.

Although VanReenen called that $400 a "staggering figure," he acknowledged the board has to do "what is mandated by the state."

Stevens said many counties will have to go this route in the future since the universities graduated only 30 people a year qualified for these positions.

The average Medicaid reimbursement for each SLP position with a maximum caseload of 50 is $36,244.50, while other estimated state reimbursements per SLP is $13,350.

"We're losing money because we don't have people in these positions," Vance said.

Speech therapy and lack or personnel is also an issue with the Special Education Strategic Plan, developed by a committee and mandated by the state.

Stevens said recruitment and retention problems here and in other counties; however, she has four interviews set up for potential personnel.

Aides will receive some extra training, while some services will be rendered through the use of technology.

"Neither of us feel like our children will get the same education (at Hillsboro) as every other student in Pocahontas County," she said.

"It's not the board, it's the state," said boardmember Ruth Taylor, a representative of the Southern District. "It's a plain numbers game based on October enrollment."

In terms of numbers, Hillsboro's are looking up, with 17 Kindergarten students registered for next year, up from this year's 10.

Arbogast suggested enlarging the "Hillsboro zone" to include Buckeye and compel students who live in the area to attend Hillsboro School.

Buckeye-area parents Cindy Rogers and Gina Duncan said they already drive their children to Hillsboro because of overcrowding at Marlinton Elementary School.

Hillsboro's enrollment is 98 students in grades pre-k through 5, while Marlinton's is 29[illegible] in grades pre-K through 4.

Boardmember Tom VanReener estimated state reimbursements per SLP is $13,350.

Aides will receive some extra training, while some services will be rendered through the use of technology.

Yet another aspect of the plan is a parent resource center.

"Every special education child should be provided a free and appropriate public education," Stevens said.

She has also developed a timeline for the plan to be implemented, she said.

The plan will be placed on the board's agenda for approval at its next meeting, April 26.

"There are lots of good things in this plan," said Superintendent of Schools J. Patrick Law. "The timeline is very helpful. Every teacher will have a handbook (and the) handbooks will be monitored and updated."

VanReenen said going into the school year, the special education plan was one of the board's major problems and complimented Stevens on her work thus far.

In other business the board:

Hillsboro's enrollment is 95 students in grades pre-k through 5, while Marlinton's is 295 in grades pre-K through 4.

Boardmember Tom VanReenen, also a Southern District representative, said the cuts look bad now, but the outlook could be brighter later on.

"It looks worse on paper right now than we anticipate it to be," VanReenen said, noting that the board must propose staff cuts to be in compliance with the State School-Aid Formula.

"It may be July or August before we can show the money is there," Taylor said.

Board president Kenneth Vance said he didn't believe in split grades, either and pledged to oppose that circumstance.

Mark Williamson, a parent of three, said Hillsboro has a lot of strong community support for its school and teachers.

"I hate what this does to morale here every year," Taylor commented.

Not only proposed staff cuts, but open positions for which no one has applied has Pocahontas County in a dilemma.

•creation of a teacher of multi-subjects (fourth grade) at Marlinton Elementary School.

Not only proposed staff cuts, but open positions for which no one has applied has Pocahontas County in a dilemma.

Special Education Director Janet Stevens reported to the board that county needs a speech-language pathologist at Marlinton Elementary School and one for Green Bank Elementary and Middle Schools, as well as one to serve Hillsboro, Marlinton Middle and Pocahontas County High School. The county also needs a teacher for the deaf and hard of hearing and one part-time educational audiologist, Stevens said.

While the county waits for applicants for those positions, Stevens has contracted Dr. Gary Pillow to serve the deaf and hard of hearing population and as a parti-time educational audiologist. In addition, L. J. Fauber and Cornell Moore Ratliff, both Pocahontas County natives now living in Greenbrier County, are serving in the speech-language pathologist positions up to two-and-a-half days per week through combined efforts. Pillow also fills in the speech-language pathologist (SLP) position up to three days a week.

Pillow has proposed contracting an SLP for Pocahontas County and paying for benefits and worker's compensation for one year at a cost of $400 a day.

Select Committee to nominate mayor's replacement

Mayor Dottie Kellison presided over the April 6 meeting of the Marlinton Town Council with the news that attention had been called to a provision in the Town ordinance pertaining to all officials that vacancies will be filled from names submitted by the Select Committee for vote by the Committee and Council members. The appointment of Kellison is legal and lasts until the process is completed and she will be a candidate.

The Select Committee, as elected at the last Town Convention, is composed of Reed Mitchell, Loretta Malcomb, and Harper Nelson. Any citizen of Marlinton can submit his or her name to them and they can seek candidates. They will submit names at the May meeting and all the committee members and Mayor and all Council members must be present to vote. The meetings will be continued each week until a mayor is elected and then a replacement for any vacancy.

A printed report from Karen Miller said the Corps is waiting for July to see what results are in the State Budget. The flood levee project plans will be completed by September. Work for Detailed Design Document for Phase II (Riverside) has been awarded to Burgess and Niple Engineering. A team was in Marlinton April 1, 2. A contract for a re-survey of the Riverside area will be awarded this month documenting first floor elevations of new structures. In May a real estate representative will brief the Town Council on general land acquisition procedures and the Corps will begin preparing cooperative agreements and financing plans. Some additional borings are needed.

A report from Hannah & Associates contained information on the Brush Country Water Project funding, pursuing funding and preliminary engineering study on Beard Heights Water Project, preliminary advertising on Cooktown Project; on Sewer Projects, reported engineering is complete on Campbelltown/Edray project and paper work is in process; this will bring the sewage plant to full capacity; funding will be required for sewage treatment plant planning. The time on these modification plannings has been extended 180 days due to the death of Mayor Dunbrack and also a request to add a car wash to the sewerage system was included in the modification.

On the agenda, Jim Kellison spoke for Don Morrison and himself requesting to have an auction on a lot up river from the Mini-Park and in exchange will conduct auction free of charge for the Town when they are ready at the old Gulf station. Council approved.

Next the Mayor announced the 911 Ordinance will be continued until next month because the County Commission amended their ordinance and continued it.

The second reading of the Skateboard Ordinance was made and passed by Council. This ordinance prohibits roller blading in the business district of Marlinton or any place that would obstruct access to streets, etc.

Permission was given to the Cancer Society to have a "Relay for Life."

In further discussion on the filling of the office vacancies, the Mayor stated her filling of the office is legal until the necessary procedures are carried out. She called the Select Committee into action and anyone may contact them; they will report at the May meeting and the election will be held if every member is present, and a meeting will be held each week until the process is completed.

She said she will have a monthly letter in The Pocahontas Times advising people of things going on in the town.

A team from WVU will be visiting Marlinton April 15 and 16 and citizens are invited to join in the discussions and activities.

Building permit during the month was given to B&C Builders for work at 1410 15th Avenue.

An executive session was requested by the Police Department. Following this the Mayor announced no action was taken concerning the problem of legal complications with increased fees for Regional Jail use.

Durbin town fees need boost mayor says

by Jason Bauserman
Contributing Writer

Town fees could be increasing in Durbin and a proposed youth center met with opposition Monday night at Durbin's town council meeting.

"Durbin is losing $100 a week just on trash," said Mayor Mike Vance. He suggested the part-time rate be dropped and people with vacation homes pay year-round. Vance also said the town needs to enforce its policy of charging $1 per bag for more than five bags of trash to be picked up.

Treasurer Sandy Varner reported $390 in the general fund. A $5000 bill from the state audit remains outstanding. Vance said a $975 lagoon permit fee was recently paid to the Department of Natural Resources.

After much discussion, council decided to have an open meeting for citizen comment. The next regular meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, May 4, at 6 p.m. at the BFD Firehouse. Council members also discussed a special meeting before that. A notice will be posted at the mayor's office three days prior to the meeting if that occurs.

Councilman John Riffe and Durbin businessman Frank Proud announced plans for a new non-profit and faith-based ministry called Durbin Lighthouse. Riffe said plans for the youth center are still undeveloped and organizers need a building so they can begin soon.

Riffe asked council for permission to rent and remodel the third floor of the Durbin Town Office.

Council member Donna Rexrode, who lives on the second floor, said, "It better meet fire code."

Former Durbin Mayor Paula Dilley said the roof leaks, brick mortar is missing and the walls are wavy. She said she was afraid of potential lawsuits and believed it would take $30,000 for repairs.

Dilley said she wanted to make it clear she was not against the youth center, but the third floor of the building was not a suitable place.

Donnie Curry, Durbin Lighthouse boardmember, told council it would incur no costs.

"We want it to be a blessing to the town," he said.

Riffe said boardmembers wanted to meet with youth very soon and the town building was their best option at present.

"We want the opportunity to see what we can do with it," Riffe noted.

Councilman Donald Peck asked for more information and a contract proposal to be brought to the next meeting.

Proud and councilmember Pat Woodford shared a map with a proposed business district which would encompass the laundromat on the east end of town to the Durbin Town Office building. After the present library site was added, council accepted the proposal.

Proud said declaring a district would help with grants and developing ordinances.

Council approved $500 from the emergency Coal Severance Fund back to the general fund to pay Dramas, Fairs and Festivals. Apparently, DSF money was spent as general fund money before the mistake was discovered.

Varner announced a special meeting for April 20 at 7 p.m. to lay the levy.

Vance said Roy Teeter will be the temporary town worker until Roger Mick returns.

According to Vance, the July 4 festival has been canceled. Vance also announced the possibility of a liquor store returning to the town. The store may have Keno video lottery, Vance said.

Judge Jim Rowe Announces Bid for West Virginia Supreme Court

Judge Jim Rowe, an experienced circuit judge and former legislative leader, has announced he will seek the Democratic nomination for Justice of the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Currently, Rowe serves as Circuit Judge in the 11th Judicial District, which includes Pocahontas and Greenbrier Counties. He was appointed to the position in 1997 by then-Governor Gaston Caperton. Judge Rowe was elected to the remainder of the unexpired term in 1998 and re-elected in 2000.

"It is clear to many that the application of common sense is in short supply at the Supreme Court today. The Court always has to be mindful that its decisions make sense. West Virginians deserve a Supreme Court that ensures the practical result of their decisions is to help the people of the state, not harm them," explained Rowe.

It shouldn't matter if you reside north or south of Route 60, what "I believe it is absolutely essential to the economic survival of this state to insist that our Supreme Court of Appeals be impartial, evenhanded and fair, and move it away from the regressive and even hostile atmosphere that exists on the court today: an atmosphere that is fostered by one Justice in particular.... the incumbent in the upcoming election," added Rowe.

Judge Rowe was elected to four terms in the West Virginia House of Delegates, where he served as chairman of the powerful Judiciary Committee and as majority Leader. He also served as a member of the Commission on Special Investigations, which investigates corruption in state government. As a member of the legislative leadership, Rowe was a member of the Joint Committee on Government and Finance, which oversees the administration of the Legislature.

Judge Rowe is a graduate of West Virginia University and received his law degree from George Mason University. He is a member of the WVU College of Law Advisory Committee and is a board member of the WVU Alumni Association.

He resides in Lewisburg with his wife Sharon and his daughters, Mary Rennie and Julia Pleasants.

Democratic Candidate For Magistrate

My name is Kathy Beverage, and I am running for re-election for the Office of Magistrate.

I was born and raised in Pocahontas County. I have been a Magistrate for the past four years and prior to that I was a Magistrate Assistant for six years, for a total of 10 years of experience in the Magistrate's Office.

I have had experience in working in various law offices as a Paralegal and Legal Secretary for 13 years.

Candidates

A Magistrate must be impartial and be available at all times when on call as required by the West Virginia Code. Family or other relationships must not influence judgment.

The Judicial Code of Ethics requires Magistrates to comply with the law, always conducting themselves professionally and in such a manner that gains the respect of those whom we serve and promotes public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the Judiciary.

If you are looking for someone who will be available when needed, impartial on decisions, and interested in the jobs and the people it serves, I am the Candidate you seek.

I feel with my experience as a Magistrate, Magistrate Assistant, Paralegal and Legal Secretary, that I am well qualified to continue to be your Magistrate.

I feel that I have done a good job as a Magistrate in the last four years, and will continue to do so if re-elected.

I would appreciate your vote on May 121.

Thank You,
Kathy L. Beverage

Harvey Galford

Thank you for the opportunity to introduce myself to you. My name is Harvey Galford and I live in the Slatyfork area at the base of Snowshoe. I am the father of two grown children, Melissa and Isaac Galford. I am asking for your vote and support in my campaign to become Pocahontas County Commissioner. I will work full time to improve county services that will benefit you and enhance the economic climate in the county.

As County Commissioner, I will devote my energy toward several projects critical to the continuing development of our county. First, I will work to build an annex to the Pocahontas County Courthouse to relieve the overcrowded situation. Secondly, I will work to extend water and sewerage services to Pocahontas Memorial Hospital and Marlinton Middle School. These services would enable other health-related buildings to be built that would provide additional services to the county. Thirdly, I would work toward increasing the number of deputies in the Sheriff's Department to give county residents additional protection. Additionally, I would establish a perpetual account to replenish and/or Further, I will use my energies to establish flood control measures that benefit all residents of Pocahontas County. Finally, I will work to resolve issues and future concerns that may come before the commission.

My qualifications to be your next commissioner are based on my long-term association and record of service to this county. I am a tenth generation resident, the son of Wallace and Pauline Galford. My ancestors were farmers and business people who raised livestock and owned sawmills and other businesses in the county. I am a graduate of Marlinton High School and an honorably discharged Navy Veteran, recommended for reenlistment. I am a life member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 4595, and former Post Commander. Following discharge from the United States Navy, I graduated with Honors from the Norfolk Police Academy where I served as Class President. I served four years with the Norfolk Police Department where I was awarded three commendations. After moving back to Pocahontas County in 1966 to assist with the family farming operation and sawmill, I was employed as Deputy Assessor of Pocahontas County.

For over 35 years, I have been a businessman in Pocahontas County as owner of The Treasure Chest and Hillside Apartments in Marlinton.

1092nd returns from Iraq

American flags, hand-lettered posters and yellow ribbons lined crowded sidewalks in Richwood last Wednesday, as 52 servicemen of the 1092nd Engineer Battalion returned from their 14-month tour in Iraq. Sirens of ambulances and fire engines escorting the two busloads of national guardsmen announced their arrival as the motorcade rolled into town on State Route 39.

Three of those 52 servicemen in the Richwood detachment, Cole Seldomridge, of Green Bank, Clint Johnson, of Dunmore and Joel Ignos, of Hillsboro, are Pocahontas County residents.

After a week and a half of medical exams and debriefings at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, the servicemen were reunited with their families, who waited anxiously with smiles on their faces at the West Virginia Army National Guard Armory. As she waited, Seldomridge's mother, Barbara, said it was "great to see such a turnout," adding that such a showing must have made the troops feel well appreciated.

Johnson's mother, Debbie McLaughlin, said she was anxious for his arrival after a tour of service that included Tikrit, Mosul and Baghdad.

Numbering in the hundreds, a crowd of family, friends and neighbors greeted the servicemen with cheers as they got off the busses dressed in desert fatigues. The Richwood High School band was also present, filling the air with patriotic songs.

The troops and families assembled in the armory, where Nicholas County Commissioner Mert Meyers opened the brief ceremony welcoming the troops back.

"We're so proud of you," Meyers told the troops. "You represented so well our nation, our state, our county and our communities. We salute you and we salute your families who stood by you."

Hats were tossed and cheers filled the armory when Lt. Gary Krushansky said the words the troops were waiting to hear: "It is my great pleasure to say, 'Dismissed!'"

Johnson said he was looking forward to sleeping in his own bed, and seeing his family and fiance once again. Seldomridge aid he was glad to see his family and to return to West Virginia. Both plan to take it easy for while as they ease back into ivilian life.

Ignos said, "it was an overwhelming feeling to see that kind of support," referring to the crowd that showed up in downtown Richwood and at the armory. On the trip home, Ignos said he was looking forward most to spending time with his wife. He added that he was "not taking life for granted anymore."

Nearly as quickly as they got off the busses, the servicemen and their friends and loved ones filed out of the armory and made their way home. The scene was repeated across the state that same day at armories in Gassaway, Moundsville, Parkersburg, Salem, Spencer and Weston.

Finalist in national travel award

DANIELLE HOLSTINE

PCHS French IV student, Danielle Holstine, was selected as an alternate for a travel scholarship awarded by the Société Honoraire du Français. The society is a French honorary society with over 3,000 chapters in private and public high schools in the United States; it is sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of French.

The 14 finalists for the 10 scholarships of $750 were from the states of Florida, Maine, Georgia, Colorado, California, Illinois, Virginia, Missouri and West Virginia (Danielle was the only finalist from West Virginia). Danielle will travel to Quebec in June with the Pocahontas French Club; she traveled to Provence last Easter. She is the daughter of Heather and Michael Holstine of Dunmore, a junior at PCHS, and the treasurer of the Pocahontas Chapter (chapter #1774) of the society.

The SHF is open to students who earn an A in French for three consecutive semesters, plans to continue in French and promote the language, as well as carrying a B average in their other subjects The chapter will take in its new members at the Foreign Language festival, Monday, May 3 at 7:30 PM in the auditorium at PCHS. Inductees will be: Kelly Blechl, Karis Carpenter, Hazel Ervine, Hallie Herold, and Daniel Lacasse.

Dear Editor:

I am a reader of your newspaper online and appreciate the discussion and exchange of information in Pocahontas County on Tax Increment Financing. As the April 8 edition's Letter to Editor suggests, online research provides an abundance of research and studies, but I found that there is plenty to indicate that all is not well.

TIFs can hurt public schools by capturing new tax revenues that might otherwise have gone to the school district. If TIFs reduce the amount of revenue that a school district is receiving, the public school system has two choices: either raise its tax rate to collect more dollars, or make do with less and less money each year.

To review some documented studies on the negative effects of Tax Increment Financing (TIF)--read the following study completed by the University of Illinois Institute of Government and Public Affairs. TIF DISTRICTS HINDER GROWTH by Richard F. Dye and David F. Merriman www.igpa.uillinois.edu/publications/policyForum.htm#tif

Also, the National Education Association www.nea.org, has completed a five state (Ohio, Florida, Minnesota, Montana, and Texas) study on TIF and has issued a report which examines the extent and expense of these tax subsidies around the country. Overall, the report casts doubt on whether such subsidies promote balanced the privilege of being served by a public education system that may well have been the finest in the world at the time. This was due mainly to the State Legislature's penchant for robbing the NYC area to feed the rest of the state.

My brother, who now teaches music in the school system from which he and I graduated, tells me that things have really gone down hill since, but that's another story.

The last misconception of Mr. Miller's that I take issue with is that he accuses me of "judging." It seems to me that he's doing right much judging himself, assuming that I'm "set for life" and have come here only to vegetate for the next 20 or 30 years. Neither of these is true, as I think I pointed out clearly in my own letter of April 8, which I hope he has read by now.

As to Mr. Miller's ideas about revitalizing the economy of the area, I think his ideas are good but may be difficult to put into practice. Nevertheless, if enough people care enough to work for change, it can happen.

I guess we will see how it goes.

Respectfully,
Larry Himes

Dear Editor:

I am addressing this letter to all the citizens of Pocahontas County:

Are you tired of lying politicians undermining the true meaning of democracy?

Are you tired of your hard-earned tax dollars being spent on meaningless projects worldwide economic development, especially on the expanding scale at which governments are dispensing them (one estimate puts the cost at nearly $50 billion per year).

Dear Editor:

I'm sorry to have to drag this debate out a bit longer but I feel I need to correct one or two misconceptions that Scott Miller brought out in his letter of April 8. First, I did not intend to misquote him and if any of the wording of my original letter gave that impression, I apologize.

Second, Mr. Miller says that New York is a far cry from Pocahontas County. Contrary to what some people seem to believe, the entire state of New York is not a suburb of New York City. In fact, Upstate New York, that is everything pretty much north and/or West of Al-

WVU-based community design team visits Marlinton

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

COMMUNITY DESIGN TEAM members from WVU present their ideas for both short and long term improvements to the downtown area of the town of Marlinton to a group of community members on Saturday night. D. Tanner photo

A team of more than a dozen faculty, students and professionals visited Marlinton last weekend to gather community input and help residents develop a vision for the future of the town. The team members' areas of expertise included civil engineering, parks and recreation, landscape architecture, public administration, resource economics, and economic development.

With a group of over 20 community members present on Saturday evening, the design team laid out a series of short and long term plans for different aspects of the town, based on the community's input. The team's presentation was grouped into three segments: developing an image for Marlinton and marketing the town, the economic future of the town and developing a design "master plan" for the town.

The first segment, developing and marketing Marlinton's image, focused on attractions that set Marlinton apart and, according to the input received on Friday, are a source of pride in the community. These included the Greenbrier River Trail, the Opera House and the festivals hosted by the town.

With an estimated 22,000 visitors passing through Marlinton on the Greenbrier Trail each year, many of the design team's suggestions for image and marketing focused on businesses that might provide services to trail users and amenities and services along the trail that would lure users into town to do business.

Another idea proposed by the team was the creation of a multi-use "Marlinton Cultural Center." Such a center, according to design team members, could host a farmers market and serve as a venue for displaying and selling artwork and crafts created by community members. The center, in the words of one team member, could serve as a "jumping-off place" for the town, drawing visitors and activity into the downtown area.

area people said they felt pride in showing off, not the "strip area" along US 219.

As the presentation came to a close, one team member said that in Marlinton he saw a "vibrant community base," noting that earlier in the day, the McClintic Library was celebrating a national award that was the result of "people pulling together." Community members were encouraged to take action on some of the simple, immediate suggestions that were given in the course of the presentation.

According to Jeremy Morris, Program Director for the Community Design Team, the team has served close to 30 communities since 1997. From one community to the next reception of the team's input has been mixed Morris continued, the deciding factor being how much each community participates in the visit. Morris added that he was impressed with the level of participation Marlinton had shown, noting the broad representation of the community in the previous day's presentations.

On Friday morning the team's visit began with brief presentations by a wide range of community leaders, including Leslie Cain, of the Marlinton Business churches. With cameras and notebooks in hand, the members of the design team carefully noted what they saw throughout downtown Marlinton.

The team ended its day with presentations and posters from local youth and a lively "community input session" in the evening. The residents at the input session were asked what Marlinton was like 30 years ago, what it's like now, and what they hoped the town will be like in 10 years. In specific, residents were asked to focus on the town's businesses, activities and recreational opportunities.

While residents observed that Marlinton had and still has several small businesses, their visions for the future included full storefronts downtown, the establishment of an environmentally-friendly medium- to large-sized employer, and a renewed, wide-spread sense of community, identity and heritage in Marlinton.

When asked "what three things would you show to visitors," the residents' responses included places that instilled such a sense of community and heritage, including the Opera House, the Convention and Visitors Bureau depot, the McClintic Library and the downtown area in general. Responses also included the numerous areas of natural beauty accessible from Marlinton, including the Greenbrier River Trail, the Falls of Hills Creek and the Cranberry Glades Botanical Area.

On Saturday, the Community Design Team spent the day digesting all that it took in from the presentations, walking tour and community input session and assembling the pieces of its presentation for the evening.

While helping the community define its vision for the future, Morris said one of the goals of the team was "to provide practical ideas" for immediate steps that the community can begin to take "in the next week, three weeks, or six months."

A final printed copy of the Community Design Team's report will be available in June.

The center, in the words of one team member, could serve as a "jumping-off place" for the town, drawing visitors and activity into the downtown area.

In the segment on Marlinton's economic future, design team members discussed the importance of a strong telecommunications infrastructure, noting that broadband internet access is now as vital to businesses as railroads once were.

The design team gave numerous suggestions for boosting the town's economic base. Small business development, continuing the aggressive tourism marketing of the town and county and developing a better relationship with Snowshoe Mountain Resort were some of the ideas presented. The community was also given suggestions on how to draw people into downtown Marlinton with a farmers market and by aggressively promoting festivals and events at the Opera House.

In the third segment of the presentation students, faculty and professionals in landscape architecture, civil engineering and historic preservation showed community members a proposed design master plan for the town. The plan included ideas for landscaping along the streets, a redesigned Third Avenue that would allow for adequate parking and pedestrian safety between the Opera House and Senior Center, the creation of an interpretive park with a boardwalk in the marshland between Knapps Creek and the Greenbrier River and the restoration of historic buildings in the downtown area.

Chris Knorr, Structural Historian for the State Historic Preservation Office, added that when community members were asked the previous evening what parts of town they would show visitors, it was the downtown sentation.

Morris added that he was impressed with the level of participation Marlinton had shown, noting the broad representation of the community in the previous day's presentations.

On Friday morning the team's visit began with brief presentations by a wide range of community leaders, including Leslie Cain, of the Marlinton Business Association, Gail Price, of the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau, Jim Gibb, of Marlinton Town Council, David Zorn, of Naturally You Bed & Breakfast, Marlinton Elementary School Principal Wilma Dale, Parks and Recreation Director Lauren Bennett, Cathy Mosesso, of Mosesso Insurance Agency, Louise Barnisky, of the Pocahontas County Senior Center, Sam Brill, of the Building Commission, and Ruth Morgan of the Historic Landmarks Commission.

Each community leader told the design team of the town's strengths, highlights and challenges in areas ranging from travel and tourism to historic preservation to small business and entrepreneurship.

In the afternoon, the design team hit the streets of Marlinton for a walking tour led by County Commissioner Reta Griffith and The Pocahontas Times editor Bill McNeel. Karen Miller of the Army Corps of Engineers was present for the first part of the tour. As the design team stood near the park next to the Peacock building, she discussed the impact of the proposed flood control project on access to the Greenbrier River and the location of businesses that are currently situated along the river.

The tour visited several of the town's historic structures, community groups, businesses and April will be the anniversary of the Health and Sanitation Ordinance passed in 1985.

For authority of this ordinance, see WV Code Section 8-12-5.

A violation of any section of this ordinance will be punishable by a fine not to exceed $500 for each separate offense. We must keep our town clean and healthy, so cooperation from the citizens will be appreciated.

A copy of this Title 7 ordinance will be available for inspection at the town office.

Also, the Animal and Fowl Title 3 ordinance will be enforced. Basically, this is "the dogs are not permitted to run at large" section 3-204. If any dog is running loose, the owner will be fined not more than $50 for each separate violation.

We have walkers in our town and they should not have to be concerned about being bitten by a dog.

Please remember to keep your dogs confined or on a leash.

A copy of this ordinance can be reviewed at the town hall, as well.

Fair Housing Proclamation

Whereas, equal opportunity in housing is a right guaranteed to all Americans Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968; and

Whereas, the 36th anniversary of the National Fair Housing Law during the month of April provides an opportunity for all Americans to rededicate themselves to the principle of freedom of choice and to reacquaint themselves with the rights and responsibilities that are theirs under the law; and

Whereas, implementation of the fair housing policy of this town requires the positive commitment, involvement, and support of each and every one of our citizens; and

Whereas, the departments and agencies of this Town are to provide leadership in the effort to make fair housing a right that can be realized by all our citizens;

Now, Therefore, Be it Resolved that I, Dotty L. Kellison, Mayor of the Town of Marlinton, do hereby proclaim April 2004 as:

Fair Housing Month

in Marlinton and urge every citizen to support and endorse the practice and policy of fair housing in their personal lives, as well as in their workday duties.

Done at the City Hall, Town of Marlinton, State of West Virginia, this the 6th day of April, in the year of our Lord, Two Thousand Four.

Pocahontas County Libraries celebrate national award

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Visitors to the McClintic Public Library in Marlinton may have been surprised to hear music played by Pam Lund and her students and to find a gathering of nearly 50 community members, library staff and volunteers and state and local representatives Saturday afternoon. Or they might have simply considered it par for the course for a library system that has gained national recognition for its role in the community.

Addressing a crowd that filled the library's conference room to standing room only were Pocahontas County Free Libraries Director Allen Johnson, Federal Institute of Museum and Library Services Director Dr. Robert Martin, Steve Fesenmaier and J.D. Wagner of the State Library Commission, local filmmaker B.J. Gudmundsson, County Commissioner Reta Griffith, State Senators Walt Helmick and Mike Ross, Delegate Bill Proudfoot, PCFL Board President Gibbs Kinderman.

Each spoke of the contributions of the community in winning the award and the contributions of the libraries to Pocahontas County. Johnson thanked the staff, volunteers, VISTAs and members of the Marlinton Woman's Club and Library Advisory Board members for their contributions and the local legislators for their support. Noting the beautiful weather that day, Helmick told the crowd "the sun comes out when people work as hard as you have worked."

Kinderman also announced the library board's establishment of the "20/20 Fund" and thanked Emma Beard, the fund's first member, for her contribution of $10,000. Noting the beautiful weather that day, Helmick told the crowd "the sun comes out when people work as hard as you have worked."

Fesenmaier, who nominated the PCFL for the award, acknowledged the challenges—in terms of salaries, staffing and volunteers—facing all libraries in West Virginia and the leadership that the PCFL had shown.

Martin, whose agency granted the National Library Award for Library Service to the PCFL, congratulated the library and the community for its achievement and emphasized the importance of life-long learning. Martin said that the libraries had won the equivalent of "the Academy Award for libraries."

As Kinderman spoke he announced a new partnership between the libraries and Mountain Quest Institute, located in Frost, that will make the 12,000 nonfiction volumes of the institute's library available through the PCFL system. David and Susan Bennet, founders of the institute, presented Kinderman and Johnson with two books available through the institute.

The National Award for Library Service honors outstanding American libraries that have made extraordinary contributions to their communities, going beyond the services typically offered by a library. According to the qualifications laid out by the IMLS, "The principal criterion for selection is the library's systematic and ongoing commitment to public service through exemplary and innovative programs and community partnerships."

The IMLS website describes the four branches of the PCFL as "strategically located throughout the county's 950 mountainous square miles." It goes on to describe the libraries as "centers of activity in their communities" and "cornerstones of civic engagement." The libraries host scouts, business associations, town council, blood drives, a preschool playgroup and after school programs. Key to it's work in the community, the IMLS notes the thousands of hours of volunteer service and contributions from the community that the libraries receive.

The Pocahontas County libraries were one of three library systems and three museums to receive the national honor in January. The six were selected from among 90 nominees. A group from Pocahontas County attended January's award ceremony in Washington D.C. including Johnson, Griffith, Beard, Wagner, Library Board Treasurer Beth Lloyd, and [illegible] Sharp of Marlinton. Johnson and Sharp received the award for the PCFL and—along with Beard, Griffith and Little—were photographed with First Lady Laura Bush.

County Commission to seek funds for waterline at Linwood

At the County Commission meeting on Tuesday commissioners approved seeking a Small Cities Block Grant to fund a water line to serve homes and businesses in the Linwood area.

Angie Groves, with Region IV Planning and Development Council, was at the meeting to go through the necessary steps for begin the application process.

The request will be for a grant of $1,100,000 to lay about two miles of water line. The water will be purchased from the Snowshoe Mountain water system with the connection to be made near the golf course. The new line will go in two directions from the connection. To the east along Rt. 66 the line will go the intersection of the road to Clover Lick. To the west the line will go to the Rt. 219 intersection and then along Rt. 219 to a site for a tank part the way up Mount Airy. The new line will serve 107 customers. Of these 57 are of low/moderate income, which is a requirement for these grants. The county Public Service District will operate the extended water service.

The first step was a public hearing. Only two people, other than the commissioners and Ms. Groves, were at the meeting at this time and there were no comments made.

Three resolutions were passed to put the application process into action. The first was to give Commission President Joel Callison authority to sign the application for the grant. Also required is a fair housing resolution and a resolution concerning citizen participation in the project. Commissioner Reta Griffith abstained from voting on the first and last resolution to avoid any possible conflict of interest due to her husband's employment at the resort.

John Leyzorek, who arrived after the public hearing, expressed his opposition to the grant application. He said he believes it "to be a conspiracy to misappropriate public funds that

The Commission applied for a grant for the water line last year but did not receive it.

Marlinton Mayor Dotty Kellison met with the Commission concerning the annexation of the Edray Industrial Park. She said the town is in a difficult financial situation and can use the tax revenue that can come from businesses that locate there. In turn, these companies will receive benefit from being in the town, such as increased police protection, she said.

Ms. Kellison noted that the town's B&O tax does not include manufacturing, but is on construction. The present construction work going on at the park can give a needed financial boost to the town, she said.

Commissioner James Carpenter quickly noted that it would be unfair to tax the present contractor as he made his bid based on there not being a B&O tax. He said this would be taxing retroactively and probably not legally possible.

Ms. Kellison quickly agreed with his position and said if the annexation is approved, the town would not try to tax a contractor already at work.

Mr. Leyzorek expressed opposition to the annexation. He noted that the industrial park is to be an economic benefit for the entire county, not just Marlinton, and any increase in the cost of having a business on the site might discourage a company from locating at the industrial park. He pointed out that any additional revenue to the town could be offset by additional costs.

Mr. Callison stated that Marlinton has worked hard to bring water and sewer service to Edray and the industrial park and if the town feels it will be helped if the site is annexed, then the Commission should cooperate with Marlinton and support the request. The other commissioners agreed and it was voted to approve the annexation.

The Commission had a letter from the Greenbrier Economic Development Corporation, the owner of the industrial park, supporting whatever decision is made on the annexation request.

Ms. Kellison said the town attorney is working on the legal document for the annexation and will bring to the Commission when it is completed.

Leslee McCarty met with the Commission to discuss a farmland protection program for the

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response to the letters of M. Gayle Boyette and others concerning Tax Increment Financing (TIF) for Snowshoe Mountain, Inc. Let's review the court records, facts and the truth.

The White Sulphur Springs and Greenbrier TIF will include and revitalize the town of White Sulphur Springs. The proposed Snowshoe TIF would exclude the entire surrounding community of Linwood and Slaty Fork. Creating the White Sulphur Springs TIF "will allow the county to dedicate that money to improvement projects in the White Sulphur Springs area, including replacement of the town's aging sewer plant and revitalizing the downtown." (Pat Ramsey, Associated Press)

Unlike White Sulphur Springs, Snowshoe's TIF would selfishly revitalize only Snowshoe's corporate interests, not the surrounding community. Greenbrier County Commission president Steve Malcolm said, "It won't be used to help the developer. It will be used to help the infrastructure of the county."

Once again, Snowshoe's proposed TIF would be used to help the developer, not the infrastructure of the county. Snowshoe did propose a sewage treatment plant for themselves in 2002 that would have allowed Snowshoe to pick up [illegible] government services to the community." Snowshoe TIF money would be used to purchase more Snowshoe corporate assets. The property taxes from Snowshoe property owners, our public monies, would be used instead to build a $25,000,000 hotel that Snowshoe calls a "convention center."

Let me repeat again what Dolan Irvine, our Pocahontas County Tax Assessor, said about Snowshoe's proposed TIF: "When you freeze those property taxes for 30 years, it's going to be difficult for the county to provide the services most people expect." He went on to compare it to his salary as a teacher 30 years ago, which was $4,200: "That wasn't a bad salary then, but if you tried to live on $4,200 today, you'd have a terrific problem."

Boyette also rightfully observes: "So many communities have managed to have responsible development that allowed for growth while preserving the heritage as well as the environment." So let's review the facts of Snowshoe's environmental record.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has filed litigation against Snowshoe in Allyn G. Turner, Director, Division of Water and Waste Management, West Virginia Department of [illegible]

the developer, not the infrastructure of the county. Snowshoe did propose a sewage treatment plant for themselves in 2002 that would have allowed Snowshoe to pick and choose who they would and would not serve from a public utility. This was agreed to in Case No. 02-1009-WS-CN Snowshoe Water and Sewer Joint Stipulation and Agreement of Settlement with the West Virginia Public Service Commission, p. 18: "Except with the consent of Intrawest Resorts, the Company will have no obligation to provide any service from the Hawthorne Valley Waste Water Treatment Plant (WWTP) to any potential customer located outside the Resort..." However, Snowshoe was willing to provide residential sewer and water service to John Crockett for $694,000.

In January, 2003, after a six-month court battle, the West Virginia Public Service Commission revoked and repudiated the Joint Stipulation Agreement with Snowshoe. Was it because citizens cannot be deprived of equal access to a public utility and denial of equal access would have been a violation of the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution that states "...nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws?" Because Snowshoe was denied its sewer plant by the Public Service Commission, we now will have a regional sewage treatment plant to serve all the people, not just those who would have been served "with the consent of Intrawest Resorts."

Boyette rightfully says, "Tax money is the way we finance filed litigation against Snowshoe in Allyn G. Turner, Director, Division of Water and Waste Management, West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection, Plaintiff, v. Snowshoe Mountain, Inc. and Snowshoe Water and Sewer, Inc., Defendants, pursuant to W. Va. Code §22-11-22, violation of the Water Pollution and Control Act (WPCA) and the applicable WV/NPDES permit. This Civil Action (No. 03-C-29) is now being heard in the Circuit Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia. (next court date: Monday, April 26, 2004, at 3:45 p.m. in the courtroom of the Greenbrier County Courtroom located at 200 North Court Street, Lewisburg, West Virginia)

Among Defendant Snowshoe's 99 violations of the West Virginia Water Pollution Control Act, West Virginia Codes §22-11-1 through -28, include a 55-day chlorine spill into a tributary of Cupp Run, a native reproducing trout stream. This was an unreported chlorine spill with a TRC result of 0.73 mg/l with an average flow of 16.6 gallons per minute, or 23,904 gallons per day, at the time of the DEP inspection. West Virginia's aquatic life criteria for TRC are 0.019 mg/l with an average flow of 16.6 gallons per minute, or 23,904 gallons per day, at the time of the DEP inspection. West Virginia's aquatic life criteria for TRC are 0.019 mg/l for acute exposures and 0.011 for chronic exposures. (46 CSR§1, Appendix E. Table 1) Therefore, the concentrations of TRC in the Snowshoe spill would be toxic to trout. Further, after 55 days, Defendant Snowshoe had yet to call the spill telephone line. Failure to report a spill is a violation of 47CSR 11.2.2.a of the Legislative Rules (Special Rules).

In the same March 18, 2003, DEP inspection report, due to improper operation of the Inn at Snowshoe WWTP, Defendant Snowshoe was cited for having deposited a 375-foot sludge bed into the Big Spring Fork, resulting in a proliferation of sludge worms (positively identified by DEP Wildlife Biologist Janice Smithson), indicative of polluted waters. Degradation of high quality waters of the State is a violation of 46CSR1.4.b of the Legislative Rules (Water Quality Standards). Snowshoe's latest and 99th violation was cited January 20, 2004, for failure to comply with Phase I construction of wastewater treatment upgrades at the Snowshoe Village and the Inn at Snowshoe sewage treatment plants.

As Boyette said, "Before you decide on an issue, know the facts." These facts come from court records and DEP documents, not the internet.

publicity of what to expect over in West Virginia.

I was informed that the engineers have other locations available off the road to consider if within financial boundaries.

To impose such an objectionable eyesore on tourists and citizens is unbelievable when the authorities rebuffed and rejected the pleas of a West Virginia business to run gravel production businesses which were virtually out of sight, even on highways that are not designated "scenic."

Such a disposal plant is not allowed within 300 feet of a building supposedly because of the smell. Shouldn't bikers, hikers and tourists who support Pocahontas County be respected the same?

I have been a longtime supporter of historical and scenic Pocahontas County by contributing historical information to intrastate publications.

To further support tourism in our Pocahontas County, my present plans are to convert my bridge at Slaty Fork into a copy of one of the 1800s style covered bridges. It is so close to the scenic highway that some of it will rub off on tourists.

Dear Editor:

It has been established that a sewer system is needed for the Snowshoe area. However, it comes at a high price when one considers that its disposal plant location as shown in the original engineer's sketch is precisely adjacent to U. S. Rt. 219 and Scenic Highway 55. A disposal plant there is not only unsightly but also in smelling range for hikers, bikers and tourists.

The congestion of the waiting solid waste trucks entering or leaving the disposal plant will not only add to the eyesore, but can cause sudden slowdowns or accidents on the heavily traveled

The Postal Service changed the way the mail is routed sometime last year. It has made for slower service in our area. To get a letter 15 miles down the road now takes anywhere from one-to-14 days, depending on how the zip is read and punched into the computer.

Newspaper routing is even worse. I have a name and address of the new operations manager in Beckley where the letter mail goes. He may be able and will research the problems we are experiencing with the poor mail service.

I would like to let you know that this problem is in no way connected with our local post office. They are only doing what

Marlinton

Dear Editor:

I noticed the Pocahontas County Commission has an agenda item to discuss the annexation of the Edray Industrial Park into the Town of Marlinton and I have some concerns.

As an individual and a Pocahontas Development Authority (PDA) board member I am against the annexation because of all of the increased costs to any business wanting to locate in the Park. I am not speaking for the PDA but as a board member of the PDA. As you know the mission of Economic Development Authorities is to assist and encourage businesses to develop in their respective areas and to remove unnecessary obstacles to that happening. I believe the annexation is an unnecessary obstacle. It is difficult enough to get businesses to locate here without the extra burden of extra taxes.

I am aware that manufacturing is currently exempt from B & O tax; however, there could be other businesses that may be interested in locating in the Edray Park that are something other than manufacturing. Added taxes is another deterrent for that happening. Adding B & O taxes to the contractors that may be doing construction there will be another deterrent to Business as overhead to the entire project will be increased. The overhead costs will also need to be considered when a business is considering whether or not to locate to Pocahontas.

Annexation would be a good thing for Marlinton as it would put money in the tills; however, I believe Marlinton and Pocahontas County stand to gain financially when businesses locate here without the annexation. I believe the extra tax burden (after annexation) could be counter productive to Marlinton and Pocahontas County as it may be the deciding factor that keeps businesses away. Adding more obstacles to business will decrease the amount of business in the county and hurt the county in the long run although it may help the Town of Marlinton.

I realize that the Town of Marlinton stands to gain financially and needs the extra finances; however, I believe we may be shooting ourselves in the foot by adding the extra financial burden to potential businesses. After all, we do not have a waiting list of businesses wanting to locate here.

Suggest all parties look at the big picture and give careful consideration to the negative aspects of the annexation and proceed accordingly.

Bettie Brown, of Hillsboro, (left), was recognized this month for her thirty-six years serving our community in the nursing profession. Bettie worked at the Denmar State Hospital for 23 years as a nurse aide, then worked 13 more years at the Pocahontas Center before retiring this month. She is pictured here with the Pocahontas Center's Director of Nursing, Marie Soriano. Bettie plans to join the Pocahontas Center's Auxiliary in an effort to continue serving the unique needs of the elderly. Birthday

Austin celebrates 90th

Francis Austin of Grafton celebrated his 90th birthday on Sunday, April 18, with a family gathering at the Calvary Baptist Church in Grafton. Austin has been a frequent visitor to Pocahontas County since he served in the Civilian Conservation Corps near Frost in the Thirties. The CCCs was one of FDR's New Deal programs, designed to revitalize the economy after the Great Depression of 1929.

The CCCs employed young men to perform various public works; projects included planting trees, building flood barriers, fighting forest fires, and maintaining forest roads and trails. In his golden years Austin has become a bit of a celebrity, being one of the few surviving CCC workers, and is often sought out by historians to provide a first-hand account of the working conditions in the CCC camps.

Anniversary

45th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Loy Burgess, of Marlinton, celebrated their 45th Wedding Anniversary on March 28, 2004.

They were united in marriage on March 28, 1959, by the Rev. Skaggs, of Marlinton.

To celebrate the occasion, a cook-out was held in their honor.

Those attending were their son, Wayne, and his family, Debbie, Mandy, Selina, and friend, Kevin King; their daughter, Sherri, and her daughter, Muranda; their daughter, Connie, and her family, Linda, and Amy.

They are wished many more years of happiness together.

Wedding

Angela Beth Mowbray, of Anchorage, Alaska, and Christopher Bumgardner, of Elrmdorf AFB, Alaska, were married April 17, 2004, in the Base Chapel, Elrmdorf AFB, at one o'clock in the afternoon, with reception immediately following.

Beth is the daughter of Debra Mowbray, of Harrisonburg, Virginia, and the granddaughter of Elizabeth Cook, of Dunmore. She is the niece of Diane Sharp, of Marlinton, and of Kathy Lantz, of Keezletown, Virginia.

PCHS track takes first at Greenbrier East Invitational

The track team traveled to Lewisburg on April 15 to compete against numerous other teams at the Greenbrier East High School Invitational.

The men's team were unstoppable as they swept the meet to take home a first place overall, defeating even Class AAA Greenbrier East. Placing first for the Warriors was the 4x800m team (Nathan Rittenhouse, Chris Caplinger, Justin Dilley, Jacob Sheets), the 4x200m team (Ben Jewell, Andrew Morton, Jonathon Burns, Jess Burdette), the 4x100m team (Jewell, Morton, Burns, Ryan Ware), the 4x400 team (Joe Mosesso, Jewell, Morton, Burdette), Rittenhouse in the 3200m and 1600m, and, Burns in the 300m High Hurdles. Second places included Caplinger in the 800m and Sheets in the 1600m. Grabbing a third was the Shuttle Hurdles team (D.J. Jones, Clay Baxter, Chance Walter, Billy Currence). Coming in fourth was Burdette in the 100m and Ware in the 400m, and in fifth was Dilley in the 800m, Jewell in the 400m, and Jonese in the 1600m.

The women's' team also performed well, but due to small numbers and not being able to fill several competitions, were unable to place overall.

Coming in second for the Lady Warriors was the 4x800m team (Amy Coleman, Erin Coleman, Michelle Holstine, Caroline McKean). In third was After two game cancellations due to weather, the baseball team once again hit the field in front of many fans on April 17, as they matched-up against sectional rival Greenbrier West in a double header.

Josh Smith pitched the first game, picking up his second win of the season. Smith gave up only two hits and struck out six, along with hitting a solo home run in the bottom of the first to give the Warriors the lead. Greenbrier West tied the game 1-1 in the fourth inning as Smith gave up his only walk of the game combined with a double. The Warriors retaliated in the bottom of the sixth, scoring three runs to take the 4-1 victory.

The Warriors got hits from Andy Wayne, Ware, Smith, Brian Norrod, and Curtis Dunbrack, each with one, and Darrell Wright and Adam Irvine, both with two.

The Warriors were unsuccessful in the second game, as poor defense shadowed by poor offense allowed Greenbrier West to take the win. The Warriors currently stand 5-3.

PCHS had hits from Norrod, Wright, Feldes, Wayne, Ware and Withers, who had two.

LOCAL TALENTED YOUTH played old-time music at McClintic Library last week.

Youth entertain at McClintic Library

On April 16 the McClintic Library was alive with the sound of music. Seventeen young musicians whose grades ranged from high school to elementary school performed for the 3rd and 4th grade students at Marlinton Elementary School.

Pam Lund spends her time teaching the young musicians old time mountain music on the fiddle, the banjo, and the guitar. The musical demonstration was a perfect ending to an Appalachian unit that the 3rd and 4th grade students have been studying.

The unit involved lessons on Appalachian culture, folklore, toys, musical instruments, and ghost stories. Young musicians on the fiddle were Lucy Mosesso, Grace Ferrell, Micheal Ferrell, Jed Walkup, Bobby Dean, and Wesley Felton. Young musicians on the banjo were Kelsey Beverage, Melody Walkup, Steven Casto, and Fredericah Gardner. Young musicians on the guitar were Katelyn Beverage, Justin Dilley, Derek Jonese, Chris Caplinger, Logan Plumley, Luke Walkup, and Trevor Caplinger. We should be proud as a community to have young people involved in keeping our cultural past alive.

Webb vying for magistrate post

Pocahontas County Residents:

Thank you for this opportunity to "reintroduce" myself. I served the people of Pocahontas County as a DNR Law Enforcement Officer for 12 years. You may have heard of me, met me or even been arrested by me. I hope that in any of the above situations you were told or experienced that I am honest, fair and not afraid to "do my job." I enjoyed my job as conservation officer. Some of you have told me "it's just not the same without Doshia chasing us."

I have missed working for you, and helping people since I left the DNR. Therefore, I would like to be your new magistrate. My 12 years experience with law enforcement taught me a lot about the legal system, but most importantly, about people. Situations aren't always black and white. There are differences in intent. Justice should always be blind and equally applied to all.

A Magistrate has a great opportunity to redirect the younger generation, to show compassion or to send a strict message when needed. I believe that my God-given sense of right and wrong, my belief in justice, and my love of Pocahontas County and its people will guide me as your Magistrate.

Please afford me this opportunity to serve you once more and, as always, I will do my job with honesty and fairness – with God's guidance, I will give justice with mercy (Proverbs 16:20).

If you have concerns that I can address, please do not hesitate to call me at 799-7414, and remember on the Primary Date, Tuesday, May 11, vote Doshia Webb for Magistrate.

Sincerely,
Doshia Webb

Currently there is NO TIF proposal before the county commission. I do not think we should be so focused on a "what if" issue like TIF that may never be reintroduced.

IF the previous proposal comes back, be assured that my answer is NO for several reasons which I will not take the time to go over.

I would rather spend my time working on "here and now" issues like:

ATTENTION VOTERS!

The single most pressing issue of this election is Snowshoe Tax Increment Financing (TIF). A TIF allows Snowshoe to use future increases in their property taxes to pay on their mortgage. A TIF might well have been approved last year except for a technicality in the law. That technicality has been eliminated. If a TIF had been approved by your county commissioners, the county would have been short in the first year $847,500. Several county employees would have been facing their last day of work June 30, 2004, support for emergency services, 4-H, extension, county health department, and police services would have been sharply curtailed this year and possibly for the next 30 years. A TIF is approved by the county commission, not the voters. Your only means of opposing a TIF is by electing a county commissioner who is opposed to giving Snowshoe their property taxes back. It is important that your know where your candidates stand on this issue. Listen carefully to the WVMR debate May 8. Call in and demand that each candidate tell you up front if they support a Snowshoe TIF.

Opal E. Keen

Opal E. Keen, age 93, of Arbovale, died Monday, April 19, 2004. She was a resident of Pocahontas Center.

The daughter of the late Walter A. and Margie Beard Arbogast, she was born at Arbovale July 2, 1910.

Mrs. Keen was the widow of L. D. Keen. Others preceding her in death were her parents, a son, John A. Webb, a sister, Marie Kramer; and two brothers, Richard Y. Arbogast and Ralph M. Arbogast.

Surviving her are a daughter, Margaret Sutton, of Greenwood, Indiana; a brother, Argile C. Arbogast, of Mill Point; two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Graveside services were conducted Thursday afternoon in the Arbovale Cemetery by Lloyd Arbogast.

Legislators distribute funds for local projects

In a day-long trip that began at Mace and ended in Hillsboro, State Senators Walt Helmick and Mike Ross and Delegates Bill Proudfoot and Bill Hartman distributed funds for local projects ranging from rail improvements to a meat processing plant.

Helmick said the railroad line from Spruce to Bergoo will be cleared of brush and culverts replaced, while other types of heavy maintenance would be evaluated during the first leg of work.

The money, a total of $50,000, will come from the legislative contingency fund.

East Fork Industrial Park will get a paved road from that same fund, the senator said. The delegation met with Department of Highways Supervisor Jim McCoy to discuss the project which will also include paving the road to Widney Park.

Pocahontas County High School's meat processing facility received funding, as well, with $5000 going to the Pocahontas County Board of Education and another $20,000 to the county commission for the project. The court house paving project also was funded for $5000.

Marlinton Fire Chief John Burns accepted a $10,000 check for the volunteer fire department and Hillsboro Mayor Richard Workman received $50,000 to fund improvements to the sewage treatment facility there.

Pioneer Days received $6,000, as well.

The delegation also visited Green Bank School, where they heard the Pocahontas County High School Concert Band warm up for their concert. The marching band received $20,000 from the Budget Digest last year and is promised another $15,000 this year to complete the funding for purchase of 100 band uniforms, which cost a total of $45,000.

Special education topic at BOE meeting

The Board of Education met for a regular meeting on Monday.

The meeting began with an executive session with Dr. Dee Braley, Executive Director, Office of Special Education Programs and Assurances, in the state Department of Education. She discussed with the Board students and personnel in the county's special education program.

Following the executive session, Dr. Braley thanked the Board and School Superintendent Patrick Law for their work with the technical assistance team set up by the state Department of Education to work on problems the county's special education program. She also complimented county Special Education Director Janet Stevens.

Dr. Braley said she was pleased with progress made to date to solve the problems and noted there have been improvements in the special education program. She said the team has put together a good county strategic plan for special education.

The biggest issued facing the county's special education program is finding highly qualified teachers, Dr. Braley stated. This is a problem in a lot of counties, she noted. She promised help from the state in recruiting and retaining needed staff.

The Board voted to approve the strategic plan for special education. The plan sets goals for the special education program in the areas of personnel recruitment, retention, and training; services, including use of technology and a parent resource center; disseminating information on special education to staff and parents; curriculum; restructuring where needed; and monitoring and evaluation.

The plan includes assignment of responsibilities for various people for seeing the goals are carried out. As did Dr. Braley, Ms. Stevens noted that the biggest obstacles will be funding and finding certified staff.

Board President Kenneth Vance reported on the evaluation of the superintendent that was done in a special Board meeting on April 20. He said Dr. Law was evaluated on his roles as secretary of the Board of Education and an instructional leader as well as his relationships with the Board and with the community. Mr. Vance said the Board rated the superintendent from satisfactory to exemplary in the various categories, but did not match categories with rating.

The public hearing was held on the school system budget for 2004-05 with no comments received. The Board then approved the $12,225,731 budget.

This compares with a total budget for $14,510,934 for the present year. However, taking out funds from the School Building Authority for projects at the high school, both budgets are about the same; $11,040,731 for the coming year and $11,031,616 for the present school year.

Board Treasurer Alice Irvine reminded the Board that balancing the 2004-05 budget requires at least $494,360 in carry-over from this year's budget. She noted expenses this year are running a little under budget and revenue is slightly higher, so she is hopeful the needed carry-over will be available.

In response to a question from Mr. Vance, Ms. Irvine said the county will be 6.6 professional positions and 16.8 service positions over the number funded by the state school aid formula. She noted that most of the excess in service personnel is due to the county transportation needs but she feels there is no way to further consolidate any of the bus runs.

On a cold December night over Luxembourg in 1944, a young West Virginia pilot was flying his 91st mission. Nine more and he would be coming home, his fiancee in Spencer waiting impatiently.

Unfortunately, Lt. Harold Stalnaker and his P-47D Thunderbolt came under fire over Luxembourg, crashing near the small town of Kehlen.

Because of a misunderstanding between the U.S. Army official investigating the crash and local witnesses, the Army presumed that Stalnaker's aircraft and remains were unrecoverable.

In 2003, Lt. Stalnaker's closest living relative, nephew Charlie Stalnaker, of Snowshoe, was contacted by the U.S. Government Office of Repatriations. The remains of his uncle Harold had been found and identified in a field just outside Kehlen.

After nearly 60 years, Lt. Stalnaker will be coming home to rest, with full military honors, in Arlington National Cemetery on May 7.

Stalnaker and his wife are inviting any relatives of Lt. Stalnaker, as well as those who have an interest in aviation and WW II history, to attend the services.

In honor of his late uncle, Stalnaker and his wife created a website, illustrated with photos and letters, that tells the story of that last mission and the discovery of the remains of Lt. Stalnaker and his aircraft. On the website, Stalnaker posted a touching letter to his late uncle, who received few letters from home while on the front.

In his letter, Stalnaker describes a homesick 21-year-old anxious to get home to his fiancee in Spencer. Lt. Stalnaker even passed up a 72-hour pass to Paris so he could get closer to the 100 mission mark that would bring him home.

Flying back from a successful run in Germany on December 23, 1944 with other members of the 358th Fighter Group, 366th Fighter Squadron, Lt. Stalnaker came under fire—from another P-47—and was shot through the cockpit. According to Stalnaker, the misidentification of his uncle's plane was likely due to the fact that the Germans had captured some of the American planes to stage mock dog-fights with their own aircraft.

One of the pilots in his group, Lt. Dominic "Coppy" Coppolino, followed after and shot down the P-47 that downed Lt. Stalnaker. That pilot survived, his plane crashing near the spot where Lt. Stalnaker's plane nearly buried itself in the soft mud of the field near Kehlen.

According to Stalnaker, the Army official investigating the crash misinterpreted the villagers to say that the plane had burned for 30 hours, when it had really only burned for three. From that misinterpretation, the official presumed that any remains were consumed by the fire.

With no remains accounted for, Lt. Stalnaker's name was placed with 370 others on the Wall of the Missing in the Luxembourg American Cemetery and Memorial, just within the limits of Luxembourg City. Over 5,000 American dead who gave their lives in the Battle of the Bulge and the advance to the Rhine River, including General Patton, are buried in the cemetery.

In 1991, while excavating for the installation of a sewer line in a field, Kehlen native Raymond Hoffman came across and excavated much of Lt. Stalnaker's P-47D. The engine was donated to the Battle of the Bulge Museum in Clervaux.

Later, in 2002, Luxembourg Army Adjutant John Derneden identified the crash site and pilot and contacted the Central Identification Laboratory Hawaii (CILHI). A team from CILHI was sent to Kehlen to do a thorough excavation of the site. In Stalnaker's words, the excavation was treated "much like an archeological dig."

When Johnny Johnson, of the U.S. Government Office of Repatriations, left a message on Stalnaker's answering machine in 2003, Stalnaker said he was "curious," and had little idea of what Johnson might be calling about. When he returned Johnson's call, Stalnaker said, "I was floored." The call had reawakened what had long been a family legend.

In December 2003, Stalnaker visited his uncle's crash site, the town of Kehlen, the Battle of the Bulge Museum at Clervaux Castle, and The Luxembourg American Cemetery and Memorial. According to his account, Stalnaker was surprised by the hospitality and thoughtfulness of those he met during his pilgrimage—and by the media coverage surrounding his visit. Apparently, Derneden "had contacted the townspeople to alert them that a local mystery had been solved. The identity of the unknown American pilot killed while participating in the liberation of their country had finally been revealed."

During a news conference with Hoffman, the Mayor of Kehlen and Deneden, Hoffman presented Stalnaker with a valve from the engine of his uncle's P-47D, as well as an album of photos taken during the 1991 excavation and the CILHI dig in 2002.

Now, nearly 60 years later, Lt. Stalnaker—a flight leader, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Medal with 13 Oak Clusters and one Purple Heart—will be interred at Arlington National Cemetery on May 7 at 1 p.m. at the Fort Myers Chapel. An informal visitation and memorial is scheduled for Thursday May 6, 6 p.m.-8 p.m. at the Murphy Funeral Home in Arlington Virginia.

In lieu of flowers, the Stalnakers are asking that donations be made to the restoration of the P-47N Thunderbolt at Peterson Air & Space Museum at the Peterson Air Force Base in Colorado Springs, Colorado, 80914. Donations may be directed to the museum's director, Mary Elizabeth Ruwell.

High School. His three oldest children,. Emily, Anita, and Emery David, are also graduates of Pocahontas County High School. His youngest son, Hunter, is in the fourth grade at Marlinton Elementary School, and his grandson is in preschool. Emery was a former President of Marlinton Vikings Football team, and has also coached football at Green Bank, Marlinton, and PCHS. Emery has also served on the Pocahontas Development Authority and is presently serving as the manufacturing member for Pocahontas Woods.

Emery began his career in 1976 with Beckwith Lumber Company in Slaty Fork, as a lumber inspector. In 1981, he went to W. M. Cramer Lumber Company in Marlinton. In 1988, he became the yard manager for Mid-America Moldings, which is now ITL. Nevertheless, in 1992, he came back to W. M. Cramer Lumber Company, working as a lumber broker from the main office in Hickory, North Carolina. In October of 2002, Emery was asked to be the General Manager of the Marlinton office, and he accepted the challenge. Emery currently handles all sales for W. M. Cramer Lumber Company in Marlinton. He also manages 40 employees.

He also manages 40 employees, a controller, business manager, accountant and deals with loggers and customers on a daily basis. Emery is familiar with budgeting because he does the job regularly.

Emery has been around the school system for a long period of time and believes that the children are our biggest asset. He also believes that he can bring a different point of view to the Board of Education. Tough decisions are a way of life, and must be weighed out carefully. The greatest business in Pocahontas County is the education of our youth. They are tomorrow's future leaders.

Emery believes the four things on his cards are:

A professional who has been in forestry and lumber business for 28 years.

A parent of four children.

A farmer who along with his son and brother run about a 300 acre farm in the Hill Country.

A friend who believes a friend is someone you call on when you need them.

I attended school in Marlinton, and graduated from Marlinton High School in 1969. After graduation from Marshall University I returned to Marlinton and worked in the county as a social worker for several years.

I felt the need to continue my education and entered West Virginia University College of Law in 1978, graduating in 1981. During the summer breaks, I interned in the Pocahontas County Prosecuting Attorney's Office, and on my graduation from law school, I joined the office as Assistant Prosecuting Attorney.

After being out of the prosecutor's office for one term, I was elected Prosecuting Attorney in 1988 and served through 1992. I returned to private practice and was appointed as Prosecutor again in 1995 on the resignation of the prosecutor from office, and have since been re-elected twice, in 1996 and in 2000.

Over the years, I have had the pleasure, and the challenge, of prosecuting some high profile cases in Pocahontas County, and in nearby counties. At one time, not so many years ago, Pocahontas County had the reputation of being a place that one could "get away with murder." Together and with the help of some of the best police investigator's anywhere, I feel that I have dispelled that reputation. I've taken some difficult cases to trial, against incredible odds, and I've done my best to bring the people of this county justice.

This year, due to increases in the assessed valuation of property in the county, the county moves up in classification, and the Prosecuting Attorney's responsibilities become full time, a change that I look forward to very much. With those increased responsibilities comes a significant increase in the salary of the prosecutor.

But to me, the Prosecutor's office is more than a means to a comfortable retirement on tax dollars. It's an opportunity to contribute to the preservation and enhancement of the quality of life of every citizen of this county. I'd like to continue in that effort, and I hope that the people of the county will allow me to do just that. I ask for their vote and for their support.

I live in Buckeye with my wife of 26 years, Robin, and our

Griffith seeks reelection to commission

My name is Reta Jackson Griffith and I am running for reelection to the Pocahontas County Commission on the Republican ticket.

My parents are Robert and Freda Jackson of Marlinton. After growing up in Pocahontas County and graduating from PCHS in 1988, I graduated from Berea College in Kentucky in 1992 with two Bachelor's degrees in Sociology and Child Development, and attended graduate school at the College of William & Mary in Virginia for research in sociology. I married Ken Griffith, manager of Information Technology at Snowshoe Mountain Resort we have two wonderful children, Alex, age 9, and Casey, age 6. As a member of the Marlinton Church of the Nazarene, I teach the Nursery and Kindergarten Sunday School class and sing in the choir.

Having been your county commissioner for the last five years I have learned so much about what our county is capable of achieving by serving on numerous boards, including the Pocahontas County Senior Citizens, EMS Board, Tourism Board, Board of Health, Region I Local Elected Officials Board for the Workforce Investment Act, and the Local Emergency Planning Committee. My volunteer work covers several organizations including the Pocahontas County Free Libraries, the Marlinton Woman's Club, Tri-Fold Youth Center, and the Marlinton Elementary PTO. I have also volunteered to supervise a VISTA volunteer on behalf of the County Commission for the last year and a half.

As an associate member of the Marlinton Business Association I volunteer as their Byway Coordinator for Rt. 39 Mountain Waters Byway, and I assisted with organizing the Community Design Team visit for Marlinton this month. I serve as a Board member to the Community Collaborative, Inc. that helps provide sustainable communities leadership training. I am a 2000 graduate of Leadership West Virginia program and serve as a representative from West Virginia on the Public Lands Committee for the National Association of Counties.

I have assisted in writing, administering, or implementing over $1 million in grants for our county or its organizations. Some of those grants have included the USDA funds for environmental restoration at East Fork Industrial Park, Flex-E-grants for leadership training, Hazard Mitigation planning, grants for the Local Emergency Planning Committee, FEMA, Governor's Partnership grants for various boards and projects throughout Pocahontas County, Courthouse Security, small business computer training pilot project, and many more. An important item of mine in the last five years has been to make repairs to the courthouse. Since I

When I first thought about the idea of running for public office six years ago, I wanted tc help make decisions rather than just report them at the radio station. I won the election and was given that chance and feel that I have given this job of county commissioner 100% of my effort and am confident that I have provided assistance to people and communities who have joined together to work on accomplishing their goals.

I am very excited about the future of Pocahontas County and am looking forward to seeing many more projects turn into reality. We need to continue the strong, quality leadership that has begun. As the most qualified candidate, I need your help and vote of support to provide you with that leadership. I need your help and vote of support so that I, in turn, can continue to help support Pocahontas County as your commissioner. Thank you for your consideration and support.

If you have met me, I believe that you will find I am a genuine person who is dedicated to being involved rather than just a name on paper or a mouthpiece for special interests or individuals. It is important that I make a difference while working whatever job, project or task. My name is Jesse A. Groseclose and I am a candidate for the Board of Education. I am a 1989 graduate of Pocahontas County High School and attended Florida Institute of Technology where I studied flight technology and aviation management for two years. I then transferred to Shepherd College where I majored in business administration with a minor in economics.

After college, I chose to return to Pocahontas County and to our family business, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary. This has been done with the help of all my fellow commissioners. I have proven that I have character, intelligence and experience to represent the people of Pocahontas County not only to the state and federal agencies I come in contact with but also that I represent the majority of the people in Pocahontas County.

I am a candidate of good judgment and conservative beliefs, and am able to stand accountable for the county budget and also to serve as a responsible caretaker of your tax dollar.

The County Commission is one of the most important elected positions in our county. State and Federal agencies look to our commission for direction and leadership. I have worked full time for the County Commission for the best interest of our county. I do not represent just one district, one community, one business or one political party. I believe in listening with an open mind to all citizens or groups who have ideas about how to improve our county.

High Rocks girls are Youth in Action

The High Rocks girls along with teens from Step by Step led a session entitled Youth In Action at the Tenth Annual Family Leadership Conference April 2-4 at Canaan Valley Resort. They shared and discussed their experiences of making a difference in their communities.

At the conference they also listened to the keynote speaker, Michael Belmear, the Assistant Vice-President for Student Affairs at Fairmont State College. They attended a Public Forum where the ideas were put together into a report and shared with legislators and policy makers, and a Youth Town Meeting where they prepared a "youth agenda" for West Virginia family leaders. They had the opportunity to meet conference participants and presenters, and also attended a youth session on bullying.

High Rocks, located in Hillsboro, is a community non-profit dedicated to the growth of girls. They are an academic and leadership program for girls grades 9-12 from Pocahontas, Nicholas, and Greenbrier counties. They depend on small foundations, private donors, and volunteers to make their program for teen girls possible. If you are interested in volunteering or learning more, call 653-4891.

Commission awarded grant for court house improvements

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

David Jolliffe, from the state Courthouse Facilities Improvement Authority in Charleston, met with County Commissioners Reta Griffith and Joel Callison and Pocahontas County Sheriff Bob Alkire to award a grant of $22,000 to the county.

The grant will allow the county to seal the asbestos floor tiles in the first floor of the courthouse and one of the vaults, enclose the building's fire-escape, and conduct a structural evaluation of the county jail. The grant allocates $15,000 for the asbestos tiles, $5,000 for the enclosure of the fire-escape and $2,000 for the evaluation of the jail.

Jolliffe told the commissioners and the sheriff that theirs was one of 20 applications approved out of a total of 46 from around the state. Speaking of the county courthouse, Jolliffe told Griffith, Callison and Alkire "you've got a beautiful place." Jolliffe also said he was impressed with the level of cooperation between the county commissioners and sheriff in Pocahontas County.

The grant itself is actually an 80/20 reimbursement, according to Jolliffe. The state will pay 80% while the county is only responsible for 20% of the cost for each project. The county will have a period of six months to complete the projects, but may apply for an extension if necessary.

Dear Editor,

In last week's Times is a write-up in 50 Years Ago concerning the location of Preacher Francis' grave. I am perhaps one of the few who knows where the grave is. If anyone wants to look at the site, go to Fairview Church and follow the road that goes to Harter and Clawson. Follow the old road to a small stream, turn right and go about 100 yards to a spot on the left, about 100 yards up the hollow from the stream.

PDA discusses new shoe factory tenant, status of CD's

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

An additional 12-15 jobs may soon be coming to Pocahontas County if the PDA can move quickly to secure a new tenant for the former shoe factory in Marlinton. Lynn Grimes, owner of Clearwater Timber Resources in Dunmore, explained to board members his need for an additional storage and loading facility for the company's new operation, Frontier Firewood.

Grimes told the PDA that in order to meet demand, he will need additional facilities to store, package and ship the dry wood year-round. Even better news to the ears of PDA members was that Grimes would need to add a second shift of 12-15 more employees, in addition to the dozen employees already working for Frontier.

According to Grimes, Frontier Firewood is rapidly growing. Last year, the company moved 60-70 tractor trailer-loads of firewood. This year, Grimes is already anticipating enough orders to fill 200-320 trailer-loads.

The former shoe factory on Second Avenue in Marlinton, Grimes continued, would meet Frontier's storage and shipping needs. Grimes added that he would need the additional space "within about 30 days."

County Commissioner James Carpenter, saying that he was "interested in anything that would bring 12-15 jobs to Pocahontas County," said that the former shoe factory would work well as a short-term solution. In the long-term, Carpenter suggested that a shell-type building could eventually be put on the county-owned property across from the current Clearwater Timber Resources operation in Dunmore. According to Carpenter, using the property in Dunmore in this way would be consistent with the county's desire to see the lot used as an industrial park area.

Board members discussed some of the details of the facility and the logistics of Grimes' operation moving in while the PDA continues to sort out the equipment remaining from past tenants of the building. In spite of the relatively small hurdles, the other PDA members present each spoke in favor of seizing the opportunity to secure and retain more jobs and business in Pocahontas County.

PDA President Frank Proud advised Grimes that the PDA's Shoe Factory Committee—made up of Proud, treasurer David Cain and vice-president J.D. Morgan—would get in touch with him to work out the logistics of the move and getting a portion of the building ready for a new tenant.

Proud added, "we're optimistic about getting something going here."

Carpenter encouraged the other board members to move quickly and not let the opportunity slip by.

The PDA also discussed the status of the CDs from First Citizens Bank and City National Bank, totaling $35,000, that have been a point of litigation and confusion since 1997. Cain read a letter, dated March 31, 2000, from First Citizens Bank stating that the loan to West Virginia Shoe was in default, and, therefore the bank was taking the CD.

Cain also shared statements from City National Bank, showing that from March 1, 2000, through April 2, 2000, interest on the CD was transferred into the PDA's account. Then, the CD disappears. On the next month's statement, May 1, 2000, there is no record of the CD.

Norman Alderman contended that the $35,000 should still belong to the PDA and asked the PDA for copies of its documents and statements relating to the CDs so he could further research the matter and find whether or not the banks followed proper procedures when they took the CDs as collateral. Alderman also expressed the need to act quickly in case of any statute of limitations that

Students participate in National French contest

The National French Contest is an annual contest sponsored by the American Association of Teachers of French in March. This year 97,615 students throughout the U.S. competed at seven levels. This is a challenging examination, which focuses mainly on aural and reading comprehension and mastery of the structures of the language (grammar). Students from Marlinton Middle and PCHS competed. The tests are scored in Illinois and the winners ranked by national and state places.

Seventh place nationally in a special division for foreign exchange students was PCHS senior, Kwadwo Juantuah, from Ghana, who placed seventh in level 2.

At level 5D Emily Malcom placed first in WV, and at Level 4D Hallie Herold placed first and Danielle Holstine placed second in West Virginia. Division D is for students on the block schedule who completed the course in the previous semester.

The French 3 students did not compete, since this is offered in the second semester and the students had only been in class six weeks at the time of the examination.

Levels 1 and 2 are the biggest contests. Our county winners at Level 2 were Sarah Wilkins, 1st (11th in WV), Jennifer Rose, 2nd and Sam Whipple, 3rd. Our county winners at Level 1 were Cecil Rappold, 1st, Amy Sharp, 2nd, (both of M.M.S.) and Aaron Pugh and Alexa Furbee, 3rd, from PCHS.

The West Virginia Chapter of the AATF will furnish plaques for the top three West Virginia students in each level and division.

Rittenhouse breaks Gazette Relay record in 3200m

by Bruce McKean

Junior Nathan Rittenhouse of Pocahontas County did not know if he would be able to make the Gazette Relays Friday night due to a PCHS Band commitment Friday night in Elkins. The PCHS Band had state ratings Friday evening and pulled out their second straight perfect "1" ratings from all three judges. The band ratings were running a full hour late, so Nathan warmed up for his trip to Charleston by running the perimeter of the Elkins gym in his band uniform to the cheers of the band. Many of the track team are band members. The ratings were running a full hour behind schedule, so father, Julian Rittenhouse called Charleston to check on the progress of the relays.

As soon as the PCHS band finished their flawless two musical numbers about 6:30 p.m., Nathan was the first to leave the stage. The first race began, a car race to Charleston. Nathan changed into his track uniform in the car to save time. The Rittenhouses arrived at Laidley Field as the girls 3200m was being run. Julian ran to get Nathan's number for the race, and Nathan had time for only one run between the field goals to warm up.

After clocking the state's best boys Class A 3200m time in WV the week before at Doddridge County's Cline Stansberry Invitational, a 9:56.20 time, also breaking the school record, Nathan broke the Gazette Relays record of 10:26:53 Friday night, set the year before by Coon of Sherman HS, with a time of 10:13:59.

The Charleston Gazette reported that Nathan had no PCHS teammates to celebrate with since many on the track team had the band ratings conflict and the PCHS Prom was also on Saturday night. Nathan is Junior Class President, so he was immediately whisked back to Green Bank to finish up details of the PCHS Prom.

The baseball team hosted Tygarts Valley on Thursday, April 29.

Josh Smith was on the mound for the Warriors giving up only six hits and striking out six batters. The Warriors struggled offensively early in the game, allowing the Bulldogs to take a 3-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth inning.

Ryan Ware hit a two run homerun to cut the lead to one run; however, Pocahontas could not hold on for the win. Tygarts Valley took the 5-2 victory. The Warriors received hits from Ware, Darrell Wright, Devin McCoy, Adam Irvine, and Andy Wayne.

Junior track member Nathan Rittenhouse was the lone participator in the 2004 Gazette Relays held at Laidley Field in Charleston. Rittenhouse took the competition by storm, notching another first place victory with a 10.13:59, breaking the one-year-old meet record of 10.26:53.

New minister at Marlinton Presbyterian Church

Owen Gregory Moore (Greg) was installed as the new minister at Marlinton Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon, May 2.

Greg is a native of Valdosta, Georgia, the son of Leland Slater Moore, Jr., and Margaret Louise Holmes. He is the oldest of their four children, having two sisters and one brother.

A graduate of Valdosta High School in 1979, he graduated in 1983 from Valdosta State University with a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration in Accounting. He later attended Kennesaw State University in 1993 in pursuit of a Master's of Business Administration and was a Certified Public Accountant.

Through his experiences, community activities, and church fellowship, he felt a call to pastoral ministry and in December of 2003, he completed the academic requirements at Columbia Theological Seminary for his Master's of Divinity degree. He was an active member of Decatur Presbyterian Church in Decatur, Georgia and worked there as a minister intern during the summer of 2001 and the fall of 2003. During the summer of 2002, he worked as a Chaplain at Gwinnett Medical Center in Lawrence, Georgia.

His personal hobbies include running, biking, hiking, canoeing and scuba diving. He says he loves the outdoors, the mountains, and is an environmental person. One can find all this in Pocahontas County so he is thrilled to be here in Marlinton. He enjoys traveling and has been many places, including Alaska, Mexico, the Caribbean and Europe, but he says the mountains here in West Virginia are about as pretty as he has seen. He likes the people here and they have already made him feel at home, "a tribute to this wonderful community" he says. He looks forward to all aspects of ministry—preaching, pastoral care, and Christian education.

Much needed improvements on Williams River Road continue

The second phase of paving of the popular Williams River Road will commence in mid-May. The contractor will be working on both sides of the Tea Creek area, which will necessitate closures of portions of the road as they are being worked on. While there will be sections closed to through traffic, access will be maintained to the Tea Creek Campground from at least one direction at all times.

"We are excited to be able to continue to repair and upgrade this heavily-used road," said Marlinton District Ranger Rondi Fischer. "Unfortunately because of the nature of the work we cannot have the contractor working and people traveling the entire road at the same time. Work has to take place when the weather is warm, which is usually the same time people would like to be out and about on the road and along the river. In the short term this will undoubtedly be an inconvenience to people who like to travel and fish in the area, but in the long run we'll have a much better road surface."

Forest Service officials have able from the west. Once this section is re-opened work will continue westward, with the only available access to the campground being off the Highland Scenic Highway.

There will be standard "road closed ahead" signs posted in the area, but people planning trips along the road are encouraged to call the Marlinton Ranger District office of the Monongahela National Forest to obtain the most current information about which sections are being worked on at any given time. District staff can be reached at 304-799-4334 during normal business hours.

This year's work will be the second of three phases planned to complete paving the entire 18 miles of road between FR 216 and Dyer. The project has been broken up in order to be able to obtain funding. It is hoped that the remaining portion can be paved in 2005.

who like to travel and fish in the area, but in the long run we'll have a much better road surface."

Forest Service officials have long wanted to be able to control both the dust arising from traffic and sediment washing off the road into the adjacent river. Because there are camping sites along the road, and the area is popular with anglers, the dust was a major nuisance to users, while also reducing visibility for drivers. Due to the proximity of the river to the road, sediment washing off the road was a concern for fish habitat and aquatic health. "We rarely pave Forest Service roads because it is expensive to do so," said Fischer. "In this case we think it will really improve both the visitor experience and do a much better job of protecting the river."

The first section to be closed will be southwest of the Highland Scenic Highway to the intersection of FR 216. Once that work is completed this section will be re-opened to traffic. The next area to be temporarily closed will be to the northwest of the Highland Scenic Highway to the entrance of the Tea Creek Campground. Access to the campground will still be avail-

An Open Letter to the Democratic Voters of Pocahontas County

I, Eugene M. Simmons, have been a resident of Pocahontas County for 43 years. I am married to Linda Foe Simmons, a former resident of Cass, West Virginia and we have four children. I have practiced law in Pocahontas County in excess of 40 years and having served 12 years as your prosecuting attorney, I am thankful for the opportunity to run for this important office and would appreciate your support in this election.

The duty of the prosecuting attorney is to attend to criminal business of the county in which he is elected but he also has the duty to attend to the civil suits in that county including those involving state departments, county commissions and, in more particular, the Pocahontas County Board of Education. If elected, I pledge to not only actively prosecute all criminal matters but to attend the County Commission meeting and also the Board of Education meetings with the promise to eliminate the need to pay $250 per hour to out-of-county attorneys. I further pledge that, if elected to a four-year term, to make myself available for an additional four year term should the voters decide.

My motivation to seek the Office of the Prosecuting Attorney is based on my desire to provide Pocahontas County with a qualified attorney to handle all criminal and civil matters. Thank you for your consideration.

Gibb and Griffith Commission nominees

On Tuesday 2611 of the registered voters (very slightly over 50%) in the county braved the beautiful summer weather to go to the polls and cast their primary election ballots. Voters of both major parties had contests on a number of the races.

In the races for County Commission nominee, Republicans voters gave incumbent Reta Griffith a narrow win over challenger Doug Friel, 445 to 393.

Democrats had four candidates to choose from and elected Jim Gibb with 30% (453) of their votes. He was followed by Kermit Friel with 27.7% (418), political newcomer Tracy Samples with 25.1% (379), and Harvey Gifford, 17.2% (259).

There will a third county commission candidate on the ballot for the General Election in November. John Leyzorek filed a petition to be the candidate for the Libertarian Party.

Former prosecuting attorney Eugene Simmons ran a strong race against incumbent prosecutor Walt Weiford in the Democrat primary, but lost with 711 votes to 862 for Mr. Weiford.

Mr. Weiford said he expected the race to be "even more of a squeaker than it was." He recalled the election in 1984 when, after two recounts, he lost to Mr. Simmons by just seven votes.

Asked what he felt tipped the scales in his favor, Mr. Weiford responded, "I would like to hope people feel I've did a good job. We've had some tough problems to fight with prescription drugs and property crime." He said he "thanks voters for what I feel is a vote of confidence. I won't take it for granted and I'll do the best I can do to make them proud they vote for me."

In the other contested race at the county level for Democrats, incumbent Kathy Beverage and former conservation officer Doshia Webb won nominations for magistrate in a tight race, with 867 (34.7%) and 852 (34.1%) votes. Incumbent William Hevener had 779 votes (31.2%)

Ms. Webb said that she expected the race to be close, acknowledging that she didn't have the advantage of being an incumbent, but had worked hard

Marlinton Council selects Kellison as mayor; Mutscheller to be recorder

The Select Committee, composed of Reid Mitchell, Loretta Malcomb, and Harper Nelson, submitted the name of Dottie Kellison for election to the office of Mayor and she received all nine votes of committee and council. Mayor Kellison accepted and thanked everyone for their vote and support.

Bike Night has been a yearly event and Gale Price presented a request for permission for Bike DAZE by the Harley group. Saturday, August 21, the group will leave Snowshoe at 11:30, coming into Marlinton about 12; activities all afternoon, and will be over at 6 or 7 p.m. One of three major events will be motorcycle marketing. Council approved.

Karen Miller, of the Corps of Engineers, was present to report the plan is printed, Riverside re-mapping is being done because of buildings and filling done, looking at possibility of having one instead of two pump stations, spoke with Senator Helmick in regard to where the monies are, need to set up meeting in June on a Tuesday or Thursday at 7 p.m. for workshop, setting up time frame on real estate, etc.; Riverside will be first.

Cheryl Dean asked for a variance of 10 ft. rule in dealing with a road at car wash at Riverside; she needs to build within five feet for exit from a car wash unit, and wants bordering street opened on other side. Council voted to approve the variance.

Council continued the 911 Ordinance since the County will have additional readings.

Permission was granted for Hillsboro Fire Department to access Town property during their activities at Stillwell Park.

Harvest Festival will be September 25 and David Cain asked permission to use streets for the event; he asked permission to extend use to Mitchell Chevrolet area. Mayor said they need specific streets listed. Council approved.

Discussion followed on a proposed sewer rate increase ordinance, explaining the State told what had to be done. The rate will increase from $19.88 per two months current to $25.84 for two months.

A deep chlorinating unit is needed, to cost $8,000, and funding is being sought.

A special meeting will be held Monday, May 10, at 6:30 p.m. for the first reading of the Sewer Ordinance and also the Selection Committee will report name/names for election of Recorder.

Mayor Kellison reported the State says there is too much sewage going into the river and someone will come and talk about it.

There are now 80% of people signed up for water project and funding is assured.

A problem was reported at a home near Court House where cinder blocks need to be removed because trash truck can't get in.

The Mayor reported going before the County Commission on annexation of Edray Industrial Park and they will consider it the next meeting.

Billy McKenney is leaving full time employment at the water plant on May 31 and possibilities for workers there were discussed.

Marlinton Town Council met again on Monday, May 10.

The scheduled reading of the sewer service rate ordinance was not held because material was not received from the law firm of Steptoe and Johnson.

The Select Committee reported the names of Robin Mutscheller and David Cain as nominees for the office of Recorder. All nine members of Council and Committee were present. Mutscheller was declared Recorder with five out of the nine votes. She accepted with appreciation and promised to do her best.

Committee was notified to submit names for a council member to be voted on Tuesday, May 18, at 7 p.m.

Next was the reading of the Resolution for Annexing and Minor Boundary Adjustment to the Town of Marlinton for submission to the County Commission for the 104.7 acres of the Greenbrier Valley Economic Corporation Edray Industrial Park. This was adopted. The Mayor explained that the area needs water and sewer service, fire and police protection, etc..

Council adjourned after the short meeting and Robin Mutscheller was officially sworn in as Recorder.

Genealogy group slated to receive special gift

The regular meeting of the Genealogy Group of the Pocahontas County Free Library will be held Tuesday, May 18, at 6 p.m. at the McClintic Library in Marlinton.

Special guest for the evening will be Curtis Sharp from Shepherdstown, who has been doing genealogy for many years and has an extraordinary collection of names of the Sharp, Morrison, Arbogast, and Hill families and the people who married into those families. Many of these names have been in Pocahontas County for countless generations.

Sharp will make a special gift to the McClintic Library of a CD of his work with over 20,000 names and pieces of information. "This is just a wonderful gift we will be getting." said Allen Johnson, Library Director. "We are becoming the center point for genealogists who search for Pocahontas County information and this really will be a cornerstone of our information that we can share with researchers from all over the state and country."

Other information scheduled to be discussed at the meeting is the Video Project headed up by Patchwork Film's B.J. Gudmundsson. The group will assess fund raising efforts of the initial monies needed for the project and the other project business and details.

Residents of the eastern portion of the county, around Dunmore, Green Bank and Durbin, are encouraged to call the library to let them know if there is enough interest in genealogy projects to result in meetings being held in the Durbin or Green Bank area. "We want to work with and assist everybody in doing their family genealogy," says Doug Jackson, of the group. "We can set-up meetings up in that area if folks need it."

Commission begins Farmland Protection Program

At its meeting on Tuesday, the County Commission took the first step towards the creation of a Farmland Protection Program with the passage of a resolution authorizing the creation of the program and the board needed to manage the program.

The resolution states the Commission "recognizes that the agricultural community of Pocahontas County provides sources of agricultural products; enhances tourism; protects worthwhile community values, institutions and landscapes which are inseparably associated with traditional farming; and controls the urban expansion which is beginning to consume land, topsoil and woodland of the county."

Under the farmland protection program, landowners can voluntarily protect agricultural land by placing a conservation easement on the property. This sale of development rights is permanent. Agricultural use of the land can continue.

The next step is the appointment of the Farmland Protection Board, which consists of seven members. The law spells out that this board is to be made up of a member of the county commission, a representative from a development authority serving the county, one farmer connected with the county farm bureau, one farmer connected with the local soil conservation district, one farmer with out these connections, and two county residents who also do not have connections with the farm bureau or soil conservation district.

Members of the board will serve without compensation but can be reimbursed for their actual expenses.

from the volunteer rescue squads in the county and the 911 Board. She said Redi Care is not expecting to be included in the distribution of the money the Commission appropriates to the county Emergency Medical Services Board. They are asking for the Commission to provide a "squad house" where their personnel can stay between runs.

Mr. Carpenter said this is good news for the county, as it has been getting more and more difficult to arrange transports from the hospital. Patients now often have to wait several hours for a transport.

The Commission's approval of Redi Care's request did not include the commitment to provide the personnel quarters. Commissioners said, however, they would help the company find quarters. Having the Redi Care ambulance located at the hospital was mentioned.

In another matter concerning the hospital, the Commission passed on second reading its order on the issuing of the new Pocahontas Memorial Hospital Lease Revenue bonds. The new bonds will refund two existing bond issues that provided funds to build the new hospital building and the water/sewer system that serves it. The new bonds will be paid off in less time than the existing bonds, with a saving of $30,000 in interest. Also, an existing restriction in the present bonds on the number of other customers the water/sewer system can serve will be eliminated.

The bonds are actually issued by the Pocahontas County Building Commission and this agency has set a public meeting on the bond proposal for June 2, at 9 a.m. at the court house.

Scott Millican met with the Commission to Members of the board will serve without compensation but can be reimbursed for their actual expenses.

Anyone interested in serving on the Farmland Protection Board should write a letter to the Commission.

Martin Saffer, attorney for the Town of Marlinton, met with the Commission concerning the annexation of the land at Edray that is being developed [illegible] industrial park by the [illegible] Valley Economic Development Corporation. He said this annexation is being sought by the town under the "minor boundary adjustment" section of state law. The only landowner involved is the GVEDC, Mr. Saffer stated. One other landowner was originally within the boundary, but it was redrawn at his request to exclude his property.

Mr. Saffer said the town is asking the Commission to find that the proposed expansion is appropriate as a minor boundary change. The Commission agreed to this request and set a public hearing on the annexation at its June 15 meeting, at 10 a. m.

Mr. Saffer also discussed the requirement of the state Public Service Commission that a wavier be obtained from the county Public Service District to allow the town to service customers not within the town limits. The town is extending its sewer system to serve Ca[illegible]

Scott Millican met with the Commission to express his opposition to the name sought by the Hunters Ridge Owners Association as the name for the road serving their development. He noted that he is the owner of most of the lots in the development, which is located off of Rt. 66, near the new access road to Snowshoe.

The name being requested is Hunter's Ridge Road. Mr. Millican said this name come from the son of a previous developer on the project and he would like to see a name with meaning for the area. He said several local people have said the area of the development is called "Ferren Flats." However, no one at Commission meeting was familiar with this name. This included Roger Cain, who grew up in Cass.

The Commission told Mr. Millican they would consider his comments, but took no other action on the road name issue.

The Commission took also took no action on two other items on its agenda.

One was the money from the $30,000 from Governor's Contingency Fund that is to pay for golf privileges for state park guests at the Pocahontas County wavier be obtained from the county Public Service District to allow the town to service customers not within the town limits. The town is extending its sewer system to serve Campbelltown and the Edray area, including the new industrial park, and many of the customers are outside the town limits.

Commissioners said they did not feel they have authority to grant this waiver and told Mr. Saffer it would have to come from the PSD. They said, however, that is it turns out Commission action is needed, they will be glad to do whatever is necessary to help with the sewer extension.

Commissioner James Carpenter asked about the response of property owners in the Edray to upcoming extension of the sewer service to the area, since the law requires hooking onto a sewer line if one passes a home or business. Mr. Saffer replied that there has been positive response from those providing the right-of-way.

Authority was granted for Redi Care Ambulance Service, of Richwood, to operate in the county and to be "toned out" for emergency calls by the 911 center. The company plans to offer advanced life support ambulance service as well as emergency and non-emergency transports from Pocahontas Memorial Hospital.

Commissioner Reta Griffith said letters of support for Redi Care's request have been received

One was the money from the $30,000 from Governor's Contingency Fund that is to pay for golf privileges for state park guests at the Pocahontas County Country Club's golf course as well to pay for golf lessons. Efforts are being made to work out an agreement with the Club as well as getting, in writing, from state Sen. Walt Helmick directions on exactly how the money is to be used. Ms. Griffith ruefully noted that the commissioners "are in the middle" on this matter.

The other agenda item was the allocation of the 2002 funds the Commission received from the Rural Safe Schools and Self-Determination Act. This money comes from the sale of natural resources on federal land and most goes to school systems in counties with federal land. However, the law, which is designed to stabilize the amount a school system receives each year, also allocates a small amount of the money to county commissions. Title III of the law allows commissions to use the money in a limited number of ways, associated with forestry and federal land.

The Commission has given its Title III money for 2001, 2002, and 2003 to Pocahontas Woods for its woodworking classes. However, when a question was raised about whether the required 45-day comment period was held for the 2002 allocation, Pocahontas Woods

Vandevender top of class at Davis & Elkins commencement

Drew Tanner

As if the pressures of finals week at Davis & Elkins College were not enough, Angela Vandevender received a phone call asking her to prepare a speech for Sunday's graduation.

Vandevender, of Durbin, said she knew she was in the running for valedictorian, having maintained a 4.0 GPA throughout her studies at Davis & Elkins, but did not know for certain until Thursday, when she received the phone call that made it official.

On Sunday, May 2, Vandevender received her Bachelor of Arts in Elementary Education and gave a speech to her classmates celebrating their success and the centennial of the college. Vandevender is no stranger to academic success, having also graduated as valedictorian of her class at Pocahontas County High School in 1996.

Currently, Vandevender is in a substitute teaching position at Green Bank Elementary School until the end of the school-year. "I hope I'm able to teach full time here at Green Bank Elementary next year," Vandevender said. Once she secures a teaching position, Vandevender said she would consider pursuing a master's degree.

Davis & Elkins College graduated 143 students this year. The commencement ceremonies celebrated both the graduates' achievements as well as Davis & Elkins' first 100 years. Vandevender and 94 classmates received bachelor's degrees from Davis & Elkins. The College also awarded 48 associate degrees this year, most of them to graduates from the Nursing Program, which had one of its largest classes in 10 years.

In a special ceremony, Davis & Elkins President Dr. Tom Mann conferred Professor Emeritus Status on Dr. Jim Van Gundy, Professor of Environmental Science, who has retired from Davis & Elkins after 29 years. Van Gundy was awarded a medallion of the College seal and given a College chair in honor of his contributions to the college and his profession.

Davis & Elkins Trustee Dr. Jack Martin received the Honorary Doctor of Science degree, and the Honorable Michael F. DiMario, 23rd Public Printer of the United States who served under Presidents Clinton and Bush, gave the commencement address.

Vandevender was one of three students who graduated Summa Cum Laude.

Nine students graduated Magna Cum Laude including Leigh Ann Reynolds and Kristy Sisler, both of Pocahontas County.

Community honors Harper Galford for 40 years of service

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

When Harper Galford received notice of his appointment by President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1964 as Green Bank's eighteenth postmaster from Senators Jennings Randolph and Robert Byrd, a first-class postage stamp cost five cents.

On Saturday, May 15, nearly 90 people stopped by the Green Bank Senior Center for cake and refreshments and to wish Galford a happy retirement.

Stamps these days are 37 cents, but Robert Byrd is still in Congress.

Serving as postmaster for 40 years, Galford had been a first-hand witness to nearly a quarter of the Green Bank post office's 175-year history.

Galford was one of several Green Bank residents who took the Civil Service Exam to qualify for the position. People who took the exam were evaluated on a point system based on their exam scores, work experience and past government service. He scored well on the exam, and because of his two years of service in World War II from 1944 to 1946, Galford's overall application was boosted by points given for veteran's preference.

During his first six years as postmaster, the postal service looked very different than it does today. Until 1970, U.S. mail was delivered by the federal Post Office Department. As a federal agency, the Post Office Department was directly administered by the federal government. Each postmaster was appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and Congress controlled the department's budget, which was funded by tax revenue, like other federal agencies.

In 1970, major changes took place when the Post Office Department became the United States Postal Service. Galford recounted that after 1970, the USPS "had to make their own way. After 1970 they had to raise postage rates to stay solvent. They weren't allowed to run a deficit."

Another change that Galford recalled was ordering stamps. Under the Post Office Department Galford said he ordered stamps from Washington, D.C. Eventually, under USPS restructuring, orders for stamps were filled regionally. In Galford's case, stamps for Green Bank were ordered from Charleston.

The types of postage used by most people also shifted. Before sending most items first-class had become the norm, Galford recalled a larger amount of third-class, non-profit and business reply mail.

Shortly before Galford was appointed postmaster, the Green Bank post office moved across Wesley Chapel Road to its current location, a building constructed by the late Dan Taylor, of Green Bank, in 1961.

According to Galford, the building is now owned by Taylor's son Zane, who rents the building to the USPS. Galford noted it is a common practice for the USPS to rent the post offices it operates in smaller towns.

At 40 years, Galford is the Green Bank post office's longest serving postmaster. Second to Galford is Thorne Wooddell, who served as postmistress for 30 years from 1931 until 1961. During his service, Galford said he "didn't miss a paycheck."

Now that he is retired, Galford said he has enjoyed "not having to get up so early" and looks forward to investing more of his time in the farm that he and his wife, Mary, have kept in Green Bank throughout his 40 years as postmaster.

HARPER GALFORD, WITH his cake, has retired after 40 years of service with the U. S. Postal Service.

Holsted-Curry Vows Read

A hush fell over the gathered guests as Dianne L. Curry, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Curry, of Durbin, stood at the chapel entrance. As she looked down the long aisle to the altar, she saw Larry L. Holsted, son of the late Mr. Clarence Holsted and Mrs. Mabel Holsted, as he stood waiting for the age-old ceremony to unite them in holy wedlock. The ceremony took place at the Church of God (Universal) Chapel, Hagerstown, Maryland, Sunday, June 29, 2003, at 2 o'clock p.m. Officiating was Gregory Tyler, Youth Minister.

The bride wore a traditional full-length gown of white peau de soie, with bodice, long tapered sleeves, stand-away collar over laced-with-embroidered-pearl Venice lace, flowing down into the shirt ending with a hemline border of the same. She completed her attire with a tiered chapel-length veil of illusion held in place by a bandeau of lace, satin and pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of flowers and greenery. The bride was escorted to the altar by her brother-in-law, Ed Hinson, and given in marriage by her family.

Music was beautifully done by Samuel Keaton at the piano and Roy Craig, guitarist. The Church Handbell ensemble played as she walked down the aisle. Randy Gossard and Jodie Crooks sang, "I Believe That God Brought Us Together." The bride sang to the groom, "You Light Up My Life." Her sister, Kaye, and the bride sang, "Each for the Other and Both for the Lord." The bride is the lead singer in the West Virginia Trio, and they sang, "Love Me Tender" during the ceremony.

Pastor Alvin A. Craig read to the couple their wedding pledge, in which they vowed before God and the assembled guests to keep their vows with God's help always before them in their marriage, and then they signed it before the guests in testimony of this vow.

Serving as Matron of Honor for her sister was Sandra Kaye Mullenax. Bridesmaids were twins, Arlene Hause and Charlene Gossard, and Julie Martin, all friends of the bride and groom. They each wore blue and green three-piece satin tea-length gowns.

Leah Shatzer was the flower girl, dropping rose petals from a bouquet the groom had previously given the bride in the bridal pathway, while William Crooks carried the Bible. Lyle Holsted, brother of the groom, served as best man for the groom. Groomsmen were Jim Morehouse, brother-in-law of the groom, Dale Mullenax, brother-in-law of the bride, and Lonn Palmer, friend of the groom. Timothy and Gregory Mace, nephews of the bride, were ushers. Amy Umstot, great-niece of the bride, was the guest book attendant. Heather, Nikita, and Tiffany Horning, friends of the bride and groom, distributed the programs and bubbles.

A reception followed in the Maugansville Community Center.

The bride is a graduate of Green Bank High School and is employed at Truth Christian Academy. The groom is a graduate of Lakeview High School in Michigan, and is employed at General Motors in Martinsburg.

Following a wedding trip to West Virginia, the couple is at home at 179906 Broadfording Road, Hagerstown, Maryland.

Out of town guests included ones from West Virginia, Michigan, South Carolina, Louisiana, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Jamaica, and the Cayman Islands.

Dear Editor,

It treats citizens like children (should not be treated), attempting to soothe without telling the truth. Can you "alleviate anxiousness that comes with change" while refusing to answer the fundamental question, "Why?"

It takes its authority from a state law which says that NO ONE is liable for loss, injury, or DEATH resulting from its application.

It clumsily proposes to "assign road names to... Properties". I would have thought that road names were for roads, but that's not what the ordinance says. It also fails to define a road. Does the Commission want to name every driveway in the county and make us pay for thousands of new, unnecessary signs, or is this really about roads at all?

But, saying what they mean is not this Commission's strong suit.

It is full of unhelpful gobblygook like, "number origin," instead of, "beginning" (if that's what they mean), and hypocrisy like, "Commission encourages people to voluntarily comply... However... violation... punishable by a fine (of) FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS (PER DAY)."

It violates our precious Constitution by requiring us to display a particular number, and forbidding us to display any other (First Amendment). Even a policeman cannot make us identify ourselves without probable cause to believe us guilty of a crime, but our own Commission wants to force us to identify our homes to every passerby, be he postman, fireman, bureaucrat, salesman, burglar, or rapist. (Fourth Amendment)

If the Commission wants to establish a consistent system for naming public roads and determining addresses on them, that is reasonable. And reasonable adult citizens may then exercise their judgment and choose to identify their houses according to the system, and they may find that they reap some benefits from doing so (as well as some risks). But our County Commission has refused to responsively answer the repeated question, "WHY?" must the program be mandatory? Nor will they discuss that we will be charged substantial new fees to support this expensive plan, even though that new fee WAS discussed at a poorly attended County Commission meeting several months ago. "That's not part of this ordinance," they now say. When you sign the paper, are the monthly payments not part of the deal?

Our Commission seems to regard us as children and fools, or perhaps sheep to be tagged and penned.

This is Commissioner Griffith's third attempt to write this ordinance, and its passage has been delayed so far more by her drafts' omissions and inconsistencies than by justified public outcry against it. But all the Commissioners are clearly Hell-bent to lay this blunt axe at the roots of our freedom.

Please consider sacrificing Tuesday evening 25 May to the cause of your liberty and limited government. Attend the hearing at 7 p.m. at our Courthouse

Genealogy group receives huge genealogy database

On Tuesday, May 18, the Genealogy Group associated with the McClintic Library received a database containing over 20,000 names.

The work was generously given by Curtis Sharp, of Shepherdstown. Sharp has spent thousands of hours compiling information on families from the Sharp, Morrison, Arbogast and Hill lines.

Mike Hill, of Scott's Depot, presented the computer disk and notebook on behalf of Sharp to Nancy McComb Smithson at the meeting.

"This database is going to be a real asset to our growing genealogy base here at the Pocahontas County Free Library," said Smithson, library assistant. "We have people come from all over the country to do work here in the county and Mr. Sharp's information includes many of the well known families and also those less well known that married into the Pocahontas families."

The database is built on computer software of "Brother's Keeper." The library purchased the software after Sharp indicated he had a database that he wanted to share with the people and researchers of Pocahontas County. The gift of information will be kept in the McClintic Library's Heritage Room.

Sharp has included forms that people can fill out so he can make additions or changes to the database. He will regularly send to the library any updates to the information.

"surplus" and offer it to all adjoining landowners for the highest bid. The board unanimously passed a motion to continue to hold the property as needed for the operation of the railroad.

The board set its next meeting for 10 a.m. July 21 at Cass Scenic Railroad State Park.

Dear Editor:

This business of the golf money has turned into an expensive shell game in which the objective is to get $30,000 of public money raised from taxes into the hands of a small group of local good-ole-boys to prop up their financially ailing county club—a form of government welfare for rich folks.

There is an interesting history when one looks at the facts. It seems that the Pocahontas County Country club has had to obtain over $130,000 worth of lines of credit in the last five years. County court house records show that the most recent was a credit line obtained in April 2004.

Letters to the Editor

The story goes back to 2002 in which a $30,000 budget digest item was approved by the legislature for golf lessons by Watoga State Park guests. Apparently, Watoga realized that there was a huge amount of paperwork involved in the matter, so they never used the money. Then the Pocahontas County Commission decided that they would put that money to work for the Pocahontas Country Club, a private commercial enterprise. However, it is difficult for the government to just give money to a private group without some justification, especially when you have two golf courses in the county.

So the Pocahontas County Parks and Recreation Department was asked to sponsor the project. They too rejected it with a formal vote. However, this did not deter the commission. They proceeded to apply for the money in the name of the parks and recreation department anyway despite their objectives and refusal to participate.

The state tourism commission sent the money along with a contract which was signed by the commission president for both the commission and the parks and recreation department. But the contract called for tain amount of money each year by the legislature for contingencies—events that come up unexpectedly like fires, tornadoes, floods. The words emergency and contingency go well together in the dictionary. Emergency and golf do not!

What was the contingency here with the golf club? Their need for money was not unexpected. They have needed that since at least 1999. It would not be a catastrophe if we lost the golf course. You could turn the golf course into a cow pasture and no real emergency or catastrophe would occur.

The question of why the country club needs to depend upon state welfare to survive is beyond me. It seems a dire commentary upon the members of the country club, consisting of not only the wealthiest people in our county but also astute businessmen, that they would have to turn to government to prop up their finances. In fact, it is a downright embarrassment for the country club to seek public assistance like this.

When churches and other community organizations need funds for building or operating they tend to have bake sales, car washes, yard sales, and take up collections to keep their organi-ment was asked to sponsor the project. They too rejected it with a formal vote. However, this did not deter the commission. They proceeded to apply for the money in the name of the parks and recreation department anyway despite their objectives and refusal to participate.

The state tourism commission sent the money along with a contract which was signed by the commission president for both the commission and the parks and recreation department. But the contract called for reimbursement of actual expenses not payment of the bulk up front. However, unbeknownst to the state a secondary contract was drawn up in which the money was to be given directly and in bulk to the Pocahontas County Country Club and most importantly, up front, before any services were rendered at all.

Apparently, in my humble opinion, to hide evidence of the second contract, the county commission simply authorized the commission president to sign "all the necessary papers." However, he failed to sign the second contract. This meant that neither the state nor the county had a real contract with the country club at all. The country club did not officially agree to use any of the money for golf lessons or anything for that matter.

But the country club did get upon the members of the country club, consisting of not only the wealthiest people in our county but also astute businessmen, that they would have to turn to government to prop up their finances. In fact, it is a downright embarrassment for the country club to seek public assistance like this.

When churches and other community organizations need funds for building or operating they tend to have bake sales, car washes, yard sales, and take up collections to keep their organization solvent. Why can't the Pocahontas County Country Club do the same? They obviously aren't too proud to beg because they are currently begging the county commission for public tax dollars.

What will happen next—free lift tickets, bike rentals, railroad rides, and maybe just plain old movie rentals for those who don't ski, bike, or take railroad rides but need some entertainment on a cold weekend in December? Don't the rest of us deserve something free, too!

But I digress. Now that the $30,000 has returned like a bad penny, the county commission still has a dilemma. How do you funnel $30,000 to a private golf club without stirring up a lot of public attention and breaking the law to do so. After they received the check, the commission called the governor's office to get some directions (paper work) to support opinion, to hide evidence of the second contract, the county commission simply authorized the commission president to sign "all the necessary papers." However, he failed to sign the second contract. This meant that neither the state nor the county had a real contract with the country club at all. The country club did not officially agree to use any of the money for golf lessons or anything for that matter.

But the country club did get the money—all $30,000 and up front.

When we raised a racket about it, they gave it back to the county commission and the county commission gave it back to the state. End of story? No, not in this soap opera!

A few days ago another check showed up. This time it was from the governor. No paper work—just a check indicating that it was from the governor's contingency fund for Watoga park guest golf lessons.

The governor is given a cerrides but need some entertainment on a cold weekend in December? Don't the rest of us deserve something free, too!

But I digress. Now that the $30,000 has returned like a bad penny, the county commission still has a dilemma. How do you funnel $30,000 to a private golf club without stirring up a lot of public attention and breaking the law to do so. After they received the check, the commission called the governor's office to get some directions (paper work) to support their appropriation to the country club. The governor's office refused. They call the senate. But they don't do that. Now they have put off giving the money to the golf club until they get instructions from Senator Walt Helmick.

What has Helmick got to do with this? This money is from the governor's contingency fund not the budget digest. Does Helmick tell the governor what to do? If so, we have a one-man legislature and governor in one person. If the governor refuses to tell the commission how to spend the money, how does Helmick have any authority to tell the commission what to do. The last I heard, we still had a separation of powers act in our constitution.

Meanwhile the commission waits the penultimate decision of the senator.

Why doesn't the county commission just have $30,000 worth of voucher forms printed up, distributed to the parks? The vouchers would then be redeemed upon use at the country club on a point-of-sale basis. No! A thousand times no! That isn't what the club wants. They want all the money up-front and immediately.

According to.the county commission president, they want to work up a contract whereby the country club is placed on a retainer in which it gets the $30,000 up front to make its services available for a year or so. The club is not to be obligated to a certain number of lessons or green fees. They only provide services on demand which could be from 1 to 1,000 persons. Since there appears to be no organized plan on the part of the parks to distribute or advertise the availability of the free lessons and fees, little actual use is expected so the country club ends up with $30,000 for little or no effort at all.

So that is where we stand now in this little show of "As the Ball Turns." Will Helmick put his name on the line? Will the governor provide any guidance? Will there be another unsigned contract written? How many golf lessons will actually be given? What happens to the money if the commission gets cold feet again over this shady deal? Stay tuned! Tune into "As the Ball Turns" every first and third Tuesday of the month.

Please extend my apologies to the reader who wanted me limited to 15 word letters.

AmeriCorps comes to High Rocks' aid

On May 14, a team of five AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC) members began four weeks of service in Hillsboro. The team is excited about making a positive impact on young, at-risk women in conjunction with the High Rocks Academy.

This NCCC team is the third to complete a project with this organization. Team members will be doing construction, trail, and maintenance work in preparation for the yearly summer camp; mentoring and tutoring the young women participants; and running an overnight leadership camp.

The mission of the High Rocks Academy is to develop strong, educated, self-confident women who will become leaders in their West Virginia communities and create change for the status of women across the state. The organization helps participants recognize their self-worth and set high expectations and goals for their futures. They conduct summer camps, weekly girls' nights, leadership development programs, youth-led community service activities and post-graduate planning to fulfill their objectives.

Although this project is of a much different nature than prior assignments, team members are looking forward to the opportunity it presents to learn and grow. Erin Waddle is particularly excited about working for the aims of the High Rocks Academy. "Four of the five of us are women, and we have all experienced frustrations in the past due to sexism—most recently as part of our last construction project," she said. "We are all excited to have the chance to help other young women recognize their value, worth and capabilities so that we will see change in the future."

This is the fourth of five projects that the members will complete in communities in the District, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Ohio during their 10-month period of service. In past projects, members have worked at Hungry Mother State Park in Marion, Virginia; to improve the safety and accessibility of park trails; and in Washington, D.C.; at a school for children with developmental disabilities; and in Washington, Virginia, to frame five homes in conjunction with Habitat for Humanity.

Created by the Corporation for National Service (CNS) in 1993, NCCC has five campuses: Charleston, South Carolina; Denver, Colorado; Perry Point, Maryland; Sacramento, California; and Washington, D.C.

Although the team will be addressing unmet human needs during this eight-week period, members have previously worked on education and environmental projects. They may also help to resolve public safety or disaster relief issues in the future. All members have been certified by the American Red Cross in First Aid, CPR, and Disaster Relief. Two teammates have also completed Community Emergency Response Training, and two are certified in wildland firefighting.

Team members have come together from areas as diverse as Washington State and the U.S. Virgin Islands with an enthusiasm and commitment to strengthen communities through their service. This is the third time that a team from the Washington, D.C. campus has been sent to work with the High Rocks Academy.

Members have received very positive feedback from their predecessors, and they are eager to begin work in benefit of the young women in West Virginia. Corps members, all aged 18 to 24, must complete 1,700 hours of service during their 10-month commitment. In exchange for their service, Corps Members receive $4,725 to help pay for college or repay student loans. AmeriCorps is administered by the Corporation for National and Community Service. Interested applicants are encouraged to apply now. Many programs have no upper age limit. For more information visit www.americorps.org or call 1-800-942-2677.

Progress report on Marlinton Opera House

The Opera House has been functioning as a center for the arts and cultural events for a period of over three years. Over a hundred events have been held here over this time with a variety of performances, cultural events, high school proms, social events, a wedding and reception, arts and crafts shows, and community affairs. The response from the public has been exceptional and most events are well attended. The general operation of the Opera House is run by the Opera House Foundation with Oreana White as President and several standing committees. Members of the Foundation all work as volunteers. Galen Watts has taken charge of lighting and sound and has installed and is continuing to upgrade this area. Other volunteers provide refreshments for the programs and assist in setting up for performances. The Program Committee has been very successful in obtaining grants through the West Virginia Commission of the Arts, the Pocahontas Dramas, Fairs, and Festivals Committee, and the National Endowment for the Arts for many of the programs held in the Opera House. This, along with a sizable donation from a local citizen, has the result that operation expenses have been met to date. A mailing list is maintained and quarterly news letters have been prepared by volunteers. Anyone wishing to be added to the list can contact the Foundation at 799-4035 or 799-4009. The schedule of events for this next year's grants has been completed with applications made for funding.

The Opera House is owned by the Pocahontas Historic Landmarks Commission, who has the responsibility for all physical renovations and improvements for the building itself. During the past year or so several improvements have been made to the structure. Steps were completed to the balcony area and to both sides of the stage; two furnaces were added to the heating system, the front and rear gable areas were renovated with new tile added and painted; and the eaves were repaired and painted. An automated movie screen was purchased by a donation and installed. Currently, plans are underway to paint the total exterior of the building, repair the two top moldings on the stage front, remove the burned-out slanting floor of the balcony over the front entrance, replace the handicapped door, install lights on the front of the building and install a sign, construct railings along the handicapped ramp, paint the two dressing rooms and install mirrors and light. The original Opera House had wainscoting around the walls within the main room. This also needs to be replaced.

In the future, it is hoped that the Opera House will be able to acquire space within the now standing building formerly owned by the Shrader family and which now is adjacent to the OH. Should these buildings be demolished and a new structure built, then space for a green room (a room designated for performers while offstage) and space for a work shop for building sets, etc., space for an office for the Opera House Foundation, and additional dressing rooms for large groups is needed and should be included. A connecting corridor to the Opera House would provide easy access. This desire has already been communicated to the Building Commission of the Town of Marlinton, the current owners, and the Opera House Coordinator has been selected as a member of this Commission.

All of the above plans are contingent upon obtaining sufficient funding. Should anyone wish to donate to this project please contact Ruth Morgan at 799-4470 or make donations to the Pocahontas County Historic Landmarks Commission at P.O. Box 125, Marlinton, WV 24954.

Pre-Graduation Party/Picnic Held for Warwick

A pre-graduation party-picnic style, was given for Trisha Warwick, at the home of Fred and Becky Tuttle, of Campbelltown.

Trisha received monetary gifts. She is planning to attend Wheeling Jesuit College in Wheeling, in the fall, where she plans to study in Nursing.

Those attending from out of town were her father and stepmother, Robert M. and Sally Warwick, of Waynesboro, Virginia, Tim and Susan Warwick, of Chesapeake, Virginia, Scott Warwick and Michelle Miller and son, Devon, of Mt. Solon, Virginia, Darrell and Sandi Friel, of Jacksonville, Florida.

Those attending from the Marlinton area was Christine Tuttle, Richard Graves, Cheryl Ford, Adam Beverage, Justin Barb, and grandparents, Bob and Juanita Warwick.

This was the first time in about ten years that Bob and Juanita's children have all been together. Pictures were taken, and all had a very good time.

The place settings varied from elegant to casual, and delicious aromas filled the air in the Pocahontas County High School cafeteria. At times, the food judges had to shoo the crowd out of the room so they could finish the task at hand. The entries ranged from the familiar: crepes, enchiladas and chicken: to the unusual: coconut soup, oranges with "caramel wigs" and escargot (snails).

Some of the students were visibly anxious as a group of six judges sampled their offerings, while others were calm and confident.

Sampling world cuisine was just the beginning of the PCHS Foreign Language Festival activities, organized by foreign language teachers Karen Friel, Denise McNeel and Tatiana Mynuck.

After the judging and audience sampling of food from around the world, the evening moved from the cafeteria to the auditorium. There, four new members were inducted to the French Honor Society and students of both French and Spanish demonstrated their foreign language skills with skits, songs and poems before a near-capacity crowd. Catholics, Protestants break ground at Snowshoe

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The cold, blustery weather and dense fog belied the ceremony that was taking place atop Snowshoe Mountain on Friday morning.

Father Frederick Annie, the Episcopal Vicar for Clergy of the Diocese of Wheeling-Charleston, and the Rev. Dan Macgill, of St. John's Episcopal Church in Marlinton, sank golden shovels into the damp soil toward the south end of Snowshoe Drive. Snowshoe Mountain's General Manager, Bruce Pittet, as well as representatives from the architecture and building firms behind the chapel's design and construction, joined the clergy in the groundbreaking.

During the ceremony, Pittet spoke of the changes Snowshoe has gone through in the past seven years, noting that what once was simply a tourist destination now has a growing residential community. From that community, Pittet continued, grew the need for "a central place to gather and worship."

Pittet said it was "exciting to offer a proper facility" where residents and guests could worship.

Macgill, who will lead the Protestant ministry at the chapel, thanked the resort for the donation of the land for the chapel and the Catholic Diocese for funding the construction.

"The church is made of people," added Annie, "but we need places to house the church." Before the groundbreaking commenced, Annie noted, "people have been praying on this mountain for a long time."

After the groundbreaking, Annie spoke about the partnership between the Catholic Diocese, the Episcopal Church and Snowshoe Mountain Resort.

Annie remarked, "people had been gathering since the beginning of the resort" and that currently between 80 and 90 people gather to worship on the mountain.

"We're proud to be a part of this project and we're proud of this partnership," said Annie.

Macgill said he began to lead Protestant services at Snowshoe as a layperson in 1992, was ordained and took over at St. John,s in 1997.

Macgill noted that the resort's original founders were Episcopal and, beginning 30 years ago, they had invited St. John's minister to conduct services on the mountain.

Currently, services are offered in the Mountain Lodge Conference Center.

When construction is finished, the chapel will accommodate approximately 200 people, according to Annie.

The chapel, which will be known as Saint Bernard Chapel, will be located on Snowshoe Drive, at the south end of the Village at Snowshoe. Annie said he believes the $1.35 million chapel, designed by Omni Associates and constructed by March-Westin, will be finished in time for services next Easter.

LET US BREAK ground together. Letter

Dear Editor:

Norman Alderman's letter in the May 20, 2004, issue regarding a $30,000 appropriation for the Pocahontas County Country Club exemplifies the wrong-headed approach too often taken in debating local issues and illustrates why it's so difficult to resolve many of them. Mr. Alderman's errors included the following:

1. He blames the wrong people. If Mr. Alderman is upset that the Governor sent $30,000 to the County for the Pocahontas County Country Club, his argument is with the Governor, not with those who requested it or with those who are to be the conduit for the funds. Moreover, if the Governor's Office refuses to attach strings to the use of the money, as Mr. Alderman asserts, then by definition the money cannot be misspent.

2. He blames people not the process. In fact, Mr. Alderman's quarrel isn't with the Governor himself, but with a process that allows the Governor to write checks without many, if any, constraints on his ability to do so. If Mr. Alderman thinks that the money sent to Pocahontas County was wrongly appropriated from the Governor's Contingency Fund, he should work through the legislative process to change how the fund is administered.

3. He makes inaccurate statements. For example, "contingency" merely means an event that may but probably will not occur; it is not synonymous with "emergency." Also, commission and board officers typically are empowered to sign "all necessary papers" in order to effectuate transactions; there is nothing untoward to be assumed from such a grant of authority.

4. Ultimately, he completely misses the bigger picture. If the local country club in the most rural county in the state can obtain $30,000 from a state fund that would otherwise go to another county, then good for it. Pocahontas County needs to maintain all the recreational facilities it can. It's senseless to begrudge money appropriated for a golf course that is open to all and much more affordable than the courses at the resorts in the area.

Mr. Alderman's quixotic quest to micromanage funds coming into Pocahontas County is destructive, whereas legitimate political debate is constructive. If he won't desist, let us at least hope that his arguments improve.

Sincerely,
Russell D. Jessee, Esq.

McKean and Dale voted PCHS Coalfield Conference Athletes of the Year

One female and one male athlete from each of the league's 27 schools were honored Sunday, May 23, at the 11th annual Coalfield Conference (CFC) Banquet held at the Raleigh County Armory in Beckley. Voted by PCHS coaches and announced at the PCHS Athletic Banquet as PCHS CFC Female and Male Athletes of the Year were seniors Caroline McKean and Evan Dale.

Both athletes plan to continue their athletic careers next year in college. McKean will attend Marietta College in Marietta, Ohio, and will play basketball and possibly run track. Dale will attend Potomac State College and play basketball. Neither athlete could attend the CFC Banquet due to the PCHS graduation scheduling conflict.

The Potomac Valley Conference (PVC) also awarded Dale and McKean PVC Scholar Athlete Medals at the PVC Night of Champions for accomplished athletes with GPAs above 3.5. Dale represented PCHS in the three-point shooting contest the same evening.

Dale (2004) and McKean (2003 and 2004) were both voted to the AP All-State Honorable Mention Basketball Teams by state sports writers. Dale was named PVC All-Conference and All Inter-Mountain in basketball this season. McKean was named first team All CFC, her third year to be honored.

Dale and McKean have both been considered defensive specialists throughout their basketball careers. Dale worked hard last summer on his offense and finished this season with the top PVC scoring average (20.24 ppg) and the second highest league free throw shooting average (80.43%).

The story of Dale's hard work was featured earlier this year in a Register-Herald newspaper article titled "Barnyard Basketball."

McKean was also complimented in a Register-Herald article after this year's Lady Warriors sectional championship win by opposing Midland Trail basketball coach, Cynthia Hedrick: "(Caroline) McKean hustled all over the floor and she was getting position on us. She's a credit to her team and to her school." McKean scored 20 points to pace the Lady Warriors that night.

Dale not only developed into an offensive basketball specialist over the past summer, but his skills in his first year on the PCHS soccer field landed him a late season starting position on the top boys public Class A team in WV and the honor of most improved PCHS soccer player.

Also in Dale's first year on the PCHS track team this spring, he managed two fifth places and one sixth place finish at the regional track meet, just missing the chance to compete in Charleston.

McKean, who lettered four years in basketball and track, and good friend, Erin Coleman, are the only two athletes at PCHS to have competed in seven state tournaments, three in basketball and four in track.

EVAN DALE AND Caroline McKean were PCHS athletes honored by the Coalfield Conference.

McKean qualified at regionals to run in 10 events at states over her four years of track competition. A "bug" that sickened many of the track team denied McKean the chance to run in three of her four qualifying events at states last week.

Dale is the oldest son of Wilma and Jerry Dale, of Marlinton. McKean is the youngest daughter of Freda and Bruce McKean, of Green Bank.

Register-Herald assistant sports editor Gary Fauber singled out Dale and McKean in his CFC banquet article as examples of athletes who are not well-known beyond their schools and have not gotten the exposure they deserve. CFC commissioner Rick Vass looks at the annual banquet as a chance for these athletes to shine.

If good attitudes, hard work and dedication are any indicators of success, both of these two scholar athletes have many chances to shine in their upcoming college athletic careers.

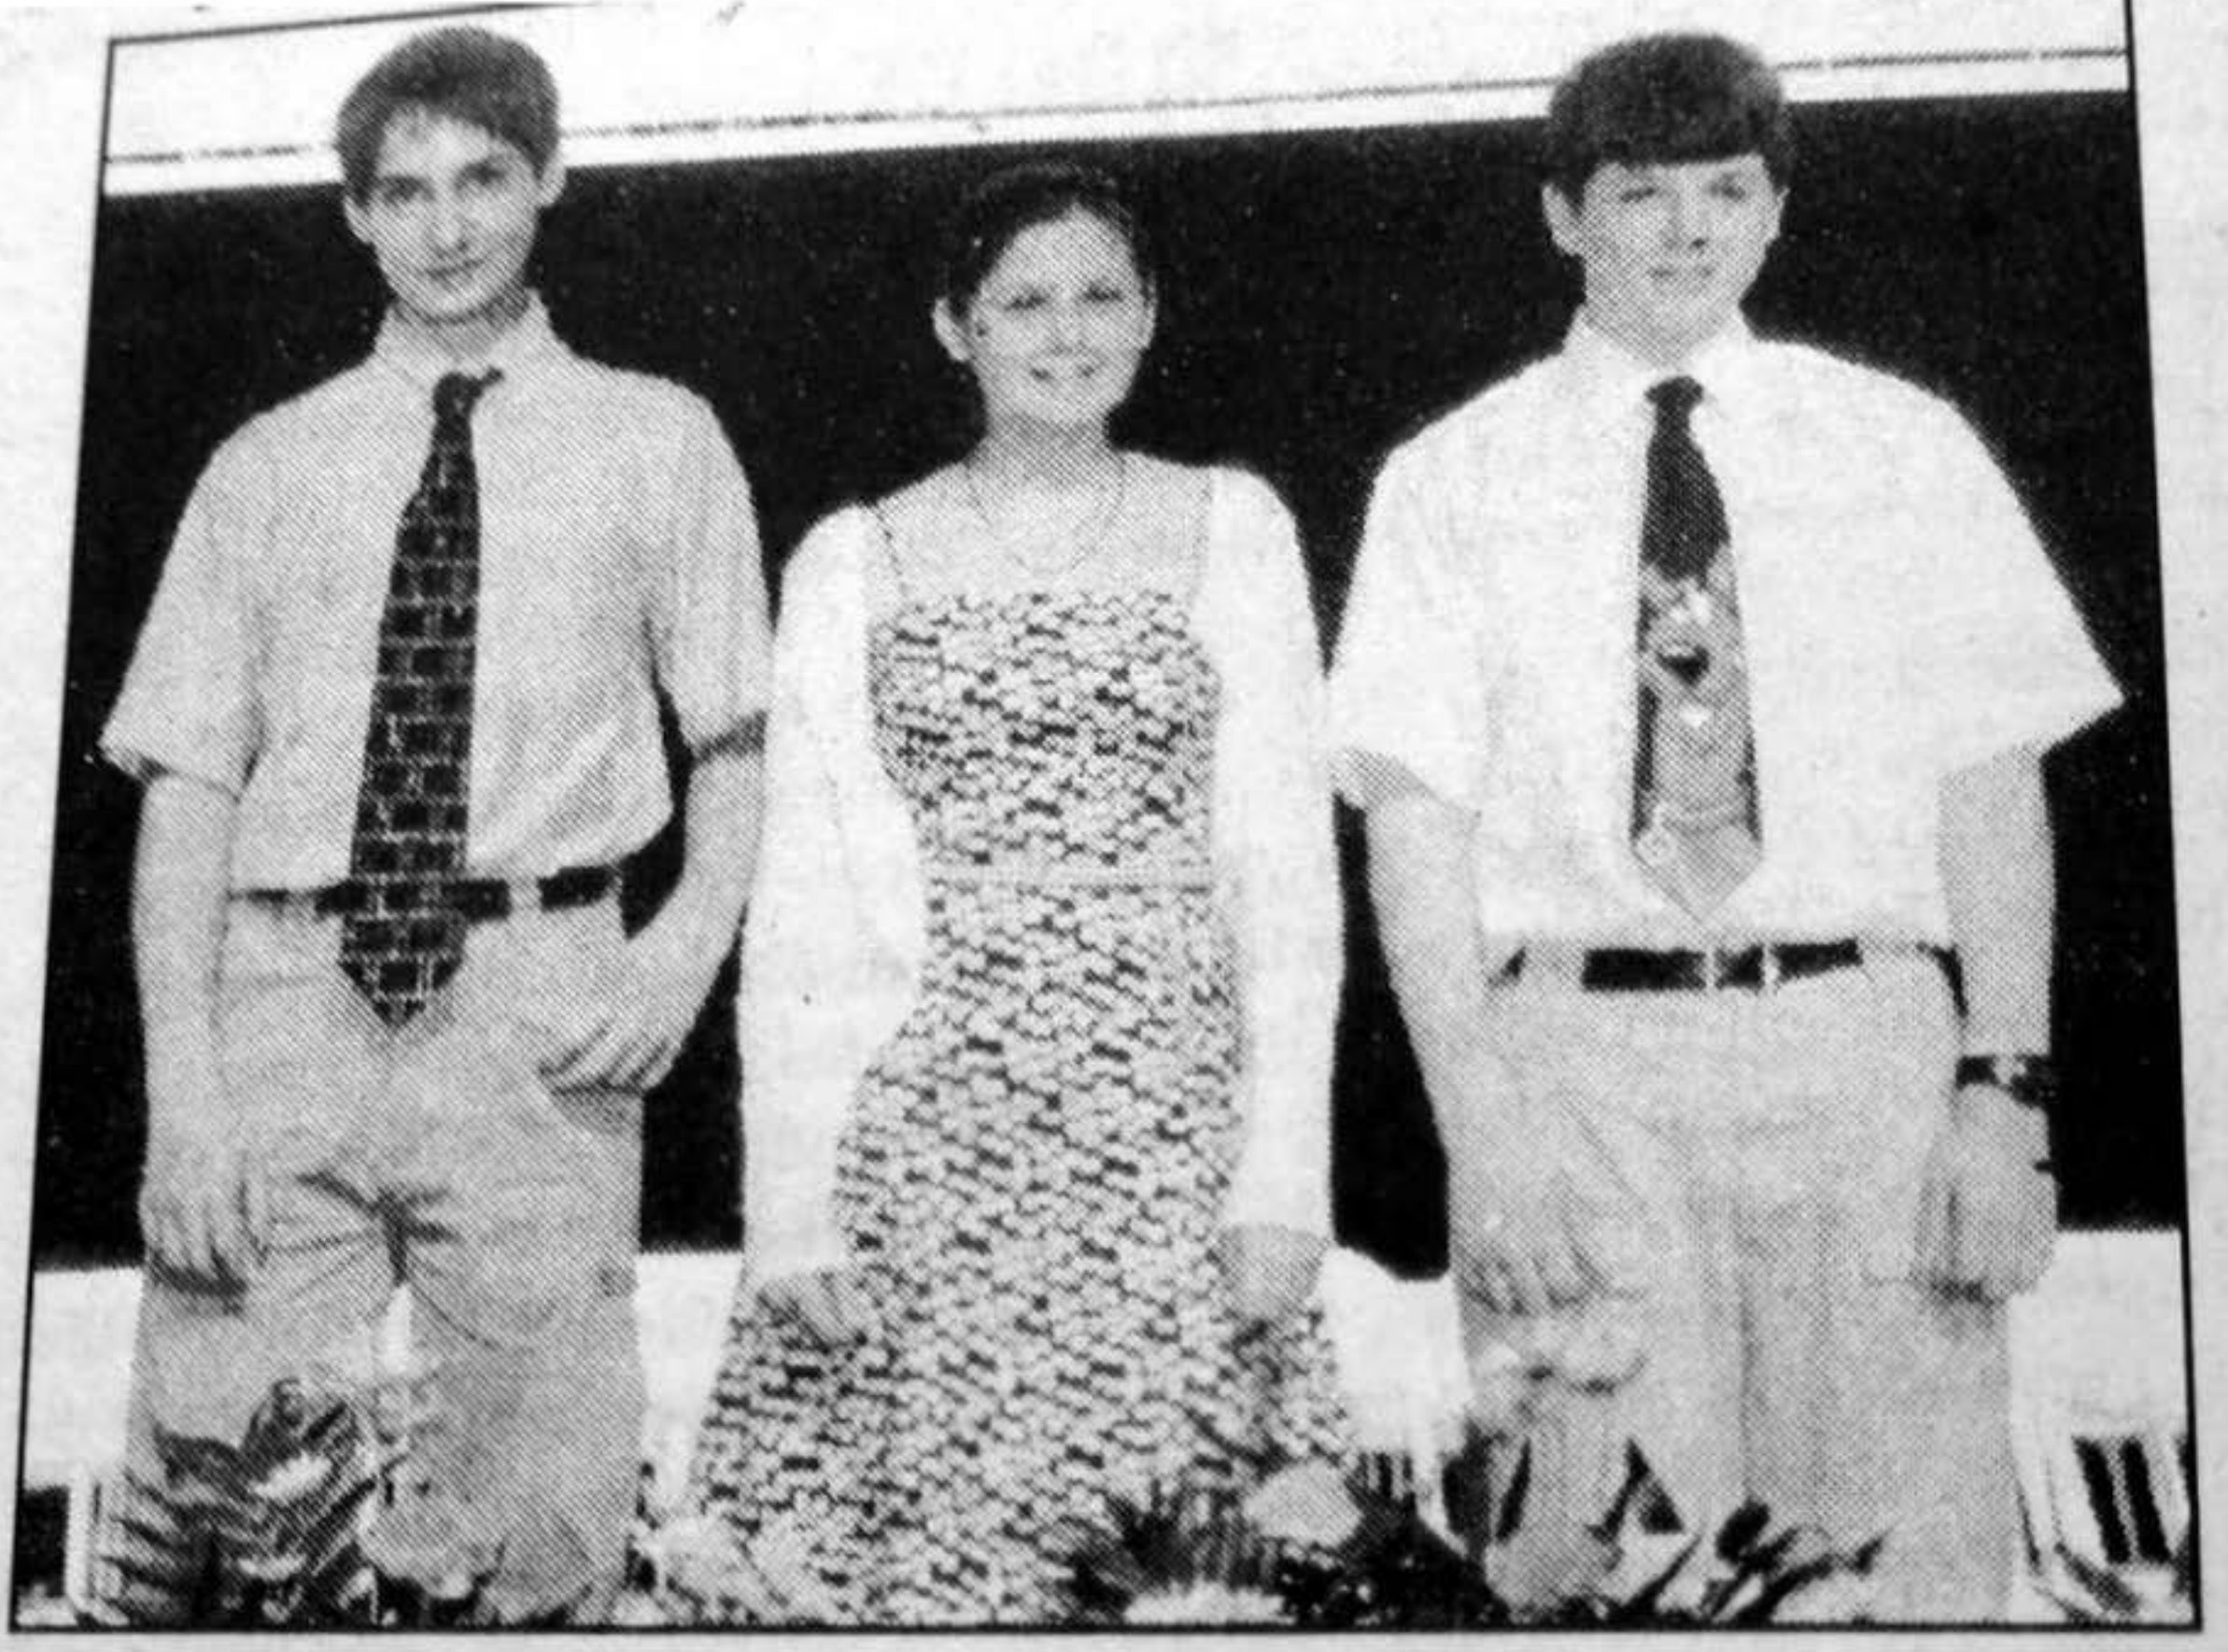
GREEN BANK SCHOOL students pose with UH-1 military helicopter.



GREEN BANK STUDENTS BEING awarded Knights and Ladies of the Golden Horseshoe last week in Charleston (l to r) Mason Jewell, son of Phillip and Chris Jewell, Brenda Bolyard, daughter of Bev and Jody Bolyard, Raymond Ford, son of John and Pam Ford. These 8th graders from Green Bank Middle School were the 2004 county winners of the Golden Horseshoe Test.

Aviation team visits GB School

One sunny, April afternoon there was a slight southeast wind blowing the new dandelions and the fresh, green grass. There was anticipation in the air as every Green Bank student, and some community members, gathered along the back side of the school building. Before long, the distinctive thudding caused all eyes to turn skyward. From which direction would they come?

Captain Frank Figueroa and co-pilot Chief Warrant Officer Pam Dent-Carman flew their UH-1 military helicopter over the Observatory grounds, circled above the school and landed on the soccer field, just beyond the middle school playground. After the rotors stopped, everyone approached the helicopter and sat down to an inspiring talk from Captain Fig and Chief Pam.

Both military pilots from COC, 1-137th Aviation (Assault) out of Wheeling-Ohio County Airport, were excellent role models. They talked with students about the importance of paying attention in math, doing your homework, studying a foreign language and paying attention in school. Both stressed safety and respect for the equipment they use and the personnel with whom they train.

Captain Fig was an ESL student (English as a Second Language) who came to this country in second grade. He has served in the U.S. Navy as well as the Army National Guard. He is also a middle school Spanish teacher in Tucker County.

Chief Pam is a pilot also serving in the Army National Guard. As one teacher noted, "It's good for these kids to see that women can do these kinds of things."

Every student had the opportunity to go inside the helicopter and to talk with Captain Fig and Chief Pam. Seventh grader Cory Rexrode commented afterward, "Now I see why you need to pay attention in math so you can read all those dials!"

After a two-hour visit, everyone watched as these two revved up the engines and took off. They flew more than two hours from Wheeling to visit Green Bank. Outreach to schools is one of the functions of their company.

Heather Holstine has become acquainted with Captain Fig in their mutual foreign language endeavors for the state. She arranged this hands-on demonstration so that students could have a memorable opportunity to see the relevance of aviation in today's world. This was a cooperative effort between the NRAO, one of Green Bank School's business partners, the U.S. military and Green Bank School. It was wonderful for students to see two such capable and enthusiastic individuals who love what they do.

Town of Marlinton sewer rate increase

At a meeting on June 1, the Marlinton Town Council adopted an ordinance containing increased rates and charges for furnishing sewer service to its 516 customers.

The proposed increased rates and charges will become effective on July 17, 2004, unless otherwise ordered by the Public Service Commission and will produce approximately $46,605 annually in additional revenue, an increase of 30%.

The average monthly bill for the various classes of customers will be as follows:

Type of Customer:	$ Increase	% Inc.
Residential	$4.97	30%
Commercial	$19.54	30%

The increases shown are based on averages of all customers in the indicated class. Individual customers may receive increases that are greater or less than average. Furthermore, the requested rates and charges are only a proposal and are subject to change (increases or decreases) by the PSC in its review of this filing. The PSC shall review and approve or modify the increased rates only upon the filing of a petition within 30 days of the adoption of the ordinance changing said rates and charges by:

(1) Any customer aggrieved by the changed rates or charges who presents to the PSC a petition signed by not less than 25% of the customers served by the Town's sewer system; or

(2) Any customer who is served by the Town's sewer system and who resides outside the corporate limits and who is affected by the change in said rates or charges and who pre-sents to the PSC a petition alleging discrimination between customers within and without the Town's boundaries. Said petition shall be accompanied by evidence of discrimination; or

(3) Any customer or groups of customers who are affected by said change in rates who reside within the Town's boundaries and who present a petition to the PSC alleging discrimination between said customer or group of customers and other customers of the Town's sewer system. Said petition shall be accompanied by evidence of discrimination.

All petitions should be addressed to the Executive Secretary, Public Service Commission of West Virginia, 201 Brooks Street, P.O. Box 812, Charleston, West Virginia 25323.

A complete copy of the proposed rates is available at the town office.

A copy of the proposed rates is also available for public inspection at the Public Service Commission, 201 Brooks Street, Charleston.

Rowe gives 90 days to vacate shoe plant

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Just as the Pocahontas Development Authority was about to celebrate "clearing the 10-year tangle of law suits," an email from PDA President Frank Proud to "fellow citizens" announced "we have a new law suit looming."

This suit was filed by Warm Springs, Virginia, resident Cathy Cash, who made loans to Greenbrier Footwear—the last tenant of the former shoe factory on Second Avenue in Marlinton— in 2002. In her complaint, Cash asked the court to affirm her claim to the equipment of Greenbrier Footwear and to allow her to sell the equipment to recover her losses. The complaint also places responsibility for missing equipment with the PDA and with former Greenbrier Footwear owner, Tom Allen.

According to promissory notes that were submitted with her complaint, Cash loaned Greenbrier Footwear over $80,000 between March and May 2002, with "all Greenbrier Footwear, LLC Corporate assets" named as collateral.

When Greenbrier Footwear folded later in the year, Cash [illegible] posted a notice on the door of the factory stating only he the roof was leaking," she continued.

According to Cash, Carpenter and Cain asked if the PDA and Clearwater Timber—a Green Bank company interested in using the building—would have permission to move her share of the equipment in the building. Cash stated that until the PDA and Clearwater Timber had a formal contract, she would not make a decision one way or the other.

"I'm really, really upset...They refused to let me in the building," Cash said. She said her lawyer, who was several minutes late for the hearing, "was not given adequate time to express our reasons for being there."

After attending several PDA and County Commission meetings since 2002, Cash stated she had "stacks of emails" from the PDA denying her access to the building.

"It wasn't right for the PDA to even ask me if Clearwater could move in when I had a UCC-1 filing saying that no one could enter the building," Cash continued.

As of Monday, Cash said she did not know if 90 days would allow her enough time to get the equipment sold or moved out of the building, but added she would not hesitate to take notes that were submitted with her complaint, Cash loaned Greenbrier Footwear over $80,000 between March and May 2002, with "all Greenbrier Footwear, LLC Corporate assets" named as collateral.

When Greenbrier Footwear folded later in the year, Cash foreclosed on the company and posted a notice on the door of the factory stating only he could legally enter the building.

"Why are we here?" Judge James Rowe repeatedly asked Cash's attorney Jonathan Boggs at the June 4 hearing.

Boggs said he and Cash were not confident when they filed the complaint a month ago that the PDA was "allowing the process to move along." Boggs asked Rowe for a "reasonable amount of time" to conduct a sale of the equipment in the building.

The attorney noted the PDA wants the building vacated and Cash had already contacted "several buyers" interested in the equipment. However, Boggs added, Cash had not been given adequate access to the building.

Representing the PDA, Pocahontas County Prosecutor Walt Weiford stated that he was not aware of the PDA denying Cash access to the building and countered that Cash had been slow to pursue the release of her property.

Weiford told Rowe the PDA would simply like Cash to take her equipment and vacate the building.

In order for Cash to conduct a sale of her property, Boggs said Cash needed a current into even ask me if Clearwater could move in when I had a UCC-1 filing saying that no one could enter the building," Cash continued.

As of Monday, Cash said she did not know if 90 days would allow her enough time to get the equipment sold or moved out of the building, but added she would not hesitate to take the PDA back to court if necessary.

As of Monday, however, Proud anticipated the PDA and Clearwater would be able to consolidate the machinery—which had been tagged and identified and is scattered throughout the building—into one area to make room for firewood storage.

According to Weiford, the PDA would need to balance the needs of accommodating Clearwater "while not inviting the appearance of having tampered with the (Cash's) collateral."

"We've moved remarkably fast on this considering the PDA is a government agency," Proud noted. Proud said he was still trying to get in touch with Clearwater on Monday to determine when the company could begin moving into the building.

The Pocahontas Development Authority had been working with Clearwater Timber, since April to get the building ready and available as a storage facility for Clearwater Timber's kiln-dried firewood operation.

At the PDA's April meeting, Clearwater owner Lynn Grimes estimated that he would need to hire an additional 12 to 15 full-cahontas County Prosecu... Walt Weiford stated that he was not aware of the PDA denying Cash access to the building and countered that Cash had been slow to pursue the release of her property.

Weiford told Rowe the PDA would simply like Cash to take her equipment and vacate the building.

In order for Cash to conduct a sale of her property, Boggs said Cash needed a current inventory of the equipment in the factory.

He noted that an inventory completed by Allen for the PDA in April, "appears to be severely depleted" when compared to the equipment listed in Cash's foreclosure notice from 2003.

Rowe told Boggs that Cash should take her own inventory of what is currently in the shoe factory. Any responsibility for missing equipment, said Rowe, could be dealt with at a later time.

Rowe ruled Cash would have 90 days from Monday, June 7, to access the building and remove her property. Cash was also given permission to hold a sale or auction of the equipment at the building within those 90 days.

After the hearing, Cash said she and County Commissioner James Carpenter and PDA Treasurer David Cain went to the facility to check on the equipment.

"The place was a mess and ... when the company could begin moving into the building.

The Pocahontas Development Authority had been working with Clearwater Timber, since April to get the building ready and available as a storage facility for Clearwater Timber's kiln-dried firewood operation.

At the PDA's April meeting, Clearwater owner Lynn Grimes estimated that he would need to hire an additional 12 to 15 full-time employees to operate the firewood storage facility in Marlinton. The addition of these jobs to the county has been a driving force behind the PDA's efforts to make the former shoe factory available to Grimes.

It looked as though Clearwater might move in by the beginning of the summer. However, on May 5 Cash filed her injunction against the PDA.

At the quorumless PDA meeting the held at Clearwater's Green Bank facility on May 26, PDA president Frank Proud expressed his frustration at not knowing whether the PDA would have access to the building.

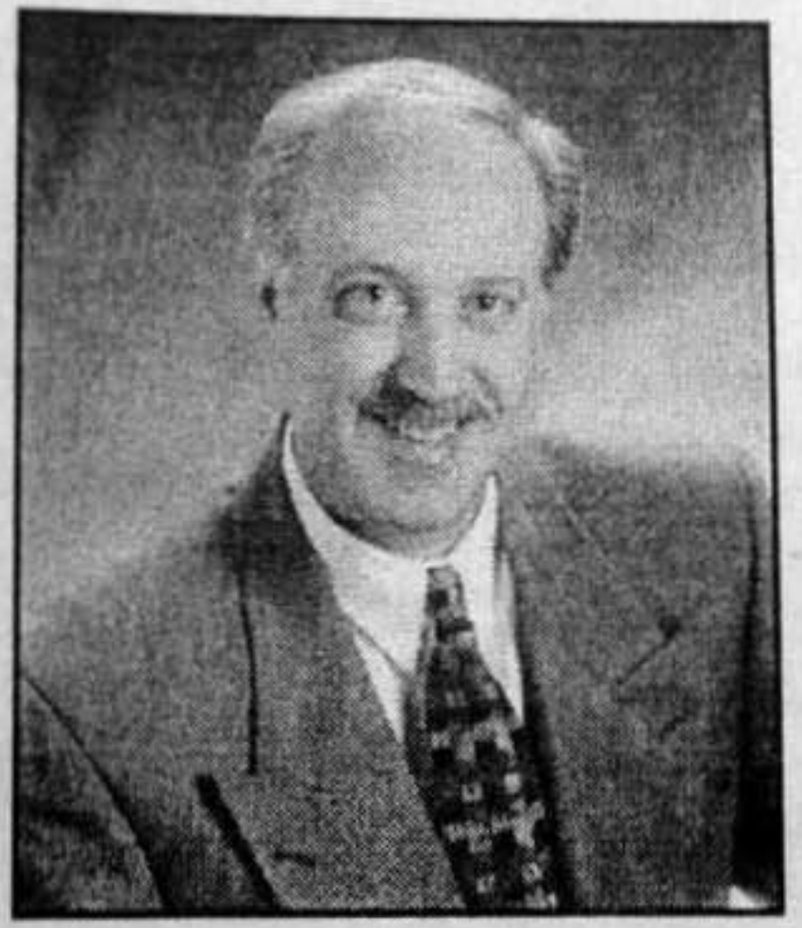
Rather than give Clearwater the go-ahead to move in, with the risk of its inventory then being locked in the building, Proud advised Grimes that plans to use the building would have to wait until Rowe made his ruling on the injunction.

On Monday, Proud welcomed the news of the Rowe's deci-

Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau announces new director

The Board of Directors of the Pocahontas County Convention & Visitor's Bureau has named Mel Hobbs to be the Executive Director of the organization. Hobbs will be responsible for the daily operations of the office, the Visitor Centers and in marketing and promoting Pocahontas County tourism.

Hobbs has more than 20 years of marketing communications experience and spent 14 years as a Vice President, Management Supervisor of Lord, Sullivan & Yoder, a $60 million marketing communications firm in Columbus, Ohio. Prior to that, Hobbs was a Vice President with a Dayton, Ohio advertising agency.



Hobbs' client background includes 10 years marketing a 32-property Midwest hotel chain along with promoting tourism for the Columbus, Ohio Convention & Visitor's Bureau.

Originally from West Virginia, Hobbs graduated from West Virginia University with a degree in Journalism. Hobbs will begin his duties on June 15.

"Pocahontas County is very fortunate to have so many wonderful tourism attractions within a beautiful and scenic area. I am certain we will move forward with new initiatives that will continue the past success and make Pocahontas County the premier tourism destination in the state and beyond," stated Hobbs.

Leslie Cain, President of the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitors Bureau resounded, "We're looking forward to working with someone of Mel's caliber and strong background in marketing and advertising."

Le

Dear Editor:

Russell Jessee, in his letter to the editor in the June 3, 2004, issue of The Pocahontas Times, stated ... "It's senseless to begrudge money appropriated for a golf course..." Mr. Jessee has missed Mr. Alderman's point which is that the $30,000 was not appropriated for the Pocahontas County Country Club.

The money was appropriated for Watoga State Park (and evidently other area parks) to provide free golf lessons to guests of the park. The money was not intended to be given to the Pocahontas County Country Club in a lump sum to be used as a day-to-day operational fund.

In my opinion, Mr. Alderman came up with a good solution when he suggested that the County Commission should print $30,000 worth of vouchers for free golf lessons and distribute them throughout the county's parks. Then, when a voucher is presented to the Pocahontas County Country Club the bearer of the voucher would receive his golf lesson and the Pocahontas County Country Club could then redeem the value of the voucher from the County Commission.

Local minister attends White House Conference

by Lori Howard
Arms Wide Open Ministries, Marlinton

On June 1 I attended the first White House National Conference on Faith-based and Community Initiatives in Washington, D. C. The White House Office on Faith Based and Community Initiatives organized the invitation-only conference, which gave grass roots leaders an opportunity to network with Cabinet agencies.

The goal of the faith-based initiative is to give faith-based community organizations equal footing to compete for federal funds and to diminish the barriers that once made it almost impossible for faith-based groups to compete. The initiative targets organizations that provide services for at-risk youth, ex-offenders, substance abusers, welfare-to-work families, the homeless, the hungry, and those with HIV or AIDS.

The highlight of the conference was a personal address from President George Bush. In his speech the President heralded the success stories of faith-based programs and challenged leaders to become more active in motivating their state and local leaders. He stated, "Part of the feedback we've gotten is that there is a bottleneck at the state and local government. .... Some of the money is block-granted to states. And therefore if there's a governor who does not have a faith-based office who understands the vast potential of changing their state, you'll be frustrated. I know that. So part of our mission is to work with you to help change the attitude at the state level."

President Bush also spoke of the specific programs such as the $100 million Access to Recovery program which, much like day care vouchers, will provide the funds for the addict who wants to recover to be able to choose where he or she wants to receive help, including a faith-based program.

During the conference I spoke with Jeremy White, Special Assistant for Faith-based Policy Outreach, about the status of the faith-based initiative in West Virginia. Mr. White stated that although there has been discussion of a West Virginia Faith-based Initiatives Office, there is nothing currently in place. I also attended workshops on Substance Abuse, At-Risk Youth, and Ex-Offenders Issues. The workshops were an open forum to discuss problems, solutions, and funding for the specific issues. I discussed the problem of service delivery and lack of employment opportunities here in Pocahontas County. Fortunately, the Access to Recovery vouchers will provide for transportation expenses and the Department of Labor has new programs to fund re-training. However, access to these federal funds is through state agencies.

It was great to hear our president speak so candidly about his faith and what the Word of God has meant in his life. I made many great connections at the conference and learned some interesting strategies which I plan to implement in the Arms Wide Open Ministries' programs.

Arms Wide Ministries, which will provide youth and adult substance abuse recovery programs, a youth empowerment program, and reentry programs for youth and adult ex-offenders, is located in the former Lodge Building in Marlinton. We are completing renovations to the building and will hold its grand opening celebration on July 10.

members of Congress about increased PILT payments.

PILT fly-in targets legislators

Commissioner Reta Griffith was one of 11 county officials from as many states who fanned out over Capitol Hill on June 22 and 23 to make the case for increased Payment in Lieu of Taxes (PILT) funding in FY05. The PILT program is the line item in the Department of the Interior budget whereby the federal government partially compensates counties for certain tax-exempt public lands inside their boundaries.

In Pocahontas County we receive PILT payments for the National Forest properties. For FY 2004, the county will receive $430,000.

Even as the meetings were ongoing, the staff for Subcommittee Chair Senator Conrad Burns (R-Mont.) was quietly circulating a draft of the bill for sign-off from Subcommittee members in order to send it to the full Appropriations committee without a Subcommittee mark-up. While figures are not yet available to the public, staff members familiar with the draft have hinted at a modest increase for PILT.

Meanwhile, published reports on Capitol Hill say that the version being circulated restores hundreds of millions of dollars for federal land acquisition that the House bill had cut.

The House version of the Interior Appropriation bill allocated $226 million for PILT. $226 is just $1 million more than Congress spent on PILT this year and does not move the program toward its full authorization of $341 million in any significant way. NACo's Public Lands Steering Committee and Western Interstate Region have repeatedly called on Congress to fully fund the program. (Contact: Paul Beddoe 202/942-4234 or pbeddoe@naco.org)

While rare, it is possible for a presidential candidate to win a majority of the country's electoral votes and become president, while losing the popular vote, which is what happened in the 2000 election when President George Bush won the majority of the electoral votes, but lost the popular vote to presidential candidate Al Gore.

"I will feel really good if I get to cast one of our electoral votes," said McCarty, "I think we saw in the last election that West Virginia's votes could decide an election."

PMH board will offer Must as new board member

by Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

While various combinations of replacements for retiring Pocahontas Memorial Hospital Board members succumbed from lack of support, the board was able to decide on one name to offer to the Pocahontas County Commission.

On a motion by PMH board member Donald McNeel, the board will advance Dr. Robert Must, of Hillsboro, as its recommendation to fill the unexpired term of Steve Smith.

Board member Joann Fromhart's term is not up until July 21. Fromhart has said she will not accept another term.

McNeel suggested waiting until July to present a name to fill her seat.

Traditionally, the county commission has chosen people for PMH board seats based on the recommendation of that board.

Apparently, board members were reluctant to recommend Dr. John Sharp, Dr. Sarita Bennett and nurse practitioner Amy Riley to the commission.

Both Sharp and Bennett had expressed interest in returning to staff positions at PMH contingent upon having a seat on the board.

Riley told the board she was willing to take a seat so that the medical community would have representation.

A motion to offer her name along with Must's died for lack of a second.

Last month, PMH chief of staff Dr. William Browning told the county commission and the PMH board that the hospital is approaching a staffing crisis. With Dr. Randy Lagoc about to leave for South Carolina, the hospital is left with only two doctors, Browning and Dr. Luis Soriano, for staffing and to be on call.

However, while Lagoc's leaving has created a problem, the board is considering hiring her as a "hospitalist" to be on staff and work in the emergency room.

She will return July 9-14 to staff the hospital during Soriano's vacation.

But the board is searching for a way to make that stint more permanent.

"She'd be a great hospitalist," Browning said, "if you can figure out a way to pay her. She loves the hospital."

Further, other doctors in the community would be comfortable sending their patients to Lagoc, Browning said.

"She's a perfect fit," he continued.

The board did not vote on Lagoc's possible return or creating the hospitalist position.

Instead, it will likely meet again in special session on a date to be announced.

The next regular meeting of the PMH board is scheduled for July 20.

Should Democratic presidential hopeful John Kerry win in West Virginia on November 2, Leslee McCarty, of Hillsboro, will be one of five of West Virginia's Electors to cast the state's electoral votes.

McCarty was selected at the West Virginia Democratic Convention on June 12 to be a Democratic Elector.

"I feel really honored," said McCarty, noting that typically, Electors are often party regulars who have "paid their dues" over the years. In contrast, McCarty has been on the Pocahontas County Democratic Executive Committee for only a short time. According to McCarty, this was the first year for the Executive Committee to hold its own county convention and select delegates to attend the state convention.

When the time came to go to Charleston for the state convention, McCarty found that she was the only delegate able to go. At first, McCarty said she was less than thrilled to be making the drive to Charleston by herself.

Once she was at the convention, however, McCarty said she heard speeches by Senator Jay Rockefeller and Democratic gubernatorial candidate Joe Manchin.

McCarty went to the convention simply to represent Pocahontas County but was soon asked by Platform Committee member Bill Wooten if she would like to run as a candidate for Elector. McCarty said yes, and before she knew it, she was giving a speech to her of electoral votes for the state.

Political parties in each state submit a list of individuals who pledge to vote for their party candidate for president to the state's chief election official.

Then, on election day in November, people cast their ballots for the slate of Electors who represent their choice for president and vice president.

Whichever state of Electors wins the most popular votes in each state becomes that state's Electors. Therefore, whichever presidential ticket wins the popular vote in a state wins all of that state's electoral votes.

The following December, each state's Electors meet in their state capitals and cast their electoral votes—one vote each for president and one vote for vice-president. Their votes are then sealed and delivered to the President of the Senate, who opens and reads them before both houses of Congress on January 6.

The candidates for president and vice president who win an absolute majority (over half of the overall total) of the electoral votes are declared president and vice president.

If no one wins an absolute majority, the U.S. House of Representatives—considered the chamber closest to the people of the United States—selects the president from the top three contenders with each state casting only one vote. Again, an absolute majority is required.

Similarly, the U.S. Senate that office.

While rare, it is possible for a presidential candidate to win a majority of the country's electoral votes and become president, while losing the popular vote, which is what happened in the party of the electoral votes, but lost the popular vote to presidential candidate Al Gore.

"I will feel really good if I get to cast one of our electoral votes," said McCarty. "I think we saw in the last election that West Virginia's votes could decide an election."

Robert D. Sharp, of Hillsboro, was arrested on June 22 by Deputy Sheriff B. C. Totten and charged with driving with his license suspended/revoked due to DUI, second offense, and two counts of possession of a controlled substance. He was released the next day on $2500 bond.

Arnold B. Schoolcraft, of Marlinton, was arrested by Marlinton Police Chief E. L. Tinney on operators, registration, inspection, and insurance charges. He was released on $2500 bond.

Benjamin C. Wright, of Beverly, was found guilty of driving with his license suspended/revoked following a hearing in Magistrate William Hevener's court on June 23. He was sentenced to six months on home confinement in Randolph County.

McCarty went to the convention simply to represent Pocahontas County but was soon asked by Platform Committee member Bill Wooten if she would like to run as a candidate for Elector. McCarty said yes, and before she knew it, she was giving a speech to her caucus. McCarty said she spoke about her experiences as a small business owner, a volunteer in her community and her activities with the county Executive Committee.

Running against Patricia Hartman, whom McCarty described as one of the "party regulars," McCarty wasn't sure what the outcome would be.

She was pleasantly surprised when the vote came out in her favor.

As an Elector, McCarty will travel to Charleston this December, should Kerry win November's presidential election, and cast her vote in the Electoral College.

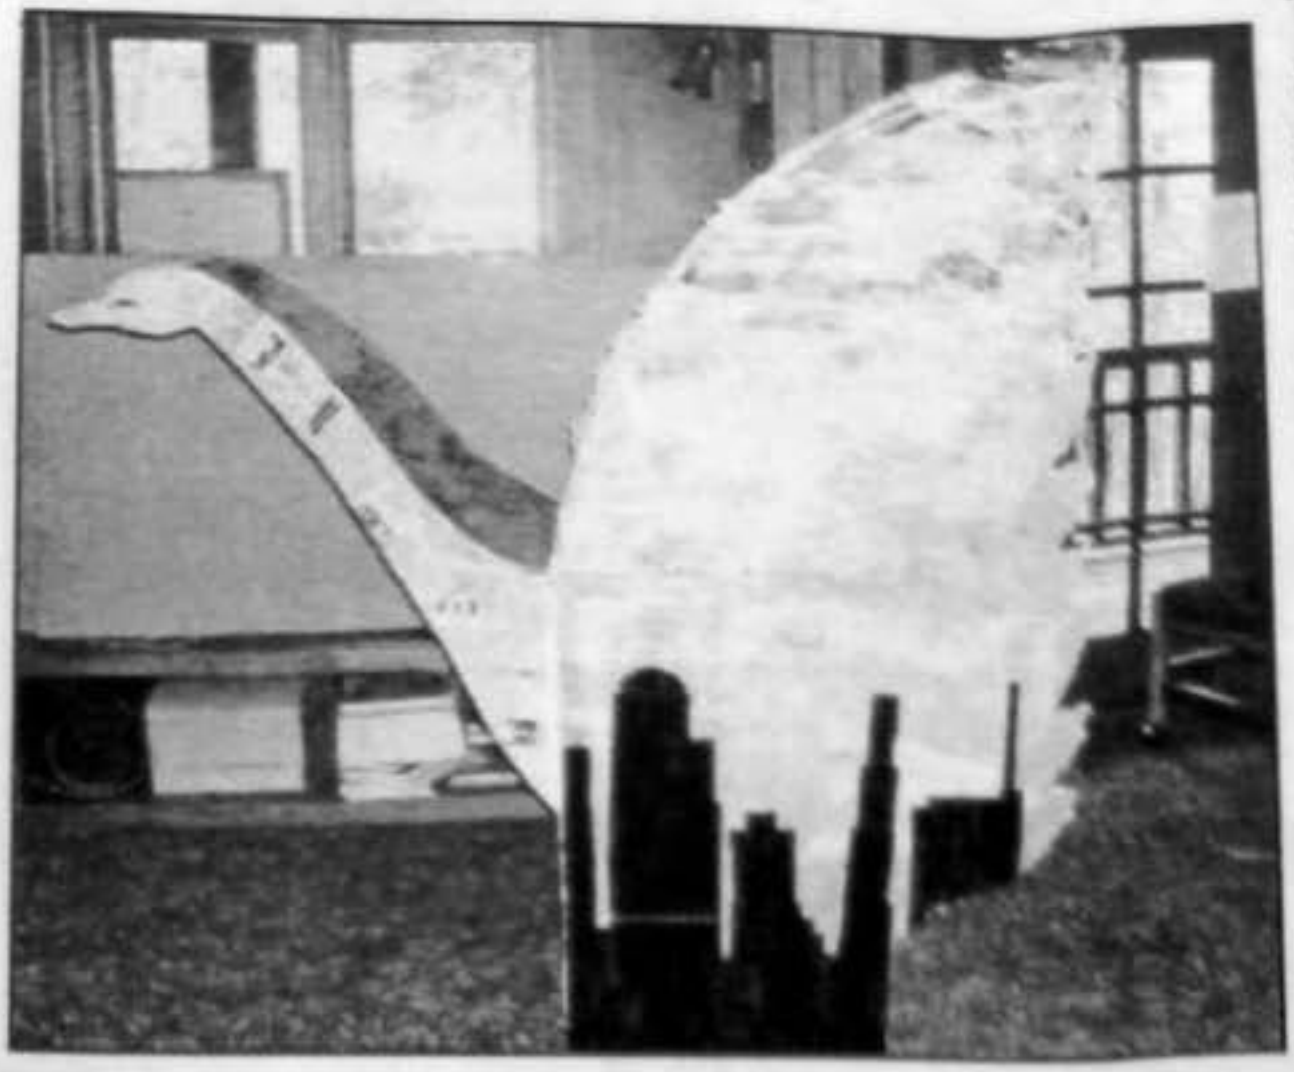
High Rocks Academy holds picnic

On Friday, June 26, approximately 50 parents, volunteers, donors and community members joined 17 High Rocks girls and about a dozen staff at a picnic held in appreciation of High Rocks' supporters. The highlight of the evening was a presentation by the High Rocks girls in celebration of the successful completion of High Rocks' annual "Camp Steele," a 10-day project-oriented academic summer camp for high school girls from Pocahontas, Nicholas, and Greenbrier counties who participate in the High Rocks program.

Since June 16, the group of ninth through twelfth grade students had been staying in the High Rocks campground and working on the project that was unveiled Friday evening. That project was the creation of half-a-dozen chairs, each made entirely of cardboard. These "functional sculptures" were completely designed and built by the girls themselves. The project—nicknamed "The Chair Challenge"—was designed to develop the girls' skills in geometry, art, and writing. It was sponsored by the Pocahontas County Arts Council, the West Virginia Arts Council and the Margaret Hall Foundation.

The "Chair Challenge" required girls to work in groups of two or three to create a chair out of cardboard that would support at least 170 pounds, was at least 12 inches off the ground, and that was beautiful enough to be considered a work of art. As Kayla Reed, of Greenbrier County, explained in her speech, "We all thought this was going to be impossible—to change a piece of cardboard into an amazing, beautiful chair." To prepare, all girls had classes in math, art, and philosophy that explored ideas about geometry, design, and beauty, as well as daily building "labs" to help spark their creativity and practice engineering skills.



THE SWAN CHAIR, created by Hayley Tamea, Ally Triplett, and Kelsey Carter for the "Chair Challenge."

At the end of the building project, girls prepared "chair narratives" that told the story of their chair and created photo essays documenting the design and construction process. The chairs will become a traveling exhibit that will be on display throughout the coming year at various locations in West Virginia, including the Pocahontas Free Libraries, Carnegie Hall in Lewisburg, and the Women and Creativity conference in Morgantown.

The High Rocks is a community non-profit organization serving young women in Pocahontas, Nicholas, and Greenbrier counties. In addition to annual summer camps, the program includes year-round tutoring and enrichment, community service projects, leadership development, and post-graduate planning. High Rocks is free to all participants and is supported by grants and private donations. If you are interested in learning more about High Rocks or supporting the work we do, please call 304-653-4891 or visit www.highrocks.org.

134 youth attend Pocahontas County 4-H Camp in Thornwood

"Dancin' With the Hs" was the theme of this year's Pocahontas County 4-H Camp, which was attended by 134 4-H'ers June 7-11 at Camp Thornwood.

Chiefs and Sagamores of the tribes were as follows: Cherokee Tribe –Sarah Beard, Amanda Wiley; Delaware Tribe– Adam Irvine, Renae Burks; Mingo Tribe – Grace Ferrell, Ryan Ware; Seneca Tribe– Jonathon Burns, Lucy Mosesso; Big Feet – Tim Williams, Greg Moore.

The campers participated in classes in archery, basketball, basic crocheting, baskets, cake decorating, camp beautification, camp newspaper, candy making, celebrate 4-H traditions, CD painting, charting, cookie making, cross-stitch nametags, fishing, fly-tying, folk dancing, jean rag quilting, line dancing, livestock skillathon, mountain biking, muzzleloading, old time music jam, outdoor cooking, painted stepping stones, precharting, rockets, sand art, save-our-streams, sea shell candles, skincare & color, softball / volleyball, step-up to a healthier life, vagabond cooking, and woodburning.

The campers participated in afternoon dance assemblies throughout the week, including an "Old Time Square Dancing" led by Bob Keller, "Scottish Dancing" with the WV Highlanders and the Highland Dancers, and "Clogging" with the Little Switzerland Cloggers. Other afternoon and evening activities included Field Day, a talent show, Karaoke night, Council Circles, and Party night with dancing, movies, and pizza.

Approximately 100 family members joined the campers for a pork barbeque and covered dish meal on Friday evening. Camp awards were presented to the 4-H'ers during the final council circle on Friday Night. Adam Irvine was selected as this year's "Spirit of Camp" and was presented the spirit stick, which was carved and painted by each of the tribes during camp. The following campers were chosen as those best representing the four Hs of 4-H at camp: Head H, Jonathon Burns; Heart H, Grace Ferrell; Hands H, Lucy Mosesso; Health H, Sarah Beard.

Each tribal chief also presented a miniature tribal spirit stick to two campers from each tribe who made outstanding contributions during the week. The campers receiving these were: Lindsey Stone and Seth Doss, Mingo; Joy Walkup and Nathan Hamons, Cherokee; Elizabeth Liptrap and Steven Casto, Delaware; Kaylee Williams and Coy Beverage, Seneca.

Charters receiving their 4-H pins were Clay Baxter, Grace Ferrell, Seth Nelson, and Felicia Pennington.

Outstanding first year camper scholarships were presented to Faith Galford and Joey Friel. The Cool Camper Scholarship was presented to Justin Dilley. Clay Baxter received the Harold Carpenter Scholarship. The 4-H Information Scholarship was presented to Jed Walkup who won the 4-H Information Contest.

The 36 first year campers receiving "lucky penny" awards were Joey Friel, Faith Galford, Jordan Mann, Katie Rose, Jennifer Landis, Steven Casto, Elizabeth Liptrap, Amy Bennett, Jessalyn Hamilton, Abbi Hall, Clayton Irvine, Kimberley Pollard, Clair Mosesso, Emily Gibson, Olivia Workman, Nathan Hamons, Gavin Moore Tori Williams, Kaylee Williams, Joy Walkup, Melody Walkup, Jed Walkup, Derek Jonese, Miranda McNabb, Amy Sharp, Erin White, Samantha Walton, Whitney Beckwith, Carrie Shearer, Callie Morrison, Jesse Walker, Dalton Walker, Brittany Ramos, Michaela Tuttle, Lindsey Stone, and Chasten Taylor. Allegheny Echoes brings old-time and bluegrass music to Marlinton.

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Allegheny Echoes came "down off the mountain" for its eighth annual week of instruction, group lessons, workshops and "Monster Jams." Walking among the tents set up behind the Marlinton Motor Inn in the afternoon, strains of traditional old-time tunes on fiddle or claw-hammer banjo and the driving melodies of good old-fashioned bluegrass could be heard. The workshop ran June 20 - 26.

In the evening, the music came to downtown Marlinton with a traditional square dance, as well as performances at the Opera House by students and instructors alike. All the events were free and open to the public.

The summer workshop's 25 instructors have each won numerous awards for their writing and musical talents and have deep roots in the state's musical and poetic heritage. Several of the instructors were from Pocahontas County, including Mike Bing (mandolin), Tim Bing (claw-hammer banjo), Richard Hefner (bluegrass banjo), Rick Carpenter (bluegrass mandolin), Pam Lund (fiddle) and Larry Combs (guitar).

A new generation of pickers and fiddlers learn bluegrass and old-time melodies. "The whole point of Allegheny Echoes is to pass it on," said Monica Bing, one of the event's organizers.

According to Monica Bing, one of the co-organizers of the event, the students were encouraged to get out and explore the county. Sherrell Wigal, who taught writing workshops, said Pocahontas County had helped "instill a sense of place" in her students and their writing. A visit to Beartown State Park was "a spiritual experience" for many of the students.

"It was a good move to be in the town of Marlinton," said Craig Auge, a writing student from Morgantown who has been to Allegheny Echoes for five of the past six years. Auge said he and the other students were more prone to

Markers offer historical glimpse of county's past

Many of the markers recount battles and skirmishes between soldiers, settlers and indians.

Curtis Curry
Contributing Writer

As a young boy, I enjoyed reading the historic highway markers along our West Virginia highways. Our family did not own a car but I was able to ride along with my father on his delivery of S. B. Wallace products.

It was a slower pace of living during the late 1930's and my father managed to take his lunch break near many of these signs. I carefully read them and my father would patiently answer any questions I might have. I didn't realize at the time that these signs had been erected only in 1937.

Work on these roadside signs began in 1934 during the administration of West Virginia Governor H. G. Kump (1933-1937) and was completed during the administration of Governor Homer A. Holt (1937-1941). It is not clear who suggested or initiated this great project, but two prominent Pocahontas County residents were involved.

Isaac McNeel, for the West Virginia Commission on Historic and Scenic Markers, assisted in the preparation of the inscriptions for the markers, and the1937 guidebook entitled West Virginia Historic and Scenic Highway Markers. It was published by the West Virginia State Road Commission. This guidebook was a glovebox size (4" x 9") booklet of 247 pages. It contains an alphabetical list of markers (and their text), a list by counties, a list by highways, a section describing tours of each highway, and lots of wonderful pictures of that era. Those who still have one of these booklets are indeed fortunate!

Calvin W. Price, editor of The Pocahontas Times, was a member of the West Virginia Commission on Historic and Scenic Markers along with Governor Kump and eleven other citizens from various parts of the state.

Determining where these markers would be placed and what would appear on them would have been a vast undertaking. Space on the markers was limited to about eight lines and any text would have to adequately describe the scenic sight or event but stay within the space limitations.

Cost would be another factor. Purchase of the signs, their installation, and maintenance of the state highway system would require a substantial amount of money. Fortunately, the Great Depression was in full swing and the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) was in operation. The CCC was a federal program that employed young men in conservation projects. Many of the markers were made at the CCC camp at Cass.

The markers are made of cast aluminum, are 42 inches wide and 30 inches high. Each marker is topped by a nine-inch Seal of the State of West Virginia. The raised letters are two inches high. While they are sturdily constructed, traffic and the severe winters have taken their toll on these markers.

There were 440 markers listed in the 1937 guidebook

County to receive more than $200,000 from Budget Digest

Pocahontas County will receive a grand total of $212,180 from the State Budget Digest, including money for school programs, senior citizens, festivals, a fire department and a public radio station.

The county's senior citizens programs garnered the most money at $25,000, while the complementary Area Agency on Aging will receive $25,000. Each AAA will receive an additional $20,000.

In terms of contributions to the school system, the Budget Digest will dole out $20,000 to the Pocahontas Vo-Tech Center for the welding program, $20,000 for the PCHS band's uniform fund, one $18,000 contribution and one $4,680 contribution for Pocahontas County Schools.

The Town of Hillsboro will receive $10,000, as will Hillsboro's Volunteer Fire Department.

Allegheny Mountain Radio is on tap to receive $15,000, and will receive continuing assistance, as well.

County festivals were also in the Budget Digest's list of recipients with Pioneer Days receiving $7,000, Durbin Days and Cass Homecoming each receiving $2,000.

Allegheny Echoes will receive $7500 from the Budget Digest and the Pocahontas County Opera House will receive $6,000.

The Buckskin Council, whose state camp is on Rt. 28 south of Dunmore, will receive $10,000.

State Senator Walt Helmick (D-Pocahontas) is chair of the Finance Committee.

Representatives from five counties discuss Mountain Waters Byway

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Representatives from five counties on either side of the West Virginia - Virginia state line met in Marlinton Friday.

The representatives, from Bath and Rockbridge counties in Virginia and Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Nicholas counties in West Virginia, are developing marketing plans and improvements along a recently designated stretch of scenic byway.

Following State Route 39, the byway runs from Lexington, Virginia to Summersville, In West Virginia, this stretch of State Route 39 is designated as the Mountain Waters Byway, according to Robin Mutscheller, who represented the Marlinton Business Association at Friday's meeting.

Also attending the meeting were Sally Johnson, of the Bath County Chamber of Commerce, Jean Clark, Director of Tourism in Lexington and Rockbridge, Mel Hobbes, Director of the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitor's Bureau, Pocahontas County Commissioner Reta Griffith, Marlinton Mayor Dotty Kellison, Richwood Mayor Bob Henry Baber, Ralph Kelly, Nicholas County liaison to the 4C Economic Development Authority, and Gail Price, of Snowshoe Mountain.

At the meeting, Mutscheller continued, the group discussed a map of the byway from Lexington to Summersville, selected Price—former director of the Pocahontas County Convention and Visitor's Bureau—as the group's chair, set the date for a byways conference in September and discussed the selection of a proper name for the byway as the group chose to move toward a national designation similar to the Highland Scenic Highway.

As the group's chair, Price said [illegible] will be "to make tee has sought federal funding for improvements, including street lights along a segment of the Greenbrier River Trail in Marlinton, an information kiosk, landscaping and benches and online marketing, according to Mutscheller.

Mutshceller noted that these, and future improvements, are not just for tourists, but benefit and improve the local community as well.

Mutscheller said the project "has enormous potential," citing the opportunities for increased tourism and business growth along the byway, federal funding for improvements and byway projects and the cooperation between five counties across state lines.

"The Marlinton Business Association is excited about the byway project. It's a really positive thing, working with chambers of commerce and tourism groups," said Mutscheller.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Several times in the past three years, my mother, Glenna Madge White, was a patient in Pocahontas Memorial Hospital. She was a cardiac patient and became ill with dementia. Patients like Mom need special care. At this little hospital in Buckeye, she received the best possible. No other hospital would have met her needs in the manner that was given at PMH.

Mom passed away June 16 in the hospital. Up to that point, Dr. Browning took care of her. Along with taking care of her medically, he treated her with respect and did everything to make her comfortable. The nursing staff couldn't be beat for coffee, brought donuts and cookies, as we sat with Mom in her final week. A man from maintenance even offered to bring us something to drink. No other hospital would have catered to our needs as PMH did.

My point in this letter is to say that this little hospital is a wonderful facility, with wonderful helpers. I don't know how its finances are, but I do know if this hospital could ever have to close, it would be a terrible loss for the people of Pocahontas County and the surrounding areas. You will be faced with family members, or yourselves, that need a facility like PMH. You will not find another hospital that cares for its patients as

Please, check with your county and see what can be done to aid PMH and to keep it in existence for years to come. From the administrator through the whole hospital, the best care is offered.

The Board of Education met for a regular meeting on Tuesday of last week.

The first order of business at the meeting was for School Superintendent Patrick Law to administer the oath of office to the new/re-elected members of the Board. Taking the oath were Emery Grimes, Jesse Groseclose, and Kenneth Vance.

This was followed by the re-election of Kenneth Vance as President of the Board for a term to end June 30, 2006. Ruth Taylor was elected as Vice-president.

The meeting was begun with an executive session on personnel.

The music/band director position at Pocahontas County High School was filled by transferring Gregory Richmond from the music/choral/band teacher position at Marlinton Middle School to the high school. Mr. Richmond was only recently hired for the Marlinton position. He is replacing Ron Hall who is taking the Assistant Principal position at the high school.

Shaun Davis, the new music/band teacher at Green Bank was employed as assistant band director at PCHS.

Approval was given for Pendleton County Bank as the depository for school system funds. The vote was 4 -1 with Thomas VanReenen casting the

ON MICHAEL BOSLEY (r) receives his Diploma rom Dr. Alexander Karakos (l) for completion of the

Bosley studies in Greece

The Demokritus University of Thrace in Xanthi, Greece, was the site of the 2004 annual course on Image Processing Applied to Remote Sensing, which was offered through The Earth Imaging Consortium (a program that is dedicated to the development of an international remote sensing curriculum). The United States Department of Education, NASA, and the European Union provided funding for the course. The fifteen-day course provided students with the opportunity to expand their knowledge of remote sensing through lectures, guest speakers, ground truthing field trips, and finally by applying their skills to the software package, TeraVue. For a final project, each American student was paired with a Greek student and completed a remote sensing land cover classification project for the area around Xanthi and the Nestos River basin using supervised and unsupervised classification methods.

Professor Alexander Karakos of The Demokritus University of Thrace was the host during the stay in Xanthi. Professor Jean-Marie Monget of Ecole des Mines de Paris and Dr. Timothy Warner of West Virginia University of the United States were responsible for the lectures and TeraVue tutorials throughout the week. Guest lecturers Professor G. Sylaios of NAGREF and Professor Jacque Ganoulis of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki presented a colloquium style series on "Space Oceanography applications to coastal environmental monitoring" and "Sustainable Scholar. In December 2003, Jon Michael was awarded a NASA Space Grant to fund his research project "Monitoring Mountaintop Removal in Southern West Virginia: A Remote Sensing Case Study."

Along with the monetary support, Jon Michael's final paper will be published in a NASA publication. In May 2004, Jon Michael received his B.A. in Environmental Geo-

PhD, Jon Michael plans to teach college abroad for a few years and then settle in the States.

To give him a little experience before Graduate School, Jon Michael has taken an Internship with the United States Department of Agriculture, where he is a Physical Science Technician. Tasks besides GIS work include plotting and analyzing data, maintaining detailed TeraVue tutorials throughout the week. Guest lecturers Professor G. Sylaios of NAGREF and Professor Jacque Ganoulis of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki presented a colloquium style series on "Space oceanography applications to coastal environmental monitoring" and "Sustainable water resources management in trans boundary river basins" respectively.

The class was comprised of students from Universities in Greece, Romania, France, and the United States. In attendance from the United States were two students from West Virginia University. Matt Smolnik of Jamestown, New York, and Jon Michael Bosley, of Durbin.

Jon Michael and Matt learned about Greek culture by visiting the ruins of Philippi, the city of Drama, and even watching the movie "Troy" (Topia in Greek) with the Greek students, who acted as personal historians during the film.

Jon Michael and Matt extended their stay in Greece for a couple extra days by visiting the City of Athena (Athens). A few highlights of Athens included shopping at the outdoor market in Monastiraki, eating at various restaurants, seeing the new Olympic Stadium, and of course taking a grand tour of the Acropolis. It was total amazement visiting the Parthenon, the Theater of Dionysus, and the other ruins of this great city.

In addition to being selected as part of the international student exchange program, Jon Michael has had a very successful year. In May 2003, he was selected as a National McNair Virginia: A Remote Sensing Case Study."

Along with the monetary support, Jon Michael's final paper will be published in a NASA publication. In May 2004, Jon Michael received his B.A. in Environmental Geosciences from West Virginia University. In September of 2004, Jon Michael will be attending Oregon State University where he has been accepted into the Department of Geosciences Master's/PhD program in Geography. His specialization will be in Geographical Information Science (GIS) and Remote Sensing. Jon Michael has been awarded a 2004 Target Scholarship from OSU to pay all tuition until the completion of a PhD. Upon completion of his ence before Graduate School, Jon Michael has taken an Internship with the United States Department of Agriculture, where he is a Physical Science Technician. Tasks besides GIS work include plotting and analyzing data, maintaining detailed laboratory records such as computer database observation records, graphical representations, and spreadsheets showing calculations from laboratory data as well as preparing charts, forms, and documents using well-established, specified procedures.

Jon Michael is the son of John Bosley, of Durbin, and the late Rawna Bosley, and is a 1998 Graduate of Pocahontas County High School.

Dunz and Friel to participate in state softball tournament

Cyndi Dunz and Emily Friel, members of the Pocahontas Rangerettes Softball Team, will be taking part in the West Virginia Girls Fast Pitch Softball Tournament on July 25 - 30. The girls were chosen to represent Pocahontas County on the Nicholas East All Star Team, which won the district championship on Monday.

On Friday the team lost to Summersville by a 6 to 4 score. However, they came back on Sunday and easily defeated Braxton County 20 -1. To win the district champion the team had to defeat Summersville twice. This they did, by scores of 9 - 5 and 8 - 6.

The state tournament will be held in Huntington.

"Beach Party 2004" was the theme of the Durbin Days Pageant held Saturday, June 26 at the Green Bank Middle School.

The gym was decorated as a beach with sand and sea creatures while 12 young ladies and 5 young men competed the evening with smiles, hula hoot and elegant evening wear.

During the evening there were three raffle drawings, one for a $500 cash prize for which the contestants sold tickets. The lucky winner was Susie Beverage of Green Bank. Second was for an afghan made and donated by Christy Lambert of Elkins. The afghan was won by Lucille Mallow of Burton, and the 50/50 drawing went to Carl Ashley of Burton.

Visiting royalty, 2003 Miss Pocahontas, Felicia Pennington, 2003 Little Miss Pocahontas, Kayla Lester and Little Mr. West Virginia, Jeffrey Teter, of Riverton were present at the pageant.

Patti Bennett, of Riverton was the emcee for the evening.

Judging the pageant were Angel Blizzard, of Moorefield, Sales Manager of Radio Station WIJWV in Petersburg, Deanne Barkley, of Seneca Rocks, a beautician at "Creations by Wanda" Beauty Salon in Circleville and Kristy Shuttle, of Moorefield, Office Manager at Kline and Kline Attorneys.

Tabulator for the evening was Frank Pennel, of Durbin. Photography was provided by Adam Mallory and Rocky Ryder.

The audience was entertained by Ashley and Courtney Rexrode and by Patrick Lambert. Ashley and Courtney dazzled the audience with their singing while Patrick Lambert sang and danced his way through the crowd entertaining the young and old. He wowed the audience when he sang "Under the Boardwalk" and placed a lei around the judges. He serenaded the New Queen with his rendition of "Pretty Woman."

Hermitage Estate, Lyn Bill's PizzaSubs, Junction Restaurant, Tenni of Barton, Denise Alkire, West End Station, Boyer Motel, Snow High Candle Shop, Burton Chevron, Burton Dairy King, Heavenly Cuts and Curls, DMC Company, Ryders Chevron, Henry's Quick Stop, Hermitage Motel and Restaurant, Billy Cassell, Clifford Peck, Aleen Nelson, Shane Mortenson, Matt Long, Susie Lambert, Fred Greer, Tarrytown Hall, Rocky Ryder, Kim Roberts, David Rexrode and Clint Morris all donated time and gifts.

Durbin citizens protest rate hike

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Despite the Administrative Law Judge's attempts to maintain order during Wednesday's hour-long hearing, the citizens of Durbin appeared to be running the evening.

Approximately 30 Durbin residents attended the protest hearing regarding a 42.8% water rate increase for the town. The increase, which is in addition to a previous two percent emergency rate increase, is intended to offset the costs to the Pocahontas Service District in hiring two additional employees and giving the PSD's current sole employee, Rick Barkley, his first raise since the late 1990s according to Shawn Ireland, an accountant for the Public Service Commission.

The rate increase would also allow the nonprofit PSD to have an additional $6,500 each year for "additions or unforeseen costs," Ireland added.

Overall, operating costs for the Durbin PSD would increase from around $74,000 to more than $110,000.

"The increase itself is certainly a large, percentage wise, increase. With only 260 customers, there's not much to spread the costs of these things out," Ireland said.

After allowing Ireland and two other PSC employees, attorney Lisa Wansley-Layne and engineer James Spurlock, to make opening statements, PSC Administrative Law Judge Sunya Andersen offered the floor to Durbin residents.

Many residents expressed their concern with the town's average water loss of 40% between the treatment plant and customers' homes.

"The district is losing 40% of its water," noted Spurlock. "That's significantly high. The Public Service Commission's requirement is 15% or less."

"How long have you been losing this 40%," resident Evan Bonley asked, "and why hasn't it been fixed from then until plant was installed in 1990, it was corrected at that time, our water usage was approximately 180,000 to 200,000 (gallons) a day." Barkley explained.

Carpenter added. "It's a burden on all of us, the county, as well as the PSD."

Resident James Bennett asked if the base minimum rate could not be changed from 3,000 gallons to 3,500 or 4,000 gallons.

"If people on Social Security... had a leak or something, that would help cover it," he said.

"Ordinarily, if we're going to change the rate structure, we would take it down to 2,000," Ireland responded. "What that does, if someone's using 1,000 gallons, they don't have to pay for 3,000. They only have to pay for 2,000."

However, such a change to the rate structure did not seem necessary for Durbin, according to Ireland.

Ireland also explained that the actual cost of treating the water from the springs that supply the town was approximately $5,200. Even with zero water loss, he said, the cost of treatment would be about $3,000.

The difference of $2,200 only amounted to about 2% of the entire operating cost of the PSD, Ireland noted.

"What's driving the rates is the hiring of the two people, the 15% wage increase (for Barkley), paying for their reserves and to have the $6,500 surplus for unexpected expenses."

"The water loss problem is really only costing a couple thousand dollars a year," he continued, "although it still needs to be addressed and fixed, that's not the main force driving up these rates."

Regardless of the cause, some residents expressed their frustration with the climbing water rates.

Former town employee Emma Nottingham recalled when the rates were only three dollars per month.

"Then our water went up from three dollars to $6.40 a month. From $6.40 it went to $9. From $9 it went to $12 and then up to $19. Then from $19 it went up to $20. Now it wants to go up to $29," she said. "Why should we have to pay 10 times what we were paying?"

Nottingham also asked if Barkley's wife was being paid by the PSD and town rate payers.

"I'm the only paid employee," Barkley said.

"My wife went November of last year and took her Class I test. She has been helping me with the paperwork and to fix water leaks, and she has not received a paycheck, not a red penny," he continued. "It's all in the ledger books if anyone wants to look at it. I am the only paid employee."

Nottingham also took issue with the 15% raise in pay for Barkley, recommended by the PSC.

"We get 2% on Social Security," she said. "That's quite a difference."

Barkley noted it had been eight years since his last raise.

A final decision on the rate increase will come from the PSC's Administrative Law Division by the middle of April, according to a PSC procedural order.

According to a separate PSC order issued February 8, the Pocahontas County PSD was also one of 16 counties that had yet to file its annual report for the period ending June 30, 2004. The county PSDs named in the order may face investigation by the commission, civil penalties and possible revocation of their authority to operate as a utility.

Library Board continues operation of Durbin Library for at least one year

The future of the Durbin Library was the main item on the agenda for the February meeting of the Pocahontas County Free Libraries board. A decision was made to continue the library in [illegible] location for at least the next year, but nothing was decided beyond that.

The meeting was held on Tuesday of last week at the Green Bank Library.

"When the original treatment plant was installed in 1980, it was unmetered at that time, our water usage was approximately 180,000 to 200,000 (gallons) a day," Barkley explained.

When the current treatment plant was installed, the town's usage dropped to 80,000 gallons per day, he continued.

Barkley said he fixed leaks as they surfaced, noting that he currently must work both at the plant and in the field. Much of the loss, he said, was due to breaks that had occurred in the service lines installed between the water main and customers' meters.

"We try to repair those as soon as they surface, one at a time," Barkley continued.

"As far as going out and looking for leaks, unless I start digging up lines, with no water standing there, I don't know where to dig," he added. "We've got eight or 10 miles of water lines."

Bosley also asked to know how much Barkley's health insurance cost the PSD.

Insurance and retirement for Barkley, which is paid in full by the PSD, totaled $14,001 per year, according to Ireland.

"I've worked for a couple different companies and any company I've worked for I've had to share insurance costs," Bosley said.

Library Board continues operation of Durbin Library for at least one year

The future of the Durbin Library was the main item on the agenda for the February meeting of the Pocahontas County Free Libraries board. A decision was made to continue the library in it present location for at least the next year year, but nothing was decided beyond that.

The meeting was held on Tuesday of last week at the Green Bank Library.

At the present the library is located in a building owned by the Bartow-Frank-Durbin Fire Department on Rt. 250 in Durbin. For a number of years there has been discussions on obtaining a improved facility for the library, either by renovating the building now being used, locating to another building, or constructing a new facility. The possibility of closing the Durbin library has also hovered in the background.

Renovating the existing facility or moving to the tannery office building have been given most consideration recently. In his report to the Board, Library Director Allen Johnson stated that the fire department will not lower the $60,000 price it is asking for its building and an estimated $40,000 is needed to renovate it; there is only $40,000 available for the Durbin project; the tannery office will take about $40,000 to fix up but might have higher operating costs.

PCFL Board President Gibbs Kinderman said it is not time "to cut and run" at Durbin but noted that "we are as a far away from a long range solution" on an improved facility for a Durbin library as "we were six months ago."

Board member Sue Ann Heatherly noted that it had taken "decades" for the new Green Bank and Marlinton buildings to come about. A suggested 20-year lease on the building to PCFL might be a problem for the department, she said.

B-F-D member Janet Ghigo said the department is willing to waive the $250 per month for three years in exchange for $9000 in improvements to the building.

Durbin Mayor Mike Vance said he had just come from a meeting with a combined community facility/library was being discussed.

The first of two decisions on Durbin Library was made when the Board voted to continue the library at its present location for one year, with the $250 rent to be applied towards building improvements. This was passed on a 5-0 vote.

The cost of operating the Durbin facility, three to four times as much per check-out as the other libraries, due to its low use was noted by PCFL Treasurer Beth Little. Ms. Heatherly stressed that check-outs do not tell the whole story about a library; other uses are as or more important.

The need for more community support of the library was stressed several times by Mr. Kinderman, "this year it has to happen." He noted that the State Library Commission has been urging the Board to close the Durbin Library for financial reasons.

Ways of increasing community support was discussed by Board members and those at the meeting.

Durbin Librarian Mindy Bond, noted the need for consistent hours and programs. She said the playgroup is underway and more high school students are using the library.

Ruby Teter noted the need for new books, pointing out some patrons have read all that are available. She reviewed some of the new things going on in Durbin that should bring more people to the library.

The other action taken was to reject the B-F-D building as one of the options for the future site of the Durbin Library at the $60,000 price. This vote was closer on this motion, 3-2. Voting in favor were Mr. Kinderman, Ms. Little, and Deni McNeel. Ms. Heatherly and R nee Wooddell opposed.

Dr. McNeel reminded t Baord that the County Commission needs an answer on whet the Durbin library will move the building at the tannery.

The library system has ceived an offer from En Beard for the donation of farm with the stipulation th will always remain in use farm. Mr. Johnson noted areas that need to be negot with her involve the house, ficient funds to cover long- overhead and make the gift f ble financially for the libr and the terms of the farm u

"I understand that," Ireland responded, "but that's a (PSD) board decision."

Liability coverage for the PSD had also increased significantly, from $5,100 last year to $14,000 for the current year, according to Ireland.

County Commissioner James Carpenter noted that even during his two years in office, he has seen insurance rates for the county rise dramatically.

"Our liability insurance for this county, two years ago was $22,000," he said. "Last year it was $88,000."

"Health insurance for our employees at the courthouse this year, for a family policy, is costing about $9,000," he continued. "Two years ago, that was about $7,000."

"We've had tremendous increases in both liability and health insurance for our employees in the last two years."

Two injured in Tuesday morning wreck

Black ice on Route 28 was given as the cause of a two vehicle accident early Tuesday morning. Renee Hill and Brenda Williams, both of Green Bank, were both injured in the accident. The wreck occurred about 0.2 of a mile north of the intersection with Gordan Dilley Road.

According to Major D. A. Walton of the Pocahontas County's Sheriff Department, Jennifer Brown, of Snowshoe, was traveling north when her 2004 Chevrolet Tahoe hit the ice. Her vehicle slid around, crossed the center line and hit the front of an oncoming 1998 Plymouth Breeze with its right rear. The car was driven by Ms. Hill with Ms. Williams as a passenger.

The Marlinton Fire Department had to use the Jaws of Life equipment to remove the two women from the Breeze. Ms. Hill was transported from the accident site to the Charleston Area by helicopter. Ms. Williams was taken to Pocahontas Memorial Hospital by Marlinton Rescue Squad ambulance and then flown to the WVU Hospital in Morgantown.

Ms. Brown was transported to PMH, where she was treated and released.

The accident occurred about 7:30 a.m. Both of the vehicles were a total loss. All three of the women are county school employees.

Iraq: county residents coming home - others leaving

Several Pocahontas members of the armed forces either have returned home from Iraq or soon will heading this way. However, other county natives are on their way to the Middle East and service in Iraq.

Staff Writer

Pocahontas Woods will receive a $123,000 grant from the United States Department of Agriculture's Rural Development funds, according to announcements by U.S. Representative Nick J. Rahall (D-WV) and USDA State Director Jenny Phillips last week.

The assistance will be made through a Rural Business Enterprise Grant. Rural Development serves as the lead Federal entity for rural development needs and administers program assistance through its rural housing programs, rural business programs, and rural utilities programs.

The grant will be used to purchase equipment necessary to operate a woodworking shop according to John Friel, an instructor and spokesperson for Pocahontas Woods. The shop

Arbovale branch bank robbed again

Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

Local law enforcement is searching for a white male believed to have robbed the First Citizens Branch Bank in Arbovale last Wednesday.

According to a media release, the suspect was dressed in a gray sweatshirt, blue jeans, tennis shoes and dark sunglasses. His reddish-blonde goatee was visible, the release said.

The suspect may have "entered a dark colored car and departed on Rt. 92, traveling north, with a second, unknown occupant," the release said.

"There is a possibility he left in a greenish Ford Probe or Saturn," according to Sgt. Glen Galloway of the West Virginia State Police.

An undetermined amount of currency was taken from the branch bank, the release said.

The same bank was robbed in November, 2003, and in the late 1980s.

Donald Pinkerton confessed to the 2003 robbery, but no one was ever apprehended for the first heist.

STATE POLICE HAVE released this surveillance photo of the suspect in the Arbovale bank robbery.

Galloway said the WVSP detachment had received "a lot of calls," but had no concrete leads on the suspect.

Anyone with information is asked to call 304-799-4101.

will be designed to provide small wood related businesses access to sophisticated equipment to improve their woodworking skills and the quality of their products.

Radial arm and table saws, joiners, a router, shaper, lathe, planer, mortising machine, belt sander, hand tools and safety equipment are among the items to be purchased with the grant, Friel said.

"It's is a real boost for Pocahontas Woods to acquire this grant," he continued. "This will open a lot of doors for the area."

The new equipment will be part of a 2400-square-foot facility being planned for Marlinton by the local non-profit organization. With workstations for preparing, shaping, joining and finishing wood products, Friel said, the facility will be run as a cooperative for local professional woodworkers who might not otherwise have access to such equipment.

Statements by Rahall and Phillips indicated the the woodshop will assist at least five local woodworking businesses and has the potential to create 10 new jobs.

The facility will also complement the woodworking classes offered to students and adults by Pocahontas Woods at Pocahontas County High School, as well as the student apprenticeship program that began last summer, Friel said.

Over the past three years, Pocahontas Woods has offered between five and 12 classes per year covering areas such as woodcarving, furniture making, and finishing, serving between 120 and 150 students, he continued. Classes on lumber grading and turning are also in the works, Friel added.

The apprenticeship program, piloted last summer, teaches the fundamentals of grading, drying, millwork, furniture construction, finishing and safety, Friel said. This summer, the program will also incorporate elements of the new Rural Entrepreneurship though Action Learning (REAL) Enterprises program offered at PCHS, adding the elements of marketing, making project estimates and tracking projects, he added.

While he would like to see the new facility in place in time for Pioneer Days in July, Friel said the woodshop would likely be ready in the fall.

Tiny McCoy who shot himself in the head after killing his wife,

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Jo Debra Gandee has contributed to your letters to the editor file in support of the proposed sewer system. Her heartfelt concerns may be real, but the generality of her position allows several important points to be overlooked.

Jo Debra, a member of the Galford family, should be proud of her business at the intersection of Route 219 and Route 66. Her family's hard work, planning and foresight allowed them a great benefit when the Snowshoe Ski Resort moved in. The value of their surrounding property will be additionally enhanced with the addition of a sewer line.

In her letter she says:

"Strict guidelines need to be provided for the health and safety of all the residents to maintain clean water in our streams."

I agree. And where have those strict guidelines been? Where has the Department of Environmental Protection been. And their boss, the EPA? Why was the waste problem so ignored that it got out of hand? How did Snowshoe obtain permits to build and build and build without the proper infrastructure to accommodate their growth?

She continues with:

"Snowshoe does have an existing sewage treatment facility, the surrounding areas do not. That waste is filtered back into the ground through septic fields and tanks."

This implies that the polluters are her neighboring septic owners whose systems are approved by local health officials and governed by strict West Virginia law. Snowshoe's success is important and a wonderful thing for this community but is their success reason to ignore the real cause of her water quality problems? Is it more than a rumor that the sewer facility on the mountain has been dumping raw sewage into our pristine water for years and years? I have heard horror stories from long time residents of dumping into Cup Run and of the 'overflow pipe' into the Big Spring of Elk River near the Inn at Snowshoe.

subdividing farms and property by those lucky enough to "own" around Snowshoe.

These property owners will benefit tremendously from this sewer system, as their neighbors down the road, the Sharps, are disadvantaged.

A sewer plant right next to scenic route 219 and in our back yard may cause our businesses to fail. What tourist is going to book a room at our B & B next to a sewer vat? What child will press his or her nose up against the glass outside of the country store to look at all those wonderful things with the odorous prevailing winds? What couple will build their dream home on the top of a most beautiful mountain with incredible views of Snowshoe on one side, but with a sewer plant on the other?

Jo Debra, your enterprise at Big Springs is a vibrant and logical answer to the need of the many tourists on their way up the mountain. To discount your experience at the Sharp Country Store as merely a fond childhood memory is, perhaps unintentionally, disrespectful to us and our 120-year contribution to this community. We plan to have a 120-year future as well!

We have invested considerable time and money to keep the history of this community going and available to experience by those same tourists and locals to boot! We do not deserve to and will not be cast aside as irrelevant in your or the Pocahontas County Commission's mind. You should see the faces of the young as they enter our store and look in amazement at our free museum and century old phone and cash register. The old-time locals, who helped found this community, sit and chat around our 1890's tables, chairs, and counters...some read The Pocahontas Times over coffee and a Meck's cream cheese sweet roll and exchange stories.

We have a WPA outhouse for the tourists to enjoy, but our laboriously and expensively restored Bed and Breakfast farmhouse features one of those creature comforts you enjoy, indoor plumbing, as a brand new bath-

"I think the county commission has carefully considered the sewage issue in Slaty Fork."

The truth is the commissioners could not possibly have "carefully considered" as they don't know anything about this project. If you attended the March 1, 2005 County Commission meeting you would be hard pressed to say they carefully considered it. They had no idea of its capacity, the plans for Snowshoe's development, no emergency plan in case of an environmental emergency.

Additionally she reports:

"The hiring of an outside engineering firm with nothing to gain or lose showed professionalism and impartiality."

The engineering firm with nothing to gain? They may have shown professionalism and impartiality, but the fact is that they are a private, for profit entity with everything to gain from seeing this project to fruition. That impartiality also applies to any consideration of the history and culture of this community or to the effects the plant will have on its future. Their only consideration was cost!

But they did not consider the "cost" of the tourists on the way to Snowshoe being "greeted" by this unsightly and odorous monster right beside scenic route 219. Commission president Joel Callison said, "I'll vote for anything Thrasher Engineering wants...they are the experts!"

This eliminates any consideration other than cost in dollars! This little meadow by route 219 provides distance from Snowshoe and easy access for the sludge trucks. The treated liquid is not even going to be expelled here! It will be piped farther down the road to a publicly owned site near the Elk River.

Would that not be a more appropriate place for the plant—away from the road? But if the treatment plant were located off the road they would lose their "easy access" for the sludge trucks and it might cost a few bucks to provide it. Cost overruns made a shortened (and therefore serving less pon-route 219 the mandate instead of serving the people!

Gandee points out:

"This past week Snowshoe celebrated another gigantic real estate sale. This resort is not going away and they have no plans to downsize"

This begs the question. Why have they chosen a small meadow in the FEMA flood plain with no room for expansion as their holy site for this open treatment plant? Commission president Joel Callison says "Thrasher Engineering told us it would hold three Snowshoes"...commission member James Carpenter augments that with "I think that's two Snowshoes."

The plant is designed to serve only a few thousand customers. Snowshoe reports their customer hook-ups to this system as 1,800. That is 1,800 hook-ups but, as Jo Debra exalts, there are over 10,000 people here on the weekends. Snowshoe recently sold out of a new development complex in four hours. Where, oh where is all of this stuff going to go...on this little meadow in the flood plain with no room for expansion? A local radio program last week reported Snowshoe will begin building a whole new community up there next year.

Another quote:

"Every local resident, whether their families have been here for two years or 200, should have a voice in this matter and has had the opportunity to express their feelings in prior meetings and discussion."

The 200-year family, I assume, would be the Sharps. If you believe we had an opportunity to express our feelings in prior meetings you would be wrong. Our family steward, Si Sharp, was in his 90's when the route 219 the mandate instead of serving the people!

Gandee points out:

"This past week Snowshoe celebrated another gigantic real estate sale. This resort is not going away and they have no plans to downsize"

This begs the question. Why have they chosen a small meadow in the FEMA flood plain with no room for expansion as their holy site for this open treatment plant? Commission president Joel Callison says "Thrasher Engineering told us it would hold three Snowshoes"...commission member James Carpenter augments that with "I think that's two Snowshoes."

The plant is designed to serve only a few thousand customers. Snowshoe reports their customer hook-ups to this system as 1,800. That is 1,800 hook-ups but, as Jo Debra exalts, there are over 10,000 people here on the weekends. Snowshoe recently sold out of a new development complex in four hours. Where, oh where is all of this stuff going to go...on this little meadow in the flood plain with no room for expansion? A local radio program last week reported Snowshoe will begin building a whole new community up there next year.

Another quote:

"Every local resident, whether their families have been here for two years or 200, should have a voice in this matter and has had the opportunity to express their feelings in prior meetings and discussion."

The 200-year family, I assume, would be the Sharps. If you believe we had an opportunity to express our feelings in prior meetings you would be wrong. Our family steward, Si Sharp, was in his 90's when the ambiguously worded one week notices were posted at the County Courthouse, Library and various and sundry post offices.

At 88 he was up on a two-story ladder fixing the roof, but at 90 he was hard of hearing, weak and not in the habit of trips to these public locations. Additionally, equally ambiguous one week notices of meetings may or may not have appeared in the legal section of the paper...but did little to attract the attention of the remaining affected property owners as they lived out of state and received their copies two to three weeks after the fact.

When a member of our family read an article about a vote in a waste water treatment plant near Durbin to approve a sewer treatment plant "on a meadow as the Big Spring of Elk curves around and flows under the bridge at Route 219," curiously, it did not mention the Sharp family, but there could be no doubt whose property it would be on.

Learning of this site selection, second hand, was a shock. More shocking was the fact that we had no idea this meadow was under review. Our opportunity to participate in the discussion negated, an effort to "express our feelings" began. Unbelievably, not one letter was answered by the Pocahontas County Commission.

Jo Debra says:

"History offers many valuable lessons, but I choose to live in the present and prepare for what's next."

The lessons I have learned from history is to respect the hard work and loving contributions my great-grandfather, Luther David Sharp, my grandfather, Ivan Sharp, my grandmother, Genevieve, my Uncle Evan and all the others made to the community of Pocahontas County during their time on this earth.

"To live for the present and prepare for what's next" should not require the condemnation of property, business and memory of your loving and supportive neighbors.

An alternate site is now under consideration by the Public Service Commission. If you value this community's heritage and want Slatyfork to be part of the "future," I implore you to amend your support of this much needed project to include a sewer treatment plant on one of the plentiful state owned properties where it would cost the taxpayer nothing and would allow Slatyfork to grow and prosper as you have. Please contact the Public Service Commission, W. D. Smith of Region IV Planning, The Pocahontas County Public Service District, The Pocahontas County Commission or your state representatives.

Sincerely,
Tom Shipley

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my appreciation for the article Drew Tanner wrote about the Volunteer Reading Program at Marlinton Elementary.

Fortunately, our volunteer base continues to grow. We now have 24 volunteers in place. We always welcome more people to join our efforts, especially with plans to expand the program to include both Green Bank and Hillsboro Elementary Schools.

Anyone interested in participating in the success of this

MRS. WEIFORD, DEAD

Mrs. Annie Rebecca Weiford died at the home of her son D. N. Weiford in Covington, Virginia, at 10:45 o'clock Saturday night, April 12, 1924, of heart trouble, aged 66 years. She was the widow of the late Rev. G. S. Weiford, of Warwick.

On Tuesday the body of Mrs. Weifoyd was brought to her old home at Warwick, and buried in the Waugh graveyard on Indian Draft. The funeal service was conducted by Rev W. A. Grogg, of Ronceverte, and Rev. J. H Carson, of Covington. A large crowd of people attended.

Mrs. Weiford was a daughter of the late John Dilley aud his wife Naomi McNeil Dilley, who lived in the Hills near Dilleys Mill. Of her father's family there remain five sons, H. R., of Red Oak, Iowa; J. Fletcher, of Ronceverte; Wilson, of Anthonys Creek; Davis, of Huntersville and S. Mc Dilley, of Elk.

In the fall of 1879 Mrs. Weiford became the wife of Rev. G. S. Weiford who preceded her to the grave on December 14, 1922. They were the parents of six sons and six daughters, all of whom survive their parents and all were present at their mother's funeral.—Mrs. Henry Poage, Beard: Mrs S. P. Landis, Warwick; Mrs. Willie Dilley, Huntersville; Mrs. Chalmer Shrader, Cass; Mrs. L J. Moore, New Winsdor, Maryland; Mrs Howard Hawkins, Warwick; Forrest, Huntington; Dewey, Oden and Clarence, of Covington; Kenny, MinnehaSprings; John, Masillon, Ohio.

For a lifetime Mrs. Dilley was a professing christian and a member of the M. E. Church. She will be remembered as a faithful wife and mother, and a kind and obliging neighbor.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Hiner. at Durbin, April 14, 1924, a son.

FOR JUSTICE

J. W. Milligan is now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Justice of the Peace of Edray District. Two are to be elected. He has served as Justice in the County and also as Mayor of Marlinton. His close relationship to the editor of this paper keeps us from saying the many good things that could be said about him and his fitness for this important office.

about him and his fitness for this important office.

John A. McLaughlin, Democratic candidate for state auditor, was campaigning last week in Mingo county. The Williamson News quoted him as saying he had received much encouragement from all sections of the state and that he expected to win the nomination. THE SIGHT OF the great horned owl, held by Joel Rosenthal, causes his cockatoo, "Mo," to ruffle its feathers. The owl, Mo, and two parrots - note one on Mr. Rosenthal's shoulder - were used in his talk on wildlife conservation to the students at Marlinton Middle School last week. In the lower photo, the students take a closer look at Mo.

FAMILY SALT SHAKER BECOMES DOCTOR

The family salt shaker will assume the position of physician in prevention and treatment of simple goitre, if housewives adopt the plan endorsed by the state herlth department.

Table salt, containing 01 percent of sodium iodine, has appeared on the market after a recommendation made to leading salt manufacturers by the state medical society and department of health of Michigan. Iodine is thereby suppl'ed to the family in the natural place—in the food; for it has long been known that simple goitre is caused by a deficiency of iodine in the food and drinking water In regions of the world where nature lacks iodine, goitre is most prevalent. lent.

States, State Health Commissioner Henshaw approves of the iodine salt and believes that the exclusive use of this salt on the table and for cooking will furnish an equivalent of the amount of iodine now received thru nature by persons living in the goitre free areas. Goitre experts for some time have agreed that the logical place to supply the iodine deficiency would be through some common article of food.

Physical examination in eleven localities of school girls between the ages of 9 and 19, showed that an average of 51 per cent were afflicted with simple goitre, according to the department of health, and about one third as many boys as girls are affected. Over 6,000 school children of the state are now taking chocolate iodine tablets for prevention and treatment of this type of goitre which is said to most likely develop between the ages of 9 and I8 and during pregnancy.

"If iodine salt is universally used in the home, both on the table and in the cooking, the prospects of materially reducing the number of cases of simple goitre would be promising," is the statement made by State Health Commissioner Henshaw.

KATCHA-KOO

MAY 24 and 25.

With the arrival of Miss Oliver on Monday rehersals began for Katcha-Koo, the Oriental American Musical Comedy to be given May 24 and 25, by the Senior Class of the Edray District High School. The entire cast of 125 students has been selected and progressing most satisfactorily in their various groups.

The play Katcha-Koo takes its name from the lead, who is an American aviator, stranded in India and playing the part of a fakir. The opening scene finds him in the garden of the Maharajah of Hunga, an East Indian Romeo. Katcha-Koo has been ordered moved but supplications and offers of food fail to move him Two American boys traveling in India secure a suit of clothes from Solejah a high priestess in the temple of the Maharajah and with the donning of these clothes on Katcha-Koo his career changes immediately. He becomes a wonderful love-maker, and succeeds in winning all the ladies The suit is then ordered removed from Katcha-Koo and therein lies much comedy.

Lots of singing and dancing in Katcha-Koo Gorgeous costumes and sparkling comedy—just the sort of play everyone enjoys.

Dates are May 24 and 25 Tickets will out Monday May 21st,

The best talent in the High school has been selected and all are working hard to make this productian one never to be forgotten.

The patriotic finale in which 65 school children take part is well worth the price of admission.

Don't forget the dates May 24-25.

Admission 50c and $1.00.

BOE approves $11m 05-06 budget

The approval of the preliminary budget for the 2005-06 school year was on the agenda for the Board of Education meeting on Monday.

A work session on 2005-06 budget was the purpose of a special meeting on May 2 and Monday's meeting began early to complete the work on the budget.

The proposed budget projects $11,225,310 in revenue. The largest sources of revenue are state school support at $5,278,723 followed by local property taxes, $2,952,959. Other income comes from the national forest payment, $478,598; federal Title I/II funds, $730,403; federal special education funds, $334,403; and federal food reimbursement, $269,310. Estimated carry-over from the present year's general expense fund is $483,627

Major expense areas are regular instruction, $4,061,083; county administration, $643,147; school administration, $624,645; custodial, utilities, and maintenance, $1,078,818; transportation, $1,208,452; special education, $1,202,913; vocational education, $390,672; food service, $558,200; and Title I/II services $730,483

School Superintendent Patrick Law told the Board he hopes to be able to find funds to provide for a half-time dean position at Marlinton Middle, county-wide technology position to assist staff in the use of technology for instruction, and to fund the special Marlinton Town Council met for its monthly meeting on Tuesday, May 3, with all members present.

Karen Miller, of the Corps of Engineers, reported that the final design work is nearly complete for Phase II and should be ready for bid by contractor in June, and continues on Phase III. Ten members met with Dennis Driscol in the field to discuss sanitary relocations design work and made additional surveys to locate lines on mapping. Design of the lift stations has been started. Rt. 219 gate closure areas and rights of entry were obtained from DOH in April. Draft Project Cooperation Agreement is being developed; when drafted a sub-agreement between Marlinton and the State will be necessary for funding. Benefit Cost Ratio was raised by 0.14, from 0.40 to 0.54 after updating of structure information. Meeting is being arranged with Governor Manchin to discuss project and commitment for State funds for local share.

cial education director position at 261 days.

The proposed 2005-06 budget was approved. A public hearing on the budget will be held at the May 23 Board meeting.

The Board met in an executive session for a student discipline hearing. Following the hearing, it was voted to approve the expulsion for the remainder of the school year of a Marlinton Middle School female student for possession, distribution and use of alcohol.

Board Student Representative Renae Burks asked about the status of some of the requests from the PCHS Student Council that she had reported on at the last meeting. In particular, she wanted to know about the gym bleachers, the picnic area between the cafeteria and science wing, and a rubberized track.

Dr. Law reported that he is "hopeful" about obtaining funds to replace the bleachers and may have something to report at the next meeting. The cost for new bleachers is $60,000, he said.

On the picnic area, Dr. Law said that he has discussed the idea with PCHS Principal Tom Sanders, who thinks it is a "good idea."

As for the rubberized track, Dr. Law did not give Ms. Burks any encouragement, due to the cost.

Dr. Law reviewed for the Board the West Virginia "Report Cards" for the various schools in the county. The cards provide information on how the schools are doing in meeting the "Adequate Yearly Progress" [illegible] ping. Design of the lift stations has been started. Rt. 219 gate closure areas and rights of entry were obtained from DOH in April. Draft Project Cooperation Agreement is being developed; when drafted a sub-agreement between Marlinton and the State will be necessary for funding. Benefit Cost Ratio was raised by 0.14, from 0.40 to 0.54 after updating of structure information. Meeting is being arranged with Governor Manchin to discuss project and commitment for State funds for local share.

Mayor Kellison made her report regarding the following items: Two quit-claimed alleyways have been returned to the Town; Larry Burns' area remains to be settled. She had a nice answer to her recent letter to Senator Byrd. Campbelltown sewer project moving forward, conference on condemnation question on May 24. Neighborhood Watch meeting this week and also Building Commission. She met with JBLT on long-term Water Quality Study, which is required by Public Service; she and Dennis are working on this. Boy Scouts are coming soon on a work project, working around Gazebo. State Commercial Insurance to replace State Board of Risk Insurance. Modern Woodman of American through Lois Ann Beverage have donated six dogwood trees to the Town. Marlin Run inspection has been done. Criminal Justice project was not funded.

Norman Alderman asked Dr. Law and Board member Emory Grimes about what they had found out concerning public attendance at meetings of the board of Pocahontas Woods. Mr. Grimes said the group's bylaws refer to it as a "non-profit, private" organization. Mr. Alderman requested Dr. Law, as "his" representative to Pocahontas Woods, to inform him of the group's meetings.

Approval was given for the letter that will be sent to the parents of preschool children at Hillsboro. The parents are being informed that the Hillsboro preschool will operate as a four-day a week program, unless the enrollment exceeds 20. If that occurs, any preschool student not from the Hillsboro attendance area will move to the preschool program in his/her home school. Should the enrollment still exceed 20, the program will go to a two-day a week program for all students with an Individual Education Plan.

SOME HISTORY

A friend writes us the following facts about the late James E A. Gibbs inventor of the sewing machine, and at one time a resident of Pocahontas County. Some weeks ago a paper, which had been read before the Womans Club, was published in the Times Exceptions were taken to some statements therein concerning Mr Gibbs.

Mr. Gibbs had not a large family, only four daughters. Only one child was born when he left Marlins Bottom in 1854. He was 25 years old, when he lived at Marlin's Bottom, staying there but 18 months. He married in 1852. His wife was a daughter of Col. Samuel Given, at the time Clerk of Nicholas County. Col. Given owned 22,000 acres of land in one body, and he offered his daughter at the time of her marriage a 500 acre farm fully stocked. Mr. Gibbs having no taste for farm life, refused it, and took his young wife to Huntersville, where they lived while he built the Court House. In addition to the property of his wife's family, Mr. Gibbs mother had a compartable estate of her own in Rockbridge County which the family sold after the death of Mr. Gibbs in 1902. So much for the published statement that Mr.

In addition to the property of his wife's family, Mr. Gibbs mother had a compartable estate of her own in Rockbridge County which the family sold after the death of Mr. Gibbs in 1902. So much for the published statement that Mr. Gibbs was in straightened financial circumstances at the time of his residence in Pocahontas County.

As to the place he lived at the time he invented the sewing machine, Mr. Gibbs in a published interview in the Staunton Vindicator, said he lived at what is now Seebert on a farm owned by Col. John H. Ruckman The post office was Millpoint. Twelve years ago, on the occasion of a visit to Marlinton by two of the daughters of Mr Gibbs, the late Dr. Wm. T. Price published an article in The Pocahontas Times stating that Mr. Gibbs lived at Marlin's Bottom at the time he made his invention. The Gibbs family knew this to be a mistake at the time, but took no steps to correct.

Mr. Gibbs was building a residence for Col. Ruckman on his farm across the river from Seebert when he made his first and greatest invention. Mr. Ruckman backed him with $5 000 for its development. In the fall of 1856 he took his wife and two small daugh-

Mr. Gibbs was building a residence for Col. Ruckman on his farm across the river from Seebert when he made his first and greatest invention. Mr. Ruckman backed him with $5 000 for its development. In the fall of 1856 he took his wi e and two small daughters to Col Given's home in Webster County that county having recently been formed from Nicholas territory to spend the winter, while he went to Boston to have his model made and to interest capital in manufacturing his machine.

Mr. Gibbs met Mr. Wilcox in the winter of 1857. His place of business was in Masonic Hall, Philadelphia, and he was on the lookout for a good investment. He was so much pleased with the patent and model that he immediately formed a partnership Mr. Wilcox invested $15,000 for the development of the machine, Mr. Gibbs moved his family to Philadelphia after a year it was decided to move the business to Providence R.I. with the main office in New York. Here it has been ever since, and it still pays the family dividends.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gibbs preferred to live in the country, and they decided to return to the Little Levels of Pocahontas. In the fall of 1859, they bought the farm on which Seebert now stands from Col. Ruckman. Mr. Gibbs went back and forth to attend to his business He was in Providence when Fort Sumptor was

County students take National French Test

In 2005 the National French Contest finally achieved its long-term goal of 100,000 entries nationwide. This contest, which was given throughout the USA. the same week in March, is a challenging academic contest of listening, reading, cultural, and grammatical skills in the language, at eight levels.

Some 40 Pocahontas County students participated in levels 1, 2, 4, & 5 (Level 3 did not begin until second semester on the block system).

Pocahontas County's highest scorer was Seth Mitchell, son of Joe and Cathy Mitchell, of Marlinton, and an eighth grader at MMS, who placed 4th in West Virginia at Level 1.

Second place at this level went to Britney Pritt, of MMS (11th in WV), and Kayla Ramsey, of PCHS (12th in WV).

At level 2 our county first place winner was Zach Graham. Second place went to Katherine Beverage and Cecil Rappold, and 3rd place to David Mitchell, all of Marlinton and students at PCHS.

At levels 4 and 5 PCHS students were the only students competing in a special category for students who had completed their course during the previous semester, and so their rankings are both county and state placings.

First at Level 4 was Katie Moore, of Marlinton, and second Kelly Blechl, of Bartow. At Level 5 Danielle Holstine, of Dunmore, took first place, Hallie Herold, of Frost, was second, Clay Bell, of Snowshoe, was third, and Daniel Lacasse, of Arbovale, fourth. These students were all just a few points apart.

Congratulations to all the students who were brave enough to take on this intimidating exam, given entirely in French!

JUDGE SHARP NOMINATED

At the Republican Judicial Convention held in Lewisburg, on Tuesday the 10th of Aug., Judge Summers H. Sharp, of this city, was unanimousely chosen to succeed himself, at the general election, as Judge of this circuit, which comprises the counties of Greenbrier and Pocahontas. The Judge's name was placed befcre the convention by Senator N. C. McNeill, and 'tis said by those present, the senator was at his best and made one of the most eloquent efforts of his political career. The convention was harmonious and those present were highly pleased with the decision of the delegates.

At the same place, on the same day, the Democratic Judicial Convention was held, and Atty. Frank R. Hill was nominated over Atty. J. Scott McWhorter, of Lewisburg, as their candidate.

AmeriCorps team lends a hand at local non-profits

Drew Tanner

Few would think of swinging a hammer or constructing a trail as an ideal way to take some time off.

For many of the 18-to-24-year-olds who choose to spend a year or two with AmeriCorps*National Civilian Community Corps, that is just the sort of time off they seek.

On April 18, a group of 10 NCCC corps members arrived in southern Pocahontas County. The team spent its first few days doing organic gardening at the Gesundheit! Institute and is spending the remaining portion of its time at the High Rocks Academy in Mill Point.

This is the fifth of six projects that the team will complete for their term of service. Other projects completed by this team during the last six months included building and repairing trails and painting the facilities in various state parks in Virginia, rehabilitating low-income housing in Cincinnati, Ohio, and constructing new camp sites in the Barnum Whitewater Area of Keyser.

The team members are as diverse as the locations they have served. They come from urban areas on the east and west coasts and rural communities in between. Some are just out of high school, others recently graduated from college or are taking time off from continuing their education.

All of them say they wanted to "take time off" from school or after college, while at the same time serving others and traveling — the sort of opportunities that abound with NCCC.

While at the High Rocks Academy, the team is performing a variety of tasks, from clearing brush and multi-flora rose, to constructing a woodshed and shelters for the campground with materials provided to the High Rocks by a grant from the Snowshoe Foundation and a donation from Cramer Lumber.

High Rocks volunteer Naomi Cohen, herself a former AmeriCorps*VISTA member during the 1960s and a resident of Gap Mills, has been supervising the team's work at the campground. Cohen said she was impressed with the work the team was doing and enjoyed working with the current generation of young people involved in national and community service.

Along with their work on the campground, team members are also lending a hand tutoring the High Rocks girls on Tuesday evenings. For some, the person-to-person time with the girls is a welcome break from using a carpenter's square or circular saw.

Once their time is complete at the High Rocks, the team moves on to Allentown, Pennsylvania, to rehabilitate an old Boys and Girls Club campground, according to team leader Ken Naranja.

Corps members must complete 1,700 hours of service during their 10-month commitment. In exchange for their service, they receive $4,725 to help pay for college or repay student loans.

AmeriCorps is administered by the Corporation for National and Community Service. Those interested in AmeriCorps programs may find more information at www.americorps.org or call 1-800-942-2677.

Clover Lick Farm For Sale

Pursuant to a decree of the Circuit Court of Pocahontas county, West Virginia, rendered at the June term, 1920, in a chancery cause therein pending of Mozell Dorr, guardian, vs. C. P. Dorr, Jr., et als., the undersigned guardian of the infant children of the late C. P. Dorr, will, on in the town of Marlinton, West Virginia, at the front door of the Court House of said county, at 1 o'clock p. m., offer for sale at public auction to the highest bidder the grazing farm in said county known as the Clover Lick Farm of the said Chas. P. Dorr, lying near Clover Lick in said county, and containing by recent survey 1,886.4 acres.

Wednesday, Sept. 1, 1920,

In as much as the property would probably sell for more if made accessible to bidders with smaller amounts, the farm has been divided into three tracts. Tract "A" containing 288 acres and being the upper end of the said farm. Tract "B" containing 790.7 acres and being the middle of said farm; and Tract "C" containing

MELISSA FULLER & DAUGHTER,ELIZABETH FULLER

THE GREEN BANK Post Office announced the winners of its "Best Mom" contest this over the weekend. The adult division winner was Dolly Lewis, of Green Bank. Her daughter Alma Lewis, of Canton, Ohio, submitted the winning letter. The children's division winner is Melissa Fuller, of Arbovale. Her daughter, Elizabeth Fuller, penned the winning letter. Lewis and Fuller were presented with an "I Love You" US Postal Bear and a balloon. "The decision was not an easy one," said postmaster Doris Stump. "There were many entries and in my eyes each and every one is a 'Best Mom.'" Sherry Sizemore of Dunmore and Chris Jewel of Green Bank assisted Stump in judging the entries.

Tract "A" containing 288 acres and being the upper end of the said farm. Tract "B" containing 790.7 acres and being the middle of said farm; and Tract "C" containing 808 acres and being the lower end of said farm. Either one of these tracts or parcels would make a magnificent grazing farm, and the middle tract having a good residence and farm buildings and would make a fine home for any one.

The farm will be offered first in the three parcels and then as a whole and the most advantageous sale will be the one reported to the court. Possession of the farm will be given March 1st, 1921. The widow is to take her dower out of the funds arising from the sale, and the farm is offered free from widows dower, and any other liens, incumbrances, claims or demands of any kind.

Terms of Sale.—One-third cash, and the balance on a credit of 1 and 2 years taking from the purchaser bonds with good security bearing six per cent interest payable annually on deferred payments, and the title to be retained as ultimate security.

Plots of the farm and the subdivision thereof are on file in the Clerk's office with the papers in the suit, and

Friel to participate in FACDIS summer program to Italy

Karen G. Friel, Spanish teacher at Pocahontas County High School and Green Bank Middle School, has been selected as one of the 15 WV teachers to participate in the West Virginia University Summer 2005 FACDIS (WV Consortium for Faculty and Course Development in International Studies) Institute for Teachers: The Italian Roots of Western Culture.

She will be leaving on July 4 from Washington Dulles International Airport to Bologna, Italy. It is a 12 day tour of northern Italy visiting several cities: Bologna, famous for its medieval towers and site of the first university in Europe, Ferrara, Mantua, centers of Italian renaissance art, Trento, Bolzano, famous for its "Ice Man" museum, and Venice, a world cultural landmark. The trip will be led by two WVU professors, Dr. Annastella Verster and Dr. Matthew Vester. The trip includes round-trip transatlantic flight from Dulles to Italy, airport transfers, lodging, meals, entrance fees and guides, and regular education activities led by the two professors.

DEBS AGAIN NOMINATED

New York.—Eugene V. Debs, federal convict Number 2,253, was nominated by acclamation for the presidency of the United States at the socialist party's national convention here today.

New York.—Eugene V. Debs, nominated today for president on the socialist ticket, now is number 2,253 in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. He begun serving a ten year's sentence for violation of the war-time espionage act April 13, 1919, when he entered Moundsville, W. Va., federal penitentiary, after appeals in his behalf had failed. He was removed to the Atlanta prison last June.

Debs is 65 years old. His presidential nomination today is the fifth his party has given him. He was a Democrat before he became a socialist.

His present imprisonmen resulted from governmental investigation of a speech in Canton, Ohio, June 6, 1918, which led to his arrest two weeks later for opposing the war and urging labor to cease all activities which in any way tended to prolong it.

Hillsboro resident helps restore rare ecosystem in Michigan

Monroe, Michigan — Blair Sharp, of Hillsboro, has traveled to Monroe, Michigan, as part of an AmeriCorps service team to spend a month restoring a once-plentiful and now rare ecosystem.

Generations ago, the ecosystem known as an "oak savanna"—a community of scattered oak trees above a layer of prairie grasses—was plentiful in the Midwest. The great diversity in plant and animal life indicated a region's environmental health and stability. Today, with urban sprawl and the resulting loss of open spaces, an oak savanna is increasingly rare.

When the IHM Sisters discovered an oak savanna on their property, they pursued a means to restore it and requested assistance from AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC).

Now, Sharp is part of a nine-member AmeriCorps team working on-site with the River Raisin Institute to restore the oak savanna.

"The savanna depended on fire, animal grazing and drought to flourish," explains Michael Neumann, executive director of the RRI. "Agriculture and development have suppressed these and allowed invasive species of trees, plants and grasses to thrive." According to Neumann, the first step in the restoration will be to remove the invasive species. The Michigan nature Conservancy is teaching the AmeriCorps team how to safely use any products that might be needed for the removal.

The AmeriCorps team's work will be targeted to individual plants. The removal method involves cutting the stem of the invasives at the base of the plant and applying a herbicide to the cut stem. The herbicide is applied with a sponge applicator. No spraying is involved.

Neumann says the team also will clean out the overgrowth and downed tree limbs. They will use a wood chipper for the large branches and use the chips along the wood paths. With the invasives gone, more sunlight will be allowed in, which will encourage the growth of plants native to the savanna.

Following the removal of the invasives, Neumann says it will be necesary to conduct controlled burns. The burns will suppress new growth of invasive species while encouraging regeneration of savanna species of grasses, forbs and trees.

Neumann says working with the AmeriCorps team on the restoration illustrates the purpose of the River River Institute. "The RRI is dedicated to improving the well-being of creation and committed to providing educational programs for promoting sustainability," he explains.

AmeriCorps NCCC is a 10-month, full-time residential program for people between the ages of 18 and 24. Operated by the Corporation for National and Community Service, it is part of a national network of service programs that help local communities address their compelling needs in areas such as the environment, education and disaster relief. More than 380,000 people have served in AmeriCorps since its inception in the early '90s.

"The IHMs have made a commitment to sustainability," says Neumann. "You can see that commitment in their everyday lives as well as in the more visible projects—like this restoration."

PRESCRIPTION $5

Profiteering in liquor is going on in Cincinnati, said L. I. Faris' chief deputy state prohibition enforcement officer, here Wednesday.

"We found one Cincinnati druggist who sold for $28 a gallon whisky he bought for $4," he said. "We also have found doctors charging $5 a prescription for liquor. I protested to one doctor and he said in view of the fact he was restricted to one prescrip tion a day he thought he was justified.

"Physicians are not to prescribe liquor except when the case demands that remedy the same or other drugs like quinine or calomel.

Gibb recognized for academic achievement

The United States Achievement Academy announced today that John C. Gibb, of Marlinton, has been recognized for academic achievement as a United States National Honor Student Award winner.

John, who attends Marlinton Middle School, will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook which is published nationally.

"Recognizing and supporting our youth is more important than ever before in America's history. Certainly, United States Achievement Academy winners should be congratulated and appreciated for their dedication to excellence and achievement," said Dr. George Stevens, Founder of the United States Achievement Academy.

John is the son of Scott and Melissa Gibb, and the grandson of Jim and Linda Gibb, and Freddie and Linda Gravely, all of Marlinton.

HILLSBORO SCHOOL NOTES

On May 18th the Hillsboro High and Graded schools presented the pageant, "America Yesterday and Today," by Nina B. Lampin. This was the first attempt at anything of this kind in Hillsboro, and it was considered a great success by those who saw it. Between two and three hundred people withstood a drizzling rain for about an hour and a half in order to see the pageant. Several people considered in the best entertainment the school had ever given. The rain, of course, made it less enjoyable than it would have been had the weather been favorable. However, after it was begun it moved on without interruption because all the pupils were in their places and eager to do their parts regardless of the

HILLSBORO SCHOOL NOTES

On May 18th the Hillsboro High and Graded schools presented the pageant, "America Yesterday and Today," by Nina B. Lampin. This was the first attempt at anything of this kind in Hillsboro, and it was considered a great success by those who saw it. Between two and three hundred people withstood a drizzling rain for about an hour and a half in order to see the pageant. Several people considered in the best entertainment the school had ever given. The rain, of course, made it less enjoyable than it would have been had the weather been favorable. However, after it was begun it moved on without interruption because all the pupils were in their places and eager to do their parts regardless of the rain. Practically every student in school had a part in the pageant, and it afforded them an opportunity for some valuable training which they could get in no other way. The pupils are to be commended for the efforts they put forth to make the pageant a success. And under the able direction of Miss Plymale and the assistance of the other teachers the success was made possible. Events of this nature will be the means of placing the schools of Hillsboro on a par with many larger schools where the pageant idea is being emphasized.

The commencement exercises will begin Sunday, May 30th. Dr. J. H. Light, of Marlinton, will preach the sermon to the graduating class of the high school.

According to Terry Wagner, Director of Home Health and the Health Fair, that number is on track with last year, when just over 1800 people were screened.

New this year was the A1C test, a valuable tool for diabetics. It track the average blood glucose level over a 2-to-3 month period.

Also added this year were several testing sites for PEIA participants. The hospital added these sites by working with Pathways to Wellness so the PEIA insured were able to take advantage of free testing.

"Each year we try to add a little more," Wagner said.

The annual Pocahontas Memorial Hospital Health Fair drew 270 participants and even more of the county's curious on Friday, May 13.

The hospital offered low cost blood testing, free bone density and vision screenings, and more than a dozen vendors offered information on everything from hospice to Head Start to diabetes support.

To date, with the last testing locations completing this week, 1586 residents took advantage of the testing at 15 locations around the county. 244 people had their bo day of the

On Monday evening May 3, 1920, the death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Ray, at Raywood, and claimed for the Master of life their daughter Thelma Maxine, aged sixteen years. Everything that human hands and medical skill could do was done but all in vain. When but four years old she fell and injured her spine, causing the spinal trouble of which she died. Though a sufferer for years she was always cheerful and had a smile for every one. She made all she met her friends. While she was young in years she was an example to her elders in being a believer in Christ and often expressed herself as ready to go when her Saviour called her. She leaves to mourn their loss father, mother, one brother and one sister, and other relatives. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Gray and Rev. FINE FARM SOLD AT AUCTION

Mr. Ellis H. Moore sold his fine farm consisting of 168 acres, located three miles south of Murfreesboro on the Dixie Highway, last Monday afternoon. The farm was in three tracts, two of which, containing 110 acres, were purchased by Raleigh Marlin at the handsome price of $38,050. The other tract was purchased by Spencer Johns for $8,040.

The sale was made at an auction conducted by J. P. Leathers, and a large crowd of people was on the ground to see the farm bought. Prospective buyers were present from Davidson and adjoining counties.

Mr. Moore moved to this county about three years ago from West Virginia, and since coming here has owned a number of farms in this county. He has now sold out all of his real estate with the intention of going to Texas, where he has large profitable oil holdings.—Murfreesboro Journal.

The clean up Marlinton effort by the Board of Trade on Monday was a great success. The householders and business firms responded to a man, and the amount of trash disposed of was a world wonder. Literally hundreds of loads were hauled away and burned and otherwise disposed of. The job was much greater than anticipated, and the whole day was required to clean up the town. Even then a number of alleys were not cleaned out, but the town truck is finishing up. The old dumping grouund was not bothered owing to lack of time. It remains the eye sore it always has been, and it will have to be attended to later.

Pocahontas Woods plans program expansion after third successful year

Pocahontas Woods was recently awarded a $123,000 grant from the USDA to purchase woodworking equipment. Past woodworking classes have been held in borrowed facilities at PCHS. This cooperation by the Board of Education has been much appreciated, but the facility and equipment are not ideal for teaching fine woodworking. Pocahontas Woods plans to create a 6,000 square foot educational woodworking facility on the PCHS campus in the future when it is financially feasible. In the interim, the Board of Directors has decided to purchase an existing building to house the equipment available through the new grant. Once the permanent facility is developed, the Board hopes to re-sell the temporary building to a new woodworking business that develops through the Pocahontas Woods training and business support program.

In the upcoming year Pocahontas Woods will open its temporary facility for training and support of fledgling woodworking businesses. They will hire a facility manager to supervise the shop, teach woodworking classes, and work with part-time teachers as the program moves into its next phase.

These future plans follow on the heels of Pocahontas Woods completing its third year of woodworking classes. To date, after school and evening classes have been offered in beginning woodworking, advanced joinery, wood carving, finishing and, most recently, a seminar in woodturning.

Pocahontas Woods is a non-profit West Virginia corporation that qualifies for Federal tax exemption under Section 501-c-3 of the Internal Revenue Code.

Its overall purpose, as stated in the corporate charter, is "to promote the creative and ecologically sound utilization, enjoyment and understanding of the forest resource in Pocahontas County WV and surrounding areas." The organization's current program focuses on trying to develop a high-end furniture industry in the county, primarily made up of small independent shops. They will do this by providing training and support in woodworking and business management.

For generations people have said, "We grow the best hardwoods in the world right here. Why does it all leave as lumber? Why does all this lumber need to be sent elsewhere to become an end product when we need jobs here? Wouldn't it be great for our young citizens to have another viable option for making a living here in their home region? Why can't we have some kind of wood manufacturing business in Pocahontas County?" In an era when large-scale furniture manufacturing is rapidly moving overseas, Pocahontas Woods is working to create local jobs and develop the skills of local citizens in the high-end, handcrafted specialty furniture field.

This is a difficult task, but the Board of Directors, with the continuing active support of the County Commission and the Board of Education, is determined to continue working to create good jobs for local people using our own natural resources.

One citizen has tried to block Pocahontas Woods' effort through political action and the threat of lawsuits. He repeatedly objected to the procedure used by the County Commission in making their decision to fund Pocahontas Woods with U.S. Forest Service Title III funds. When this did not stop the program, he raised questions about whether it was appropriate to grant Title III funds to the Pocahontas Woods program. The Prosecuting Attorney has advised the County Commission that this funding is permissible under state law.

The Policy Division of the USFS has stated that the Pocahontas Woods program is an appropriate expenditure of Title III funds. Committees in both the US House and Senate have heard testimony about Pocahontas Woods in their hearings on re-authorization of the legislation that provides Title III funds and have praised the program for its innovative ideas and its efforts to combine education with local economic development.

The Pocahontas Woods Board believes the key to economic success in the county is diversification. The county needs good new jobs that do not all depend on the tourism industry. Our young people need high-skill job training that qualifies them for careers with real potential.

We need to work together to create a situation where more of our young people can make a living here, and more of our older people can have part-time employment. We need more locally owned independent businesses. We need to make more economic use of our hardwood timber resource. This is what Pocahontas Woods is all about.

The Pocahontas Woods Board of Directors has focused hard on working toward these goals, but they have come to realize that they should have also been doing more to communicate with the public about its program. For this reason, at its last meeting the Board recently voted to invite representatives of The Pocahontas Times, the InterMountain and WVMR to attend its future meetings, in order to provide the public with unbiased information about the organization's work.

If you have specific questions about Pocahontas Woods, contact John Friel at 799-6072 or Gibbs Kinderman at 572-5221. Board members who can also tell you about the organization include Emery Grimes, John Riffe, MaryDell Joyner, Robin Mutscheller, Joel Callison, and Pat Law.

Pocahontas County Farmland Protection Program out for public comment

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The proposed Pocahontas County Farmland Protection Program is now open for public comment.

For the next 30 days, the County Commission and Farmland Protection Board are soliciting comments and input from members of the community regarding the 27-page draft document and accompanying four pages of ranking criteria.

The voluntary program establishes a set of uniform standards and guidelines for the purchase of conservation easements by the PCFPB from property owners interested in taking part.

West Virginia is one of more than 20 states that now have farmland protection programs.

State legislators passed the Voluntary Farmland Protection Act in 2000 to address the loss of 17,732 farms on 1,823,060 acres between the years 1964 and 1997.

In counties with similar programs, conservation easements are purchased from landowners who might otherwise be interested in developing all or part of their land. To make the most of often limited funding, the programs evaluate and rank the properties applying for conservation easements.

The program adopted by the PCFPB last month and revised on Monday ranks prospective properties based on 20 criterion.

The criterion cover six categories, including:

*potential for residential, commercial or industrial development;

*total acreage offered for concounty commissioner Norman Alderman, of Beaver Creek.

Alderman took issue with motions made by County Commissioner Joel Callison the board's March 21 meeting. Callison sits on the board in a non-voting, advisory role.

"I've been reviewing your minutes and I noticed where you've been allowing an ex oficio member of your organization to make a motion," Alderman said.

Board president Leslee McCarty acknowledged Callison could not vote, but contended he could make motions for the board to consider.

"The reason Joel can't vote, is to make sure that he's not having undue influence in this meeting," Alderman added. "If you can't vote, you certainly can't make a motion. Otherwise, I'd like to make a motion."

The board would seek a second opinion on the matter, McCarty said.

Alderman said he believed Callison intended to sell an easement on his property to the board.

"That's a lie," Callison countered.

At the March meeting the board made several changes and revisions to the program document and ranking criteria. Callison made two motions concerning ranking criteria that the board passed unanimously. That evening, the board made a total of 12 motions concerning alterations to the program.

"Everyone on this board is concerned about Pocahontas County and the future of Poca-

"But if you people are of good faith, you will try to get that man," he added. "I will take his place, because I'm a county citizen."

Nevi was appointed to the board by the county commission. The state law regarding farmland protection boards requires the "executive director of the county development authority." While there does exist a Pocahontas Development Authority, the County Commission has designated the Greenbrier Valley Economic Development Authority as county's lead economic development agency. The GVEDC serves Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Monroe counties.

Alderman has contended since the PCFPB's inception last year that Nevi is unfit to sit on the county board since he is not a county resident.

Board members have said the matter is out of their hands, and that Nevi's seat on the board is dictated by the county commission.

Nevi has been absent from all but the first of the board's meetings.

The board made final adjustments to the program before submitting it to the county commission the following morning.

Board members also passed an amendment to its bylaws, written by secretary John Leyzorek, to protect the privacy of property owners participating in the program or applying for an easement.

Copies of the proposed Pocahontas County Farmland Protection Program are available at the county court house in Mar-

The proposed Pocahontas County Farmland Protection Program is now open for public comment.

For the next 30 days, the County Commission and Farmland Protection Board are soliciting comments and input from members of the community regarding the 27-page draft document and accompanying four pages of ranking criteria.

The voluntary program establishes a set of uniform standards and guidelines for the purchase of conservation easements by the PCFPB from property owners interested in taking part.

West Virginia is one of more than 20 states that now have farmland protection programs.

State legislators passed the Voluntary Farmland Protection Act in 2000 to address the loss of 17,732 farms on 1,823,060 acres between the years 1964 and 1997.

In counties with similar programs, conservation easements are purchased from landowners who might otherwise be interested in developing all or part of their land. To make the most of often limited funding, the programs evaluate and rank the properties applying for conservation easements.

The program adopted by the PCFPB last month and revised on Monday ranks prospective properties based on 20 criterion.

The criterion cover six categories, including:

•potential for residential, commercial or industrial development;

•total acreage offered for conservation easement;

•presence of prime or unique farmland, farmland of statewide importance or locally significant farmland, and productive capacity;

•proximity to working farms

•ratio of the asking price of the easement to the fair market value of the easement

•historical, architectural, archaeological, cultural, recreational, natural, scenic, source water protection or other unique county commissioner Norman Alderman, of Beaver Creek.

Alderman took issue with motions made by County Commissioner Joel Callison the board's March 21 meeting. Callison sits on the board in a non-voting, advisory role.

"I've been reviewing your minutes and I noticed where you've been allowing an ex officio member of your organization to make a motion," Alderman said.

Board president Leslee McCarty acknowledged Callison could not vote, but contended he could make motions for the board to consider.

"The reason Joel can't vote, is to make sure that he's not having undue influence in this meeting," Alderman added. "If you can't vote, you certainly can't make a motion. Otherwise, I'd like to make a motion."

The board would seek a second opinion on the matter, McCarty said.

Alderman said he believed Callison intended to sell an easement on his property to the board.

"That's a lie," Callison countered.

At the March meeting the board made several changes and revisions to the program document and ranking criteria. Callison made two motions concerning ranking criteria that the board passed unanimously. That evening, the board made a total of 12 motions concerning alterations to the program.

"Everyone on this board is concerned about Pocahontas County and the future of Pocahontas County, and that, I think is the bottom line here," said board vice-president Mickey Deike, "and I don't think anyone on this board came here to make money by selling their land. There's other ways to do that. We don't have to be members of Farmland Protection to sell land."

Though the matter was not on the agenda, board treasurer Dick Evans made a motion to prohibit Callison from making

"But if you people are [illegible] good faith, you will try to get that man," he added. "I will take his place, because I'm a county citizen."

Nevi was appointed to the board by the county commission. The state law regarding farmland protection boards requires the "executive director of the county development authority." While there does exist a Pocahontas Development Authority, the County Commission has designated the Greenbrier Valley Economic Development Authority as county's lead economic development agency. The GVEDC serves Pocahontas, Greenbrier and Monroe counties.

Alderman has contended since the PCFPB's inception last year that Nevi is unfit to sit on the county board since he is not a county resident.

Board members have said the matter is out of their hands, and that Nevi's seat on the board is dictated by the county commission.

Nevi has been absent from all but the first of the board's meetings.

The board made final adjustments to the program before submitting it to the county commission the following morning.

Board members also passed an amendment to its bylaws, written by secretary John Leyzorek, to protect the privacy of property owners participating in the program or applying for an easement.

Copies of the proposed Pocahontas County Farmland Protection Program are available at the county court house, in Marlinton, or by following the link to the county commission from The Pocahontas Times' website (pocahontastimes.com).

Despite demolition, Durbin graded school memories live on

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The town of Durbin lost a long-time member of the community last month.

The 84-year-old landmark, where children from Durbin and Frank attended grades one through nine, was demolished March 9.

The Durbin and Frank grade schools were consolidated when the new three-story brick building with eight classrooms was constructed in 1921, according to the History of Pocahontas County, 1981. Three additional classrooms, an auditorium and lunchroom were added as enrollment increased several years later.

The old lunch room was converted into a library, and the old library became the sick-room, according to JoAnn Vandevender Gilardi, who graduated from the school in 1974 and organized the first reunion for Durbin graded school alumni last summer.

"And we had a really great library," Gilardi added. "I read every book in that library."

By 1950, all the one-room schools in the upper part of the Green Bank district were consolidated into the Durbin school.

Gilardi likened the school to the recently renovated Pocahontas County Opera House, in function. The Durbin school served as a community center, hosting athletic events, public meetings, plays, cakewalks and other social functions.

The board of education closed the school June 1977. Then the students were sent to school in Green Bank the following year, according to Gilardi.

The board of education officials the building to Durbin A.S. Hill and Allen D. Stewart. Hill served as principal for 21 years, while Stewart held the post for five.

The History also lists several teachers who taught at the Durbin School for 10 years or more, including Jeanne H. Gragg, Willa Whanger, Bonnie N. Hill, Faye Truss, Ruth B. Jennings and Frona F. Williams.

Margaret Wilson taught second grade for 42 years, while Hope Mallow and Marie Parg each taught at the school for 39 years.

"They were some of the best teachers in the world," Gilardi fondly recalled. "They made us feel really special as students. The classes felt like a community."

Emphasizing the sort of interest the teachers took in their students, Gilardi said she was touched when Mrs. Hill came to visit her after she had graduated from Pocahontas County High School and was attending Fairmont State College.

Another alum, Donald W. Pethtal who graduated from the school in 1953, fondly remembered Mrs. Hill's musical productions and "operettas," and his role in Little Red Riding Hood.

Hill's husband, whom Gilardi recalled as a firm disciplinarian, was another who stood out in her memory.

"I know a lot of people got whippings from him," she said, "but he was the best principal you could have."

"If you were bad," she added, "you had to sit on the steps to the principal's office."

DURBIN GRADED SCHOOL served the communities of Durbin and Frank from 1921 through 1977. The building replaced several one-room schoolhouses scattered across the northern portion of Pocahontas County. Photo courtesy of J. Gilardi

Mrs. Tress, the only African-American teacher at the school, Gilardi described as "a treasure."

When Gilardi ran advertisements in The Pocahontas Times asking questions about the school and promoting the reunion last spring, she was surprised by the response she received. She now has a binder full of letters from alumni from the west coast, southeast and midwest full of memories of the school and its teachers.

One letter, from Harry Widney, of Lewisburg, explained that John W. Goodsell, who was the president of the Green Bank Board of Education "prevailed in having the school located on the hill. The main purpose of this was to be sure it was out of the flood plain."

"The 1935 graduating class from Green Bank High School started as sophomores having spent their first year at Durbin," Widney added.

In another letter, Eva Riley, of San Ramon, California, wrote that she was a member of the first class to graduate in the school's new gymnasium in 1938. Poscover was the principal and her eighth-grade teacher, she recalled.

Another binder holds copies of commencement programs, programs for theatrical productions, report cards and class photos that Gilardi has collected herself and from other alumni.

"It's amazing the things people did hold on to," Gilardi said.

Though the school is now gone, Gilardi is excited about the second annual reunion for Durbin graded school alumni scheduled for July 23 at Widney Park.

More than 70 people from 10 states attended last year's reunion, and Gilardi said she's looking forward to a similar turnout at this summer's gathering.

For more information on this year's reunion, alumni may call Gilardi at 456-4787 or by email at durbingradedschool@hotmail.com.

Greenbrier Valley Hospice 10K Run/5K Walk scheduled for May 7 in Lewisburg

Greenbrier Valley Hospice will sponsor their 12th annual race/walk on Saturday, May 7, at 9 a.m. in Lewisburg. Participants should be at the Lewis Theatre between 7 and 8:15 a.m. for check-in and bus ride to the starting line. Cooperation in arriving early for registration will be appreciated.

Pre-registration forms must be postmarked by May 2. Late registration will be allowed the day of the race. The registration fee is $10 for pre-registration (non-refundable), and $15 the day of the race. Checks should be made payable to Greenbrier Valley Hospice - 10K Run/5K Walk.

Age categories are as follows: Male: 15-19; 20-24; 25-29; 30-34; 35-39; 40-44; 45-49; 50-54; 55-59; and 60 and over. Female: 15-19; 20-29; 30-34; 35-39; 40-44; 45-49; 50-59; and 60 and over. T-shirts will be given to all participants and trophies for over-all winners in men's and women's divisions for first, second, and third places. Awards will be given in all categories. Food and beverages are included in the registration fee for the participants, and there is a post race party and awards ceremony to follow at the Lewis Theatre.

For more information or to register, you may call Lee Scruggs at Greenbrier Valley Medical Center (304) 647-6015; or Tracy Dransfield at Greenbrier Valley Hospice (304) 645-2700.

WOMAN VOTERS

Editor Times: Please print the following from the Pennsylvania Grit. It may be that Brother Blake may read it, and be enlightened thereby.

J. M. Chappell,

Renicks Valley.

By Lewis E. Theiss

To vote or not to vote is no longer the question among the women of the country. Now that the suffrage amendment has passed Congress and has already been ratified by almost the necessary number of states, the matter is settled. It is now purely a question of time until all our women are entitled to vote. The question that interests Americans, then, is no longer whether the women shall vote or shall not vote, but how they will vote.

Fortunately the question is more easily answered than might at first be supposed; for in the Far West women have been voting for many years. What they have done there furnishes a fair editerion of what they may be expected to do generally. And this is true because in both East and West the women have gone through the same sort of preliminary training. Just as our national army, trained in many different cantonments in as many different parts of the country became, through similar drill, one great fighting unit, so the women, similarly drilled in their various local campaigns for the ballot, may assuredly be expected to form

The best exposition of how the women will vote, then, will be found in an examination of what the eternal feminine has done with the ballot in the past.

Opponents of equal suffrage have solemnly assured us that to allow women to vote meant the ruin of the home, the cegradation of women, etc. If we glance at an election day in the Far West, we shall whether or not this charge is true. For instance take San Francisco, which is rated as being as care-free, irreligious. and unmoral as any of our cosmopolitan centers of population. What happened there on the first day when California women cast their first ballot—on the day of President Wilson's first candidacy for the presidency? As an eye witness of those occurrences, I write from actual observation, not from hearsay.

On that first election day for California women, the streets of that roaring city of San Francisco lay dumb. The stores were closed. Even the saloons, which ordinarily were open 365 days in a year, were shut tight. A Thanksgiving day in New England could not have been more

The board of education offered the building to Durbin town officials for one dollar, but they turned it down due to concerns about asbestos in the building, Gilardi said.

Kenneth G. Gibson bought the building for $9,000 later that year.

Apparently, the building had fallen into disrepair over the years and suffered from extensive vandalism, leading its current owners, from Ohio, to tear it down.

The school's first principal was C.E. Flynn, according to Gilardi. Others were L.S. Shires, C.E. Batson, Ralph Hedrick, Jack Richardson, Claude A. McMillion, Max Poscover,

On that first election day for California women, the streets of that roaring city of San Francisco lay dumb. The stores were closed. Even the saloons, which ordinarily were open 365 days in a year, were shut tight. A Thanksgiving day in New England could not have been more solemn and still. At polling place after polling place one found not the slightest semblance of disorder or anything distasteful. There was nothing rude or boisterous or discourteous on the part of men toward the women voters, and nothing on the part of these voters that was unladylike or militant.

There were 600 polling places within the city. In these polling places 1,200 women were on duty as election clerks. The result was astonishing. No filthy cuspidors were in evidence, no stifling stale tobacco smoke clouded the places, no intoxicated men made themselves offensive. But there was decency and cleanliness—the same decency and cleanliness that women instill into everything they touch. In short, the polling places, so long offensive to the clean-minded, had suddenly become as decent and proper as a court room or a post office or any other place where important public business is transacted.

saw women with baby coaches, giving the babies fresh air while the mothers went to vote. Not infrequently one saw husband and wife with a baby coach strolling toward a polling place. And many were the perambulators standing in front of the voting booths, while the mothers were inside the booths voting to protect the occupants of these perambulators.

For in this election, as in every election, there were things before the voters that touched the welfare of every household. In this case the matter that most deeply agitated the women was a trick bill to license race track gambling. This bill was a mass of intricate yerbiage, so worded as apparently to forbid gambling, but in reality it was meant to legalize it. Well did the women know what legalized gambling meant to their homes and their children. When they were instructed, through the medium of the women's political organizations, as to the real nature of the bill, they registered in droves and voted as a unit against the measure. They did more.

More than a reenactment... Battlefield Days brings life to McDowell 1862

Aside from burying all the power lines and busting up the pavement of U.S. 250, it is as close as you can get to McDowell, Virginia, 1862.

The event will be held on May 7 and 8.

The focus for the 2005 event will push McDowell Battlefield Heritage Days beyond the scope of a reenactment. The thrust of this year's event will be one-on-one historical interpretation and fundraising for historical preservation.

Reenactors have agreed to engage the public in their roles more than ever before. Interpreters in costume will introduce their characters to spectators. Military and civilian reenactors carefully research their historical personas so their portrayals will be as accurate as possible.

In an effort to further involve spectators, there will be a band of narrators moving through the event. The narrators and docent interpreters will be identified with badges and/or arm bands and will explain scenarios to the crowd as the reenactors perform.

In addition, large scenarios will be scheduled throughout Saturday to better direct ticket holders to the most poignant interpretive moments such as a courts martial and refugees fleeing their homes. Smaller, casual scenarios will also be performed throughout the weekend and spectators are encouraged to attend. Some that have been discussed include the trial of the Williamsville raiders, a scene depicting a conscription, ration distribution and a ladies aid society meeting.

Reenactors coordinators have deemed historic preservation fundraising as a goal this year to benefit the Highland County Museum and Heritage Center. The museum will open to the public during the event, although the entire building will not be accessible as the renovation will not yet be complete.

A full slate of speakers will give presentations at the McDowell Presbyterian Church and the Highland County Museum and Heritage Center. Presenters will introduce spectators to everyday life in the Allegheny Mountains. Civilian life will be depicted through talks on such topics as period clothing, laundry and cooking. Period crafters will be on hand to sell their wares and demonstrate their skills. Military topics such as signal flags, food rations, cavalry, artillery, drills and roll calls will be explained throughout the weekend.

Plans are being made to lay a wreath in memory of Delano Morey, who received the Congressional Medal of Honor for this bravery at the Battle of McDowell. As a youth, Morey captured two Confederate sharpshooters with his empty musket. His descendants will attend the ceremony.

Visitors to McDowell Battlefield Heritage Days will purchase tickets that will permit them to tour the camps, attend talks, lectures and demonstrations, observe the performed scenarios and view the battle reenactment Saturday afternoon. Along with their tickets, spectators will receive an orientation packet explaining the events of May 1862 and its effects on Highland County as well as complete schedule and other resource information.

For more information on McDowell Battlefield Heritage Days, contact the Highland Historical Society at highlandhistory@email.com or go to highlandhistoricalsociety.com.

There was no division of the women on the gambling bill.

The war has given us a new standard of public service by women. We have become accustomed to Red Cross drives, Liberty bond campaigns soldier welfare efforts, and similar movements in which the women took a part equal with the men and in some cases an even more important part. They intend to bear their share of the burden. San Francisco women showed this on the first election day.

It was the same way in Washington state when the women regained the ballot. I say regained because years ago they had the right of suffrage. By Court decisions that was taken away from them. But in 1910 through the wonderful leadership of Mrs. Emma Smith De Voe, the women of Washington regained, and for all time, the right to vote. The very first thing they did with their ballots was to clean house.

Seattle, the leading city in the state, was at that time a stench in the nostrils of decency. Corrupt city officials had actually leased a city street to a vice syndicate for the erection of an enormous house for immoral purposes. The first thing the women did was to clean up the

Smith and Roberts concert rescheduled at the Pocahontas County Opera House

The Smith and Roberts Band, a popular regional folk/rock ensemble, will perform at the Pocahontas County Opera House in Marlinton on Saturday, April 30, at 7:30 p.m. The concert was originally scheduled for March 5, but was postponed due to a snow storm. Tickets are $5 and only will be available at the door. Children 12 and under are admitted free.

Rob Smith and Keith Roberts first got together in the mid-1970s, and soon became a popular duo on the local music scene and eventually recorded a number of their original songs on the album Buffalo Run.

After a 20-year hiatus during which the two singer/songwriters raised families, they reunited in 2003. In its new incarnation the band has expanded to include Fred Crozier on mandolin, Dickie Lansberry on bass and Alex Hicks on drums.

The Pocahontas County Opera House is located at 818 Third Avenue in Marlinton. Opera House performances are informal, family-friendly and open to all. Persons with disabilities are encouraged to attend; special accommodations can be arranged upon request. For further information, call 800-336-7009, or (304) 799-4636.

This concert is part of the 2004-05 Performance Series sponsored by the Pocahontas County Opera House Foundation with financial assistance through a grant from the West Virginia Division of Culture and History and the National Endowment for the Arts, with approval from the West Virginia Commission on the Arts. Financial support is also provided by Pocahontas County Drama, Fairs and Festivals.

Four years previously, largely through the efforts of Miss Adella Parker, a teacher of civics in a Seattle high school, a recall law had been placed upon the municipal statute books. Now this was called into use. A recall petition was started. To secure a recall election, it was necessary that one-fourth of the city's voters sign the petition. To secure these signatures was no simple task. The vice ring was firmly in the saddle. Should an election be held and the recall effort fail, the city officials would have it in their power to make it unpleasant for those who had signed the recall petition. New History Alive! program brochure available

The West Virginia Humanities Council has available a new brochure about its popular History Alive! program. Information on how to host a History Alive! presentation, descriptions and photographs of available characters, and presenter contact information is included in the brochure.

History Alive! brings historical figures to life through protrayals by presenters who have conducted scholarly research on the person they portray. The Humanities Council has fifteen historical figures on the History Alive! roster including Robert E. Lee, Mother Jones, Chief Logan, "Mad" Anne Bailey, Colonel Ruby Bradley, Booker T. Washington and Harriet Tubman. The Humanities Council pays the presentation fee directly and asks when possible host organizations cover travel expenses for the presenter.

Schools, libraries, museums, historical societies, service and civic groups, and a wide range of not-for-profit organizations across West Virginia are eligible to take advantage of the History Alive! program offerings. The Humanities Council sponsors over two hundred History Alive! presentations each year.

highlight the fact that money is not a factor in controlling the smell - smell and money are inherent elements in sewer systems. In visiting Northern Virginia recently, I had various occasions to pass by this plant and each time it was windows up for at least a mile.

Who has the authority to drive south on 219 from the Linwood Road, looking left and right, and say, OK, this is the piece of land we will take and everything within miles is of no consequence because we need a sewage treatment plant for Snowshoe?

How can you throw away my mother, a 92-year-old widow who has lived for 65 years on the same property and only hoped to be able to live out her life there? How can you calculate the loss on property values as they plummet for miles north and south on 219? How can you begin to put a cost on the loss of a 100+ year store and newly opened B&B? I am mindful of what the "present" (time) means for us.

The "present" has nothing to do with a piece of property located adjacent to 219, which floods more than occasionally, has sinkholes visible from the road, contains burial grounds and is not available to sell or give away, as the only property suitable for a sewage treatment plant for Snowshoe. There are thousands of acres available for such use between Snowshoe and Slaty Fork—some government owned—that if used would another living human being.

Why wouldn't the ideal location for such a necessity be off the road and out of smelling distance? There are certainly many such available acres fitting that description.

Now, we have been told that rather than pipe the liquid discharge squeezed from the solids collected by the sewage plant down to the Elk River, it will be dumped directly into the Big Spring Creek, only a few yards from my mother's home, into a creek bed which is dry a large part of the year and flooded for various parts of the year.

Certainly her water supply will be totally lost—simply because the chosen ones who made this selection were not ambitious or caring enough to even consider the most important aspect of this whole project—the long time residents of the community still trying to eke out an existence under the shadow of Snowshoe and what it has brought.

Snowshoe, unfortunately, didn't have the foresight to build an adequate sewage treatment plant on their property 40 years ago. Snowshoe could not abide an honest business, a rock quarry, operating in sight of Snowshoe - and went to work to put it out of business. But they didn't know they needed a sewage treatment plant even 20 years ago, 10 years ago? Are they honestly surprised at what has taken place at Snowshoe in 40 years, so much so that they were and are obviously so ill prepared to handle it? In all the building that has gone on up on that mountain, no one thought about sewage?

And now, the Sharp family and the long time residents of Slaty Fork must pay for the nearsightedness of their poor planning because Snowshoe now needs to hurry to get something in place?

Sewage is not the only smelly part of this fiasco. The old adage "but not in my backyard" is so painfully obvious here. Unfortunately, it has been dropped directly in the front yard of our 92 year old defenseless mother. Why are these planners looking only at 219 to build a sewage treatment plant for the use of Snowshoe?

Why not locate the treatment plant on the mountain with Snowshoe or anywhere up Linwood Road and run the sewer from Slaty Fork to Snowshoe. This could have easily been handled without a single person being harmed or uprooted; it could have been handled so that no business would suffer and no landowner would see the value of their property plummet.

It is plain to see that none of the adverse effects of this will affect a single person north of Slaty Fork except when driving through.

What pathetically poor planning.

the women made this possible. Then the petition was duly filed, and the special election took place 50 days afterward.

The campaign that the women carried on in those seven weeks fairly stunned the old line politicians. Of the 23,000 women who registered 22,000 voted. Only 45,000 of 49,000 men cast their ballots. Most interesting was the fact that 80 per cent. of the woman vote was cast by married women. They were out to protect their sons and daughters from the awful evil that had smitten the city. And they did it. Mayor Gill, who had been elected by 4,000 votes, was recalled by a majority of 6,000 votes. When Gill was elected, his opponent received 14,000 votes. In the recall election Gill's opponent received 36,000 votes—an increase in the anti-Gill vote of 22,000 votes, which was almost exactly the number of votes cast by the women. Gill and his associates were swept out of power, a new council was seated and

A real Confederate son

There will be a ceremony honoring William Dysard, a "real" son of a Confederate soldier, during Battle of Lewisburg Living History and Reenactment on Sunday, May 22, at noon. Mr. Dysard is a direct link to our Civil War Heritage and we honor him for his dedication both to his family history and to the history of Lewisburg. It is not every day that you are able to meet a real son of a Civil War veteran.

William Dysard is 96 years old and lives in Lewisburg. He was born on a farm on the outskirts of town and has remained in the area his entire life. His father joined the Confederate Army and fought in the Battle of Lewisburg. Asbury Kincaid Dysard was 64 years old when William was born and died when William was 14. A. K. Dysard was born near White Sulphur Springs in 1842. He was born three years later. A. K. Dysard was a schoolteacher in Pocahontas County and sold tombstones in the surrounding areas. William Dysard thinks his father most likely met his mother while selling her the tombstone for her deceased husband.

William still has his father's musket, an 1863 Tower. He said the musket had been placed in the corner of the barn and had gone unnoticed for many years and unfortunately had deteriorated to the point that most of the stock is gone.

The Battle of Lewisburg Living History & Reenactment, on May 21-22, will be held in honor of Mr. Dysard and we hope you will take this opportunity to come and meet him. He sometimes chuckles and says he just doesn't understand what all the fuss over him is about. To understand the tie he is between such distinct eras makes him a treasure like none other.

Across the border, in Idaho, the woman voters have played a big part in the constructive work of the state. Their first united political effort was to secure public libraries. At that time the state of Idaho, which is larger than all of New England and half as large again as New York, had fewer than 162,000 people. Cities were few in number and small in size. The population was scattered over this vast area in small groups and tiny communities. There was desperate need of books, but there was not a free library in the state. The population was [illegible] this vast area in small groups and tiny communities. There was desperate need of books, but there was not a free library in the state. The call for money for the necessary development work, such as the making of roads, bridges, public buildings, etc., was tremendously heavy. There was none to be had from the state legislature for such things as books, necessary though they were.

The women realized this, and out of that realization was born their "demonstration method" of political procedure. They set about providing the books themselves. By personal contributions and through gifts secured, they soon had 500 books and the necessary traveling cases for them. At their own expense the women for two years sent these books into every nook and corner of the state, into isolated farming communities and rugged mining camps. Then they appealed to the state legislature to create a state library commission and a free traveling library, and to pass a law enabling towns and cities to levy taxes for library purposes. So great was the demand for books, created by the two year campaign of the women through their

Then they appealed to the state legislature to create a state library commission and a free traveling library, and to pass a law enabling towns and cities to levy taxes for library purposes. So great was the demand for books, created by the two year campaign of the women through their traveling library, that the bill speedily became a law.

Today practically every community in the state with 1,000 population or more has its own reading room, where the cases for the traveling library are housed and where the community keeps its own books. Now the state appropriates thousands of dollars each year for new books, with additional sums for expenses.

Having made it possible to get books to read, the women were desirous that every child in the state should be able to read them. They securred the passage of a compulsory education law. By their demonstration method the women of Idado have secured mothers' pensions, probation officers in the juvenile courts, splendid homes for the state Home Finding society, and many other things helpful for Idaho.

Mace United Methodist Church got a bell Saturday thanks to Snowshoe Mountain Resort and the Fred Ware Family.

The bell once graced the top of the Presbyterian Church of Valley Head, but was removed and sold when the church was taken down. Fred Ware bought the bell and for many years, it was kept in Bayard. His family donated the bell to the Mace Church and the men from the church and community mounted the bell into a tower to be lifted onto the church.

Ed Galford, Dave Kennedy, Curtis Hively and David Begg, all from Snowshoe Mountain Resort, brought a truck with a boom and lifted the three pieces of the tower into place.

Jerry Almaroad, Ronnie Doyle and Doug Cooper also helped mount the tower on the church.

One of these laws was a measure to protect the children from exploitation in factories. Only a woman's wit made this possible. In Idaho the Mormans held the balance of power and they did not believe in prohibiting child labor. "We are going to print a rogues' gallery," she said, "and publish the names of all the men who oppose this bill."

"You women beat the deuce," was the Morman's reply.

Later in the session he sent for Mrs. Dockery. "Are you in earnest about that rogues' gallery?" he asked.

"Certainly," said Mrs. Dockery. "The women voters of Idaho are very much interested in this bill. They are entitled to know who votes against it."

"I don't want to be in it," said the legislator, "yet I don't like your bill. I think children ought to work. Can't you leave me out?"

"I am sorry," said Mrs. Dockery, but the list must be complete."

"Will you let me out if I vote for your property rights law?',

"No. We think the child labor law is more important."

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I am SSGT. Matthew Moore, son of Sandy Tusing, of Timberville, Virginia, and Richard L. Moore, of Marlinton. I graduated from Pocahontas County High School in 1996. Shortly after graduation I enlisted in the Marine Corps at the age of 17, turning 18 while in Recruit Training.

Since then I have been on two deployments to the Mediterranean, and now I find myself fighting in Iraq with five more months of deployed time left.

In the nine years that I have been in the Marine Corps I have met a great deal of true professionals. The men and women I fight beside on a daily basis are the best that our great country has to offer. If you were in my shoes you would see that we have it good as Americans.

The people I see daily here in Iraq are poor and are barely making it through to the next day. All of that comes from a regime that suppressed them for more than three decades. Seeing what I see here makes me glad that I was born where I was.

Know that freedom is not given! It is earned, and should not be taken for granted!! As you drive to work, go to the store, or even walk down the street, know that a lot of blood has been shed to make that possible. What these men and women do on a daily basis is truly amazing. No matter how dangerous the situation, they go in to it with courage, aggressiveness, and always fight with honor.

Survival is the name of the game. Watching one another's back is what is done without thinking twice. Over here all we have is one another. If any sports team could emulate the team work that we have to put forth to be successful, they would most definitely be champions.

I am to return home to Camp Lejeune, North Carolina, to my wife, Sarah, and daughter, Mackenzie, in September of this year. I know that they are as anxious for my return as I am. I hope that if any of you have loved ones who are deployed that they make it home to you safely.

Once again, remember those who go in to harm's way to fight for our country's way of life. I am proud that I was born a free American, as I hope that you are.

your property rights law?',

"No. We think the child labor law is more important."

Next day this man lined up his nine votes for the child labor law and carried the bill.

"It's no use," was his comment. "You can't beat these women."

Once they are aroused, you cannot. And the reason is that the women voters believe the home extends beyond four walls, and that whatever affects the community or the commonwealth affects the home. In affairs that affect the home women rightly feel that they should have a voice equal with their husbands'. Perhaps the position of the women who vote and will vote cannot better be expressed than it was by Miss Margaret Roberts, The Idaho state librarian.

In Idaho we women don't want to take the places of men. They are busy developing the country. We want to see that the homes and the children are properly cared for. To do that we need the ballot. Nothing puts the fear of God into the hearts of men like the ballot in the hands of good women."

Chief Circuit Judge James Rowe handed down the following sentences in Friday's session of court:

•Jeremy L. O'Meara, 20, of Sylvester, was received two concurrent sentences of one-to-10 years for counts of breaking and entering. Rowe suspended the sentences and ordered O'Meara be placed in the youthful offender program at Anthony Correctional Center for six-to-24 months.

O'Meara, Neadia Marie George, 38, of Sylvester, and Martin Dale Fitzpatrick, 45, of Huntington, were arrested January 26 in connection with a burglary at the facilities of Boxley Materials and West Virginia Pavingn in Mill Point. More than $48,000 in equipment was stolen from the facilities.

All three were charged with conspiracy to commit breaking and entering, two counts of breaking and entering and two counts of grand larceny.

O'Meara pleaded guilty to the breaking and entering charge last July.

George pleaded guilty to one count of grand larceny in June, and Fitzpatrick pleaded guilty to two counts of breaking and entering and two counts of grand law is more important."

Next day this man lined up his nine votes for the child labor law and carried the bill.

"It's no use," was his comment. "You can't beat these women."

Once they are aroused, you cannot. And the reason is that the women voters believe the home extends beyond four walls, and that whatever affects the community or the commonwealth affects the home. In affairs that affect the home women rightly feel that they should have a voice equal with their husbands'. Perhaps the position of the women who vote and will vote cannot better be expressed than it was by Miss Margaret Roberts, The Idaho state librarian.

In Idaho we women don't want to take the places of men. They are busy developing the country. We want to see that the homes and the children are properly cared for. To do that we need the ballot. Nothing puts the fear of God into the hearts of men like the ballot in the hands of good women."

W. H. Cackley of Ronceverte, and A. Davis Cackley, of Clinton, Illinois, were in Pocahontas to spend the week end. Mr. Davis Cackley left Pocahontas in the yerr 1852, at the age of 22 years, and this is his first visit back. He was raised at Huntersville and is a son of William Cackley. The only men living whom he could recall as having known were Rev. W. T. Price and Sqnire Isaac McNeel. He was particularly well acquainted with Mr. Price, as they were boys together. The last time they saw each other they rode together from Marlins Bottom to Cackleytown, now known as Millpoint. When Mr. Cackley went west, work had been commenced on the old State bridge

W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

The thirty-third annual convention of the Womans' Christian Temperance Union of West Virginia, convened at Fairmont, September 22 24, Mrs. Lena Lowe Yost, of Morgantown, presiding. The convention met in the First M. E. Church, a handsome and commodious edifice. This was was the largest convention ever held in the State, two hundred delegate being present.

The people of Fairmont outdid themselves in hospitality; their homes were thrown open and all visitors made welcome. The different churches, Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist, served luncheon in turns each day in dining rooms of church.

The day sessions were filled with business reports of the delegates etc.

Wednesday night, the opening night, we were welcomed to the in an address by Mayor an, to the churches by Rev. Stooetzer, from the lawyers Attorney Lehman, the schools Prof. Colebank, from the phys by Dr. Henry, from the ns' Clubs by Mrs. De Bolt, the W. C. T. U. by Mrs. C. ALLEGHENY CLUB

Minnehaha Springs, Sept. 29.—

The scenery around the Club is beautiful now as the trees are changing their coat, of green for red, gold and brown which mixed with the evergreens makes a beautiful picture. Both small and large game seem very plentiful. Several flocks of wild turkeys, five deer and a large bear have seen near the Club the past week, and innumerable squirrels and ruffled grouse.

L. C. Hetrick and family and J. C. Gray and family are camping at Hunter's Lodge for two weeks. They have been very successful hunters, returning each time with large bags of squirrels.

Dr. Randolph J. Hersey, wife and daughter, Miss Nancy, of Wheeling, are registered at the Club for a two weeks' stay.

W. H. Cackley of Ronceverte, and A. S. Cackley of Clinton, Ill., were visitors at the Club the past week. Both are old men and pioneers of Pocahontas county. They were highly pleased with such a fine Club House.

Mrs. J. W. Goodsell, Misses Gayle and Virginia Goodsell and Glenn Goodsell of Durbin, and Mrs. J. L. Hoffman, Jr., and Mrs. Joe Chaddoett of Wheeling, motored down from Durbin for dinner at the Club on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Stevenson and son and Miss Elmira Titzel of Pittsburg, Pa., spent a part of the past week at the Club. They expect to return for a longed stay later in the season.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Echols of Marlinton, and Mrs. Florenence Humphreys and A. T. Reynolds, of New York City, motored up from Marlinton and took lunch at the Club on Sunday.

J. S. Schuder and wife, and Miss Gladys Schuder, James Rayne and Mrs. W. T. Schuder of Covington, Va., spent Sunday at the Club.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Hanimen, Miss Katheryn Graham, J. P. Mathews, wife and children took lunch at the Club Sunday, returning to Cass that evening.

FROST

Mrs. A. A. Sharp is still on the sick list.

Aunt Lydia Hiner continues very ill.

Calf buyers have been very numerous. Calves are selling from $20 to $30 per head.

Crops have been good this season—especially wheat and oats making a good yield—wheat from 20 to 40 bushels per acre and oats 40 to 70. A. A. Sharp has the prize oats, the Banner, 68 bushels to the acre and weighing 43 pound to the bushel, and C. Newman 40 bushels of whert to the acre.

Amos Kelley is building a new dwelling which will add to our little town.

G. W. Huntley passed through here on his way to his lumber job where he will commence work in a few days.

Ernest Sharp went to Mt. Grove with a load of produce for the Moore Lumber Co.

Mrs. Upton Sharp, who has been right sick for a few days, is improving.

Yes, Mr. Editor, we are glad your opinion is so good in regard to the tax rate. You state "it has come down nearly two cents and it is a move in the right direction" You are right Our tax payers wish you were either a member of the legislature or county court. No doubt you would have some of those unnecessary clerks in the legislature cut out.

Upton Sharp, our road superintendent, has been having our roads dressed over, filling the mud holes with gravel, which is a move in the right direction. We understand that we will have a permanent road levy of ten cents to pay again this year. We do not object to this if properly expended. There is not a location in Huntersville district, or we believe in the county that needs permanent roads more than around Minnehaha Springs. There are some bad grades from the springs to Rimel. Also the little banks, bumps and curves from the Springs for two miles up Knapps Creek valley is a a disgrace to a civilized country

DURBIN

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the M. E. Church, South, when Miss Ellen Graves became the bride of Mr. Guy Morrison, Rev. R. K. Nevitt, officiating. Only a few special friends were invited. The bride received many handsome presents. The party left on the Western Maryland for the west.

We had bad week at Durbin—a shower of rain and hail—a shower of linen at Mrs. LeRoy Fenton's, a shower of tin at Mrs. S. A. Wilhide's, a shower of caps and aprons at Mrs. H. E. White's, a shower of stockings at Mrs. C. F. Hull's. And then Miss Eva Curry had a birthday party and a shower of presents. Now we have clear, nice weather and peace reigns here.

Mrs. J. Ed Arbogast is quite sick with throat trouble.

Thomas Houchin is very sick at his home on Back Mountain.

P. F. Eades has installed water works in his house which is a big improvement to his property.

A. T. Carpenter is doing some farming at present.

The Williams Bros., liverymen lost a fine young horse last week.

Visitors here from a distance are Miss Rebecca Nevitt of Kentucky; Mr. and Mrs. Grose of Elkin; Mrs. and Mrs. Jo Graves, and Mrs. Ayers of Cass; Preston Bell, of Highland county, Va.; G. W. and S. H. Sharp, of Marlinton, and Guy Morrison of Weaver, W. Va.

Rev. R. K. Nevitt sold his auto to Dale Wiley, of Thornwood.

The sheriff came up from Marlinton and captured something like 85 quarts of alcohol and eight men. We hope to see the state dry enough that the engineer will have to get a script to water his engine.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

On behalf of the Friends of the Elk and WVAngler.com, I would like to recognize the nearly 55 volunteers from as nearby as Monterville and Slaty Fork to as far away as Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio who came together on May 14 to help clean up the Upper Elk River from Slaty Fork to Whitaker Falls.

These dedicated volunteers gave up a beautiful Saturday morning to give a little something back to a watershed they enjoy for many different reasons. Everyone who participated seemed to truly enjoy the work, not to mention the great rib and chicken dinner afterward!

I would also like to recognize the West Virginia Outdoor Sportsmen's Association for recruiting volunteers from the local area and working on arrangements for cleaning the Slaty Fork section of the river, and Senator Walt Helmick for arranging for the removal of the trash collected along the Slaty Fork railroad tracks.

Texas Roadhouse, Elk Springs Fly Shop & Outfitters, Valley Head Market, the Brazenhead Inn, Jack Jameson Construction/Elk River Lodging & Guiding, and Domino's of Beckley were our sponsors and folks who helped make the event so special and successful.

And the Times' Drew Tanner not only came out to cover the event, but also lent a hand and spent his morning picking up trash.

A great many people travel long distances to enjoy the beauty and abundance God has granted to Pocahontas, Randolph and Webster Counties. Hopefully, our annual Elk River cleanup goes at least a small way toward thanking all of you who live in our mountain counties for allowing us to be guests in your neighborhoods and for being such wonderful stewards of such a special place.

Sincerely,
Joe Webb
Vice President,
Friends of the Elk

Court indicates that it will [illegible] the West Virginia law, as it is that it will allow the express companies to resume the carrying of intoxicants into this State.

One thing that the prohibition era has done for the State of West Virginia is that the art of smuggling has been brought into force. Living in an inland state, West Virginians have not had as much practise in the art as some of the first families of the border states, but local talent seems to be equal to the occasion, though as yet most of the wet goods that come into the State are carried under the belt, just the place that they can do the most narm. The steps of such persons are lagging but legal, and there is no way in which such importations can be reached unless it would be by means of stomach pumps. If however it should be carried so far as to get trained pelicans, the law would step in and take a hand. Goldsmith in his "Tales of a Traveller" speaks of a custom in Russia where the peasants had a very unpleasant custom of standing outside of the banquet halls with cups to catch the liquor which the banqueters have no further use for.

custom of standing outside of the banquet halls with cups to catch the liquor which the banqueters have no further use for.

No less a man than Adam Smith, the noted Scotch philosopher and political economist, is an apologist for the smuggler. He defines him as "a person who, though highly blamable for violating the laws of his country, is frequently incapable of violating those of natural justice, and would have been in every respect an excellent citizen had not the laws of his country made that a crime which nature never meant to be so."

It has been asserted by other thinkers that a low rate of taxation is the best preventative of the crime of smuggling and if this is the remedy, what may we expect of a condition where the importation of an article of luxury is wholly prohibited.

Now is the time to ponder well upon the words of Sidney Smith when he speaks of "Men who prefer any load of infamy, however great, to any pressure of taxation, however light."

John W. Hevener was in town the other day and said that he was very much relieved by the peace treaty between Japan and China. That by reason of the war clouds passing, ginseng had advanced $3 per pound, and that he had 20,000 four year old plants ready to be pulled this fall. He says that it is a mistake about ginseng coming up every other year. That it puts forth the same foliage every year, but that it takes eighteen months for the seed to germinate. We have long heard local naturalists claim that the plant comes up every other year from the root, Ginseng root has aromatic and stimulating properties and it is said that it is very easy for anyone to acquire the habit of eating it. That once acquired it is like the tobacco habit. The Chinese consider it the greatest medicine in the world. It is produced in Korea in great quantities and the ginseng of the eastern part of the United States, called in Latin the five leaved ginseng, is very much like the Korean ginseng. Mr Hev-

For many decades the Durbin School perched on a hillside overlooking the east end of town. Almost 30 years ago the school closed, leaving behind a massive brick building that was then sold to a private party. Recently the building was torn down. An era was over.

But not quite so. PCFL Board member Sue Ann Heatherly thought the bricks from the old school might make a nice touch on the outside of the Durbin Library as well as keep a piece of the school in town. She suggested that I contact JoAnn Gilardi, chair of the Durbin Graded School Alumni. JoAnn contacted the owners, Linda Parker and Melissa Canadey, who gave permission to use the brick for the library.

This past Monday about 6000 bricks from the school were moved to the east end of the library building, in a sense initiating the building project. Crew members included Jason Bauserman, Jonah Bauserman, Jeremy Bauserman, Yaw Mensah, Micah Johnson, Sue Ann Heatherly, and me. The bricks we gathered are in excellent condition. The old mortar comes off easily and should clean up nicely. We estimate a few thousand more bricks will still be needed, a project that will continue on another day. The crew worked energetically and efficiently using a tractor with a bucket to load bricks onto a dump truck.

JoAnn Gilardi will head up a Durbin Library fundraising project especially keying on contributions from Durbin School alumni to give back generously to their community. Local businesses will also be contributing, along with funds earmarked from the Pocahontas County Commission and a WV State Economic Development grant.

The renovated Durbin Library will have almost twice as much space as is currently used. Besides expanded adult and children's book collections, the library will house an organized and attractive Internet computer section, a new bathroom, a small kitchen, and a nice-sized community meeting room. A small museum exhibit to highlight the Howes Leather Tannery history, and a special railroad collection will likely be present. Community input will be welcome toward formulating the interior layout.

The PCFL Board of Trustees believes that a larger, more attractive, and better-equipped library will invigorate the Durbin/Frank/Bartow communities just as the recent projects in Hillsboro, Marlinton, and Green Bank have enlivened those communities. Some promising developments are happening in Durbin right now, what with the inauguration of the trail from Durbin to Widney Park, the efforts being made to improve the downtown appearance, and the continuing success of the tourism railroad. The library will play an important part in the revitalization of Durbin and the surrounding communities.

I should add that property transfer details are still in the works with the BFD who owns the Durbin Library property. We are confident the green light will go on this summer.

Speaking of fundraising, there has allegedly been some unauthorized fundraising done in the name of the Durbin Library and other causes. This matter is being investigated. Pocahontas Libraries takes very seriously the generosity of its contributors, keeps careful records of all gifts, and makes every effort to spend the money that is raised in a thrifty and efficient manner. Fundraisers are authorized by branch directors or by me as county director. The Durbin Graded School Alumni fundraiser that JoAnn Gilardi is heading up is legitimate and worthy of support.

PCFL will launch its summer fundraiser in June. I say with all sincerity that we need to raise an amount comparable to last June's extraordinary outpouring in order to maintain our budget. PCFL is doing its job for everyone. Please be generous with your help.

HCR Carriers honored

The Durbin Post Office honored its Highway Contract Route mail carriers for their many years of service and dedication to the USPS May 20.

"It is with great pride and pleasure that I present each of you with this safe driving lapel pin which represents your accident-free driving records," said Postmaster Carla Kiess.

"I extend my sincere thanks to all three carriers for their dependability, loyalty and responsibility to the Durbin Post Office, its customers and the United States Postal Service."

The following HCR carriers were honored:

•Regina Greathouse: three years, HC 89

•Carl Greathouse: 11 years, HC 89

•Doug Sheets: 15 years, HC 63

THE WEATHER

Mr. Harris A. Jones of the Elkins weather bureau observed among other things that April was unusually warm and dry. The warmest April day known in the records of this office as well as of New York where they have kept a record for a lifetime showed that the 26th with a temperature of 88 degrees was the hottest April day ever known in these latitudes. The lowest was 18 degrees on the 2nd. Average for the month 52. Normal for the month 48 7. Rainfall for the month 2.28 inches. Normal for the month is 3.29. Accumulated deficiency since the first of the year 2.14 inches. The dryest April on record is 1900 with a rainfall of 1.37 inches. The wettest 1914 with a rainfall of 6.97.

Our local observer, Mr. S. L. Brown, observed that the average high temperature for the month was 60 degrees and the average low 33 degrees, the mean being degrees. The highest was 83 the 27th and the lowest 14 on 2nd. The greatest daily range 46 degrees on the 9th. The total rainfall was 1.86 inches. The heaviest rainfall was on the 28th was .55 of an inch. The total snow fall was .5 of an inch. On days there was a .01 inch or precipitation; ten clear days; cloudy days and eighteen partly cloudy. Frosts on eleven , and thunder storms on days.

I have a few voters who are young fathers, and who have young children growing up, that they are going to vote against it, that would make their taxes higher.

Green Bank students participate in EMS essay contest

In celebration of national emergency medical services (EMS) week May 15-21, students around the county have been writing essays and creating posters giving their view of emergency services and what they do. Mrs. Peck's third grade at Green Bank took up the challenge and wrote essays in class, without help from parents. A committee of ambulance personnel with the BFD rescue squad reviewed the essays and chose the following winners:

1st place - Fredricah Gardner; tied for 2nd place - Kara Lane and Josiah Bolyard; 3rd place - Allison Jonese; and 4th place - Linzi Myers. Prizes were given to all the other students who participated in the contest. The children and their parents were invited to a volunteer appreciation reception on May 2.

WILLIAM STEWART GUILTY

William Stewart, colored, will be executed on July 2nd, for murdering George T. Shires, Chief of Police. of Ronceverte, April 3rd, 1915.

Sentence was pronounced by Judge Dice, in the Greenbrier Circuit Court, at Lewisburg last Friday.

Stewart was was found guilty after a trial lasting all day Thursday and Friday. The jury was out less than an hour. This is the first time in half a century or more that the death penalty has been imposed by a Greenbrier County Jury.

On Wednesday morning Stewart was brought before the court to make a plea on the indictment. Upon being asked whether he was guilty or not guilty, his reply was "guilty." Judge Dice advised him that such a plea in this instance meant the extreme penalty; that he was entitled to and would receive a fair trial. The plea was then changed to not guilty, and the court appointed J. S. McWhorter and John W. Arbuckle to conduct the defense.

The entire list of jurors summoned for the term having been exhausted, twenty additional juroas had to be drawn before a jury could be secured.

The evidence was that Stewart had been bringing whiskey into the State and selling it; that on April 3rd, Chief of Police Shires, of Ronceverte, had confiscated a lot of whiskey belonging to Stewart, and afterward arrested him. While under arrest Stewart drew a gun and shot Shires, killing him instantly. The State also showed that Stewart had said that he intended to kill the policemen if he attempted to arrest him.

DIED

OPEN LETTER TO MR. MICHAEL, ATTORNEY REPRESENTING THE POCAHONTAS COUNTY PUBLIC SERVICE DISTRICT, W.D SMITH OF REGION IV PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT, THRASHER ENGINEERING AND TO THE PEOPLE OF POCAHONTAS COUNTY AS YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO KNOW;

Subject: SEWER TREATMENT PLANT LOCATION

This is in response to your letter to Public Service Commission engineer Ralph Clark in Charleston, dated May 4. As you know, Mr. Clark is responsible for a now due recommendation to the PSC judge in regards to the applied for Certificate of Need for the sewer project by the Pocahontas County Service District. Mr. Clark's recent directive to Thrasher Engineering to explore alternate sites other than the Sharp farm for the sewer treatment plant is addressed in your letter. As the filing of his memorandum awaits this technical report, it is curious to see that the report has been filed by you, a lawyer, and not Thrasher. Has the director of the Region IV Planning and Development, W. D Smith, (in charge of this project) engaged you to speak for him and all of the parties mentioned in your letter? Is this the best way to relay important and technical information?

You mention multiple discharge (for effluent) points were explored. You state that the maximum waste load allocation is available at the "selected location". While W.D. Smith and others on your team have referred to this location as "The DEP determined release site" this is not exactly true. You chose the maximum waste load allocation of 1.5 million gallons per day over the 1.4 million gallons a day allocation locations available and approved by the DEP. Is it your stance that the DEP has insisted you choose the 1.5 million gallons option?

By telling Mr. Clark "the maximum waste load allocation is available at the selected location" you seem to infer this allocation site is at the Sharp farm. I believe you are aware this is not the case. The waste load allocation you refer to, according to Mr. Clark, is 700+feet down the Big Spring of Elk River from the route 219 bridge where the run-off from the spring behind Eva Shelton's house meets the Big Spring of Elk River. This allocation location is directly behind the old schoolhouse, now Beckwith's Lumber office, and which was, according to an inter-agency report to Thrasher engineer, Laura McNeil, the chosen spot for the treatment plant.

The PSD, at the recent meeting you refer to in the letter, may have discussed Mr. Clark's directive to study options for relocating the proposed treatment plant but they did not act on, decide or vote on keeping the Sharp farm as the targeted site as you insist. You end your letter to Mr. Clark with, "the District has decided to continue to pursue the project with the initial treatment plant location." The PSD did not decide this according to Mark Smith, one of the three members of the PSD (Pocahontas County Public Service District). Others in attendance at the PSD meeting have confirmed Mr. Smith's account.

You mention to Mr. Clark that moving the treatment plant would require a lift station and extra piping. Unmentioned is the fact that moving the treatment plant location further down river creates the possibility to eliminate an already planned, large and most likely very expensive pumping station to pump the solids back up to the Sharp farm site to accommodate the next phases of the system. If the deciders of this project would settle on a mere 100,000 gallons less a day to allow for a 1.4 million gallon a day effluent release the issue of more pipes and lift stations for effluent being pumped back up to the Sharp farm (considerably less challenging than lift stations for solids planned) would be eliminated. You mentioned in your letter that "many factors impact the design and overall cost of the plant, and selection of a site is usually a trade-off among these factors and their affect on the plant costs." Certainly one of these factors should be the cost of destroying a family's contribution of generations and hopes and dreams of same....especially when hundreds of ideally situated state owned acreage is available at no cost to the public. A compromise of 100,000 gallons a day to save the heartache of an aesthetic, physical and financial burden of a 'long time contributing to the community' family should suffice.

Do you know if the route 219 'Bridge Cave' at the Sharp Farm connects with the cave behind 92 year old Eva Shelton's place, just yards from the plant site? Might her spring water used for drinking be affected by the cave site's close proximity to the treatment plant? And what about the cave just above the old schoolhouse on the Big Spring of Elk River? Did you know it makes a path North up toward Mrs. Shelton's house? Did you study the possibility of effluent release near this cave making its way toward her spring reserves via this cave system?

You, Mr. Michael, have been speaking for the entities involved in this project. This may be a common practice but is it not odd that the CPAs, engineers and experts would not be present at this PSD meeting of such importance? Might the 'deciders' not appreciate the opportunity to ask questions or hear it 'from the horses mouth'? Why were the PSD members allowed to believe (and possibly decide upon issues) that the Sharp farm was acquired by the State? One PSD member was shocked to learn this is not the case. Is it not important for the 'deciders' to know details that may affect the viability of this project or its not yet decided upon treatment plant location? Why, when we call for public information, do we receive replies by the entities you represent as in, "You will have to speak to our lawyer. We are speaking with one voice." Is there not a danger in 'one voice speaking for all' that expert technical knowledge, concerns and information important to the fiduciary responsibilities of elected and appointed officials becomes edited by the connotation and motivation of one?

The ancillary costs for moving the proposed location of the treatment plant, as mentioned by you at this last Pocahontas County Public Service meeting, might cost an additional $2.00 a month. It is curious that one week later, in your letter to Mr. Clark, the engineer in charge of recommending (or not) the certificate of need to the Judge, the cost has skyrocketed to $7.20. Was the over one week delay in submitting your report to Mr. Clark from the time the cost was $2.00 to $7.20 the time necessary for the accountants to work up this amazing, new higher figure? Is the tail wagging the dog? Skyrocketing costs seem to be a theme in a sewer project that some have called the result of "pathetically poor planning" as the original project, the result of the combining of the Snowshoe Sewer Authority and the Pocahontas County Public Service District (formerly The Upper Greenbrier Public Service District) was to cost $12 million. A few months ago this figure was $17 million. We now learn the projected figure for this sewer system is over $21 million! Is this incredible figure, itself, a mere fantasy....as bids for the project have not even come in yet? Do you dare allocate another dollar for sheer embarrassment....or is it because the project is precariously balancing on the verge of cost inefficiency? Might the funders pull their commitment in this case? Is this the reason you are holding the Sharp family hostage?

In this regard your letter to Mr. Clark claims that additional no interest state funding is not available. A call today to the state agencies already contributing to this project indicate otherwise. When posed the question of the possibility for necessary additional funds to select a different site for the treatment plant, "We will work with them" was the answer. Why would the Sharps be told this but the entities you represent, Thrasher Engineering, The Pocahontas Public Service District and the Region IV Planning and Development Council (W.D. Smith) and, lastly, you, indicate otherwise. Senator Byrd, in a signed letter to us and since given to the Pocahontas County Commission, offered assistance in locating additional funds to place the treatment plant "in a more appropriate location". (Those are his words) Why has he not been contacted? Do you lack the motivation to pursue the above?

As some of our months earlier attempts to gather information were successful, it became apparent to several State officials, as we shared our findings with them, that important information was missing in reports filed for permits. Time and time again we received responses that 'due diligence' was assumed to be in force when reports were filed. Why then, when we finally convinced state authorities to re-examine many issues OUR due diligence was not assumed? In the case of the rescinding of the Archeological and Cultural Dept. 'per-

In our efforts to gauge the sentiments of the people of Pocahontas County we offered a petition. This petition calls to simply move the site of the sewer treatment plant, not to stop the much-needed sewer. We were amazed at the response..from prominent business owners at Snowshoe to Snowshoe residents to real estate company owners who you would think might be willing to 'look the other way' as the sewer will benefit real-estate prices greatly. The people of Linwood, Slatyfork, Marlinton and Huntersville are speaking with a loud voice. This petition was not shoved in their face. There was no peer pressure! In many cases, the people specifically drove for miles to sign this petition. We are so grateful for this unselfish support.

In this regard, it has come to our attention that some of the entities you represent are telling the petitioners who call the numbers on the back of it that the Sharp family is trying to stop the sewer and that we hate Snowshoe. Wrong! The sewer system is needed and will benefit all of us if properly situated to protect our heath and safety. The effect on rare or threatened species must be addressed. The welfare of the wildlife in and around the headwaters of the Elk and the Elk River must be addressed.

My great uncle, Si Sharp was a painter. Our Country Store is filled with paintings by him. When the first owner, Mr. Brigham, first started Snowshoe he painted a picture in homage to the new ski resort. It happens to be hanging right above our cash register at the store. It features a rather large Snowshoe hare perched atop Cheat mountain next to Cupp Run..with a vast panorama of the 'valley'. My mother, Ramona Sharp Shipley, sold Mr. Brigham the very first sign for Snowshoe. It is still on her property with a second sign recently leased to them. Our family has a cordial and friendly arrangement with Snowshoe to this day. Doc Brigham, by the way, used to come to the Sharp's Country Store every single day. It is hard for us to believe Snowshoe would want the Sharp family to suffer the consequence of this sewer treatment plant, but WE DO NOT HATE SNOWSHOE as W.D. Smith told one of our long time family friends that we did...when she inquired about the health of her 92-year-old mother who lives on our property within yards of the proposed treatment plant.

The map you sent along with your letter to Mr. Clark did not include all of the studied possible sites. It was incomplete in this regard. It did not identify the limestone boundaries and caves. The map should have located all the points of consideration. And why did the map not include the property near rt. 219 that was offered to you as a site for your treatment plant some time ago by its owner? Why was his offer refused?

The Public Service Commission recently received a request for bids to build a 10-mile extension for the Marlinton sewer plant. It is curious that this major construction undertaking, likely to require pumps, boring and miles of pipes, is projected to cost just about what you claim the mere moving of the proposed treatment plant site less than a mile away would cost. Go figure!

Finally, in regard to this recent meeting of the PSD, it was held in Durbin. I called last month to be included in the last PSD meeting. I was told by the PSD that I would have to speak to you, their lawyer. They said ample notice must be given for them to allow the Sharps to be included on the docket and our issues discussed and acted upon. I was one day too late.

I read, in this week's issue of the Pocahontas Times that you were given an exception to this law as you attended the last PSD meeting. An emergency decision had to be made in regard to a water system proposed? Again, the Sharp family is denied an opportunity to discuss these serious issues with the actual people responsible for their investigation and consideration.

Before the last PSD meeting in Durbin I prepared to meet the people of the Pocahontas County Public Service District. I was anxious to finally have the opportunity to participate in the discussion about the relocation of the sewer treatment plant. The meeting was held in Durbin. I was shocked as the

...your letter to me, Mark, you refer to the Sharp farm as the 'preferred site'. Though the original plans for the treatment plant buildings would need, according to a Public Service Commission regulation, 200 feet built changed, it seems you are not willing to absorb the ancillary costs of moving the plant location. You are, however, more than willing to burden a private entity, the Sharp family, with resultant costs of loss of land, use of surrounding land, and loss of business combined to the tune of millions of dollars. It is even more difficult to understand the taking of this land, as it will eliminate any future revenues the county will receive from subsequent generations as the land is developed and taxes collected. A state owned site would allow the citizens of Pocahontas County to suffer none of these consequences.

The benefit to the people of this county, alone...not to mention the multitude of tourists who pass by...justify the plant being put in its proper place away from the road just so we won't have to see it and smell it. Guaranteeing future income for the County ofPocahontas seems worthy of consideration, but will that future income be sacrificed if a request for additional funds will draw attention to the skyrocketing costs of this poorly planned project? This project is, after all, the result of very successful but poorly planned and regulated project on the top of the mountain. The 'cosmetic' issues aside, the fact that the proposed treatment plant site is under flood attack from two sides on a Karst terrain with sinkholes is asking for disaster. It is curious that your client, Thrasher engineering, 'missed' giving the DEP official in charge of 'permitting' the site information about our stream that comes off Middle Mountain (actually two streams combining to make one larger stream) and floods onto the Sharp field. "I was unaware" is a quote from the DEP official. Flash floods have resulted in boulders being washed onto and across route 219, forcing the road to close with unforgiving material cascading over and down into the field...the very site of your sewer processing buildings.

Why has your client, Thrasher Engineering, not applied for a 404 permit in regard to this stream and its diversion? We are told Thrasher has applied for a national permit meant to cover insignificant alterations on any sites it works on in the nation. This national permit was never intended to allow for the avoidance of properly addressing a monster at your doorstep. How do you propose to deal with this steep mountain stream perpendicular to the field site and directly in the path of your raw sewage processing buildings? A culvert on the field site will permanently affect the natural beauty of this stream and its resultant benefit to wildlife and fauna. But what about the stream as it cascades down Middle Mountain across rt. 219 on the opposite side? Will you build up the berm at the field site so high that the frequent flooding (sometimes flash flooding) is diverted down the road?
It is unbelievable that you are willing to put these buildings with potentially dangerous material smack dab in the middle of this uncontrollable stream's path. Why have you not informed the Army Corps of Engineers of this stream and its proposed diversion? Is that not a requirement?

The elected and appointed officials saddled with the responsibility of protecting the culture, history and good for all the people of Pocahontas County are deciding these serous issues as they rely on you and your clients' due diligence in representing the facts. The persons we rely on to make well-informed and important decisions for our community have been told by those you represent that there will be no accidents. The Snowshoe Sewer Authority, according to knowledgeable persons, has hosted two major raw sewage spills during its reign. Of course, this will not happen on the Sharp farm. If it does, the material will be swallowed by the sinkholes on the field and into the water table...a disaster for well water users for miles! Is it true that you have no emergency plan if this is the case? Why would you insist on placing the plant on this Karst terrain when miles of Karst free state owned property is around the bend of the Elk River...away from people, businesses and fishermen? Why have your clients not 'explored' by boots [illegible] my great grandfather and grandfather found them in the field while plowing, as well as three Indians buried along the bank (respectfully returned to the earth) but since they are not here to testify they do not 'exist'. A picture was not even taken. The artifacts we have from that field represent not an occasional encampment, but a likely village....with varied artifacts dating back to 7,700 BC. Big Blue completely discounted them. Big Blue dug some holes within the previously 'staked' boundaries of the buildings (staked out by Thrasher...permission never asked to enter the property and conduct these surveys) and declared our field free of burials and artifacts. Our due diligence backed with written record (family bible and Sharp History book) of our relatives buried in unmarked graves (Mary Eleanor & William Luther in the mid 1800's) on that field and my still living Uncle's testimony to being shown the Indian burial sites as a young boy count for nothing! All documentation by us does not meet your due diligence assumption but every examination and report by you carries the 'due diligence' seal of approval when it benefits you. And to top it all off, you, Mr. Michael, disallowed my viewing of the archeology report with the reason "the report may contain information that Indian artifacts are present on the site and people might gain access to this information and steal them!

Our family found out about the taking of our farm when my mother, Ramona Sharp Shipley, read about it in the Pocahontas Times. A call to our cousin, Barbara (who owns the site) revealed she knew nothing about it! Your letter last year to Barbara Sharp Smith seemed innocent enough. You informed her of the need to drill for water. Even though the field had already been chosen as the site for your sewer treatment, you mentioned she might want to have a water well dug at no charge to her. If the site, for some reason, did not meet all the criteria for the placement of a sewer treatment plant, she would benefit from the water well dug for her at no expense. In your friendly and pleasant tone it seemed like you were doing her a favor. Retired, frightened and with family health issues, she felt this was the only way to eliminate the possibility of your taking away her hopes and dreams. You neglected to point out to her that, upon giving permission to enter her property for this purpose, the law allows you to re-enter her property at any time for a period of one year. (The requirement for a 3-day advance notice, if relevant, for each entry seems to have been ignored by you in each and every case) In that time you entered the Sharp's private property to conduct surveys, place markers and do other studies enabling you to obtain your permits...all without our knowledge or express permission. When the last recent team of Thrasher engineers were caught on the field they said they were there to measure the lowest point on the field for the effluent outflow pipe. When Barbara Sharp Smith was alerted to the fact that Thrasher was on her property without her knowledge, she called Thrasher. The man in charge told her "they are just doing some right of way work". Then, Mr. Michael, you called Ms. Smith to remind her of that lovely letter you wrote to her about the water well. You told her "we can enter at any time up to a year from the time you gave us permission to drill the water well" You referred her to the Law of Eminent Domain. It is odd that you did not refer her to this in your first 'oh so friendly' letter. The question begs, how can some sleep at night? The area surrounding the Sharp farm has not been evaluated for its wildlife habitat. An April 1, 2005 letter from the Division of Natural Resources, Wildlife Resources Section warns you that the Elk River crayfish (Cambarus Elkensis) is known only in West Virginia and that caves and springs are common in this area. "The Wildlife Resources Section knows of no surveys that have been conducted in the area for rare species habitat". Is this not the letter you have filed (with due diligence) under the pretense of 'checking off' the inquiry into rare and endangered species? This seems disingenuous of you, Tom Michael, as you are an 'environmentalist' and former director of the West Virginia Highlands Conservancy. A comprehensive study Environmental Impact Study (EIS) needs to be done!

...turn right at the first bridge on the way into Durbin, I was saddened to realize I was lost up on Cheat Mountain. I was told this meeting place was in a remote location, but this was beyond my wildest dreams. I was lost.

I finally made it to Durbin and, with the help of some local folk, found my way to the secluded and tiny meeting room outside the town of Durbin at the Durbin water plant. As I entered, I thought this an odd place to hold a public meeting. Should not public meetings be easily accessible and convenient to the citizens? Unfortunately, the meeting was over and all but 1 PSD member gone. Mr. Smith generously agreed to talk with me. In our conversation the subject of our earlier lack of participation was brought up. This issue has been addressed by you, earlier, in a letter to Congressman Nick Rahall as he asked you to address the concerns of the Sharp family. You told Mr. Rahall that "all of the legal requirements for notification were met".

At that time, in 2003, the steward of our family was Si Sharp. Si was a remarkable fellow, but he was 90 years old and did not spend much time scouring the legal ads of the Pocahontas Times. In it one day, he might have read a two-inch notice of a wastewater meeting. He was, according to all of you, expected to read this and assume he must go there to defend the taking of the Sharp farm. Why, oh why was it not possible for you to simply pick up the phone or write a letter to the landowners under consideration for this 'selection'. If it is not required by law, it should be. AND it would have been the moral and ethical thing to do. In a 2003 Pocahontas Times article about that meeting it was reported that 20 people attended and that the agreement was remarkable. The quote was that usually, in these meetings, people cannot even agree on what day of the week it is. The sewer project, in its preliminary form, was discussed without objection. Where were we? We had no idea! Snowshoe was there, you were there and the parties who had just recently sued the Snowshoe Sewer Authority were there. How could the Pocahontas County Public Service District members and the Pocahontas County Commission members agree on a project that might include taking our the Sharp farm knowing full well we were not there and did not know and could not 'defend' ourselves! Would you hold a birthday party and not invite the person you are 'honoring'? You are honoring the Sharps with your open sludge tanks. Where was our invitation to this party? And though the Pocahontas Times reports all were in agreement, NO VOTE WAS TAKEN. Mark Phillips of the PSD told me that the PSD has never specifically voted to put the sewer treatment plant on the Sharp farm. How can this be? Has there ever been a vote? Will there ever be a vote? The people have 'voted' with a petition to NOT STOP THE SEWER but to MOVE THE SEWER TREATMENT PLANT off the Sharp farm and away from the scenic highway to a more appropriate location. Some have described this petition as 'an army of supporters'. Hundreds and hundreds and hundreds (I could go on) have signed. You, and the government entities engaging you, are supposed to represent the people. The people are speaking. Are you listening?

Is it not odd that the three members of the PSD appointed by the Pocahontas County Commission are all from Durbin? Knowing that, it was not odd for me to learn that the PSD members NEVER visited the proposed sewer treatment site location nor the effluent release site. The deciders in this matter have relied on the information Thrasher and you have presented them. Our conversations with many of the parties involved reveal the sad fact that the full story has not been told.

Mr. Michael, more work needs to be done.

WILLIAM STEWART GUILTY

William Stewart, colored, will be executed on July 2nd, for murdering George T. Shires, Chief of Police. of Ronceverte, April 3rd, 1915.

Sentence was pronounced by Judge Dice, in the Greenbrier Circuit Court, at Lewisburg last Friday.

Stewart was was found guilty after a trial lasting all day Thursday and Friday. The jury was out less than an hour. This is the first time in half a century or more that the death penalty has been imposed by a Greenbrier County Jury.

On Wednesday morning Stewart was brought before the court to make a plea on the indictment. Upon being asked whether he was guilty or not guilty, his reply was "guilty." Judge Dice advised him that such a plea in this instance meant the extreme penalty; that he was entitled to and would receive a fair trial. The plea was then changed to not guilty, and the court appointed J. S. McWhorter and John W. Arbuckle to conduct the defense.

The entire list of jurors summoned for the term having been exhausted, twenty additional jurors had to be drawn before a jury could be secured.

The evidence was that Stewart had been bringing whiskey into the State and selling it; that on April 3rd, Chief of Police Shires, of Ronceverte, had confiscated a quantity of whiskey belonging to Stewart, and afterward arrested him. While under arrest Stewart drew a gun and shot Shires, killing him instantly. The State also showed that Stewart had said that he intended to kill the policemen if he attempted to arrest him.

AN OPEN LETTER

To The Qualified Voters of Greenbank District:

In this week's issue of the county papers the board of education of Greenbank district announces a proposed District High School for the district, to be located on the main road leading from Greenbank to Arbovale. The school officers of the district and the county superintendent have three reasons for this proposed location. First, that a proper site of sufficient size and character may be found here. Second, that more schools may be consolidated here than any other place in the district. Third, that in order to divide the district and get the school as near the center as possible.

From ten to fifteen schools may be consolidated here and wagons put on for transportation. In this way we are of the opinion that about six teachers doing Grade work and three or four teachers doing High School work may give the Common School graduates of the district a chance to get a good high school education and the six grade teachers do the work of from ten to fifteen rural teachers as it is now. In this way we hope to save the salary of enough teachers to pay for the transportation and the extra expense of the teachers of the high school.

An extra levy of 20 cents on the one hundred dollars will be necessary for a sufficient time to enable the board to raise a sufficient sum to enable them to build a ten-room building with an auditorium. This is estimated at from $25,000 to $30,000.

For my part I expect to be perfectly frank with the voters and taxpayers. This school will cost money, and this money for the building will have to come directly from the pockets of the people of the district. After the school is built we expect to get from the state each year not less than $600 and very likely $800 for the run-

GOOD ROAD DAYS

(From State Road Bureau)

On the twenty-third of April, Governor Hatfield issued his proclamation for the observance of Good Roads Days throughout West Virginia on May twentieth and twenty-first. This action simply carries out the plans of the Governor enacted last year when he conceived of the idea of using this method of road agitation. On these days every one will be able to acquaint himself with local needs and conditions and in this manner have brought home to him the importance of highway improvement.

As was the case last year, Chief Road Engineer, A. D. Williams and the State Road Bureau will have general supervision of the work all over West Virginia with that end in view the Bureau is perfecting, as rapidly as possible, an organization in every county of the state. The first move was to communicate with the county courts and have them appoint men in the various districts who will have charge of the work in each locality and in this way it is hoped that all efforts will be exercised in the proper direction and no work lost, owing to lack of efficiency.

Every citizen of the state should consider it a personal duty to see that these two days count. A great deal was done last year but this year we can and will do more. The value of the work should not be measured by the number of miles of highway constructed or improved but by the more general agitation that is created in the interest of better roads. Let every one during the remaining three weeks arrange his work so that on May 20 and 21 he can get out on the roads and show the people of other states that we are making an effort to "lift West Virginia out of the mud."

At the last legislature a bill passed requiring boards of education of districts not supporting a high school to pay the tuition of all Common School Graduates at some high school of the State. This you see makes it obligatory on the part of the board to pay about $2.50 per month per pupil for nine months or about $22.50 per graduate for one year and for four years $90.00. We had last year 43 graduates in the Greeenbank District and I think we have at least one hundred in the district now waiting for this advantage. At this rate the district will necsarialy pay out over two thousand dollars to some other district or county every year for the tuition of pupils. By the establishing of this proposed high school you may have your son or daughter at or near home and also keep the district's money at home and this school and advantage will be

Rowe denies suppression motion in Huntersville drug case

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Chief Judge James Rowe ruled Wednesday that evidence seized by officers while serving an arrest warrant in September on two Huntersville residents was "fair game" in the case of at least one of the defendants.

The evidence in question included 37 marijuana plants allegedly found by Pocahontas County Sheriff's Department deputies and State Police in the upstairs portion of the garage of the home of Linda L. Palko, age 34, and Harry Lynn Sasser, age 46.

In December, a grand jury indicted the two on charges of conspiracy to deliver controlled substances, delivery of marijuana and oxycodone and cultivation of marijuana.

At a suppression hearing that took place over two days, in early March, defense attorneys Eric Francis and Martin Saffer argued the search of the home and garage was illegal, as the warrant for Palko's arrest had already been executed when the officers found the marijuana.

State Police Sergeant J.P. Barlow testified he was among the first of about 10 officers to arrive at the home. When he and the other officers determined Palko was not in the house, Barlow said, he then left the scene.

As he exited the long driveway toward the main road, Barlow testified he encountered trance was made into the garage and that, therefore, the evidence found in the garage was inadmissible in her case.

At the hearing, Saffer and Francis also argued the search warrant was issued only after the evidence had been discovered.

"Can police officers rely upon an arrest warrant to enter a residence after the subject has been arrested, but before the fact of the arrest has been communicated to them?" Saffer asked in his motion.

"The rule in criminal cases is that a warrant, once executed, is exhausted," he concluded. "The life of the warrant does not depend upon notification or knowledge; it depends on its execution."

At the hearing, Saffer also raised questions about whether or not the door to the garage could have been unlocked with a laminated card. He contended officers used a key, found during a search of the house.

Francis filed a similar motion on behalf of Sasser. During the March hearing, Francis also argued the search of the garage after Palko's arrest was illegal and that the evidence should be suppressed.

Francis further argued the search warrant was issued on the basis of what officers had already found, and not the "noises" heard coming from the garage. A neutral magistrate, he said, would have likely not neys Eric Francis and Martin Saffer argued the search of the home and garage was illegal, as the warrant for Palko's arrest had already been executed when the officers found the marijuana.

State Police Sergeant J.P. Barlow testified he was among the first of about 10 officers to arrive at the home. When he and the other officers determined Palko was not in the house, Barlow said, he then left the scene.

As he exited the long driveway toward the main road, Barlow testified, he encountered Palko near the Huntersville Store, arrested her and transported her to Marlinton to be processed.

The other officers on the scene, unaware of the arrest that just taken place, continued to search the area around the house for Palko.

When their attention shifted to a nearby garage, according to a criminal complaint filed by Trooper F.H. Barlow, officers heard "radio play" coming from within the building.

Suspecting someone might be in the garage, Marlinton Police Chief Lee Tinney testified Deputy M.C. Doss slipped the lock on a door to the building using a laminated card.

Following the sound of the radio to the upstairs portion of the garage, officers discovered the plants and irrigation equipment.

A search warrant for the residence was obtained that afternoon and brought to the scene by Sheriff Bob Alkire and deputy Robert Alkire, II, they testified.

In his motion filed on Palko's behalf, Saffer argued she had been apprehended before officers used a key, found during a search of the house.

Francis filed a similar motion on behalf of Sasser. During the March hearing, Francis also argued the search of the garage after Palko's arrest was illegal and that the evidence should be suppressed.

Francis further argued the search warrant was issued on the basis of what officers had already found, and not the "noises" heard coming from the garage. A neutral magistrate, he said, would have likely not granted a warrant "based on several officers hearing noises."

"One person's technicality is another's Constitutional right," Francis added. "If we look at it as though the ends justify the means, then everybody gets to go to jail."

Francis also contended that Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford made himself a witness to the incident by having radio contact with the officers at the scene.

Weiford countered he was only consulted by the officers on the scene regarding the legality of entering the house. The officers at the scene "had reason to believe subjects were inside" and therefore had reasonable grounds to enter the home and garage.

In addition to the warrant for Palko's arrest, officers also had a warrant in hand for Sasser, who was not found during the day in question, he added.

On March 30, Rowe ruled the evidence was admissible in the state's case against Sasser.

A ruling on the evidence applying to Palko's case will be issued during a status hearing April 15.

Commission raises tax levy rate
Alderman prepared to challenge action

Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

While the county commission proceeded with raising the tax levy rate, a former commissioner says he is prepared to challenge the action and ask a three-judge panel to remove them from office.

Norman Alderman, a commissioner from 1989-1994, said Monday he was "preparing documents" for the panel to request the removal of commissioners Joel Callison, Reta Griffith and James Carpenter.

"We'll overturn the tax thing, too," Alderman said.

Alderman, who, according to figures in the assessor's office will see a $322 property tax decrease, said he would have 24 signatures calling for the tax levy increase to be reversed.

Although the commission advertised the April 1 hearing properly, according to a spokesperson for the State Auditor's Office, and the West Virginia Legislature passed a bill extending the Pocahontas County Commission's levying period, Alderman said the commission had never voted for the extension.

"They haven't invoked the law," he said. "[The commission] never voted for an extension.

"They've fallen on their sword."

Alderman threatened the commission with removal action Friday at a hearing held to hear public comment.

"Why doesn't common sense reign here?" Alderman queried. "Look, let's take our three percent and run. Don't go for the nine percent. It's just too much. And I hope you'll take this in mind. Because we are talking about a removable action if you defy the State of West Virginia, if you defy the voters of Pocahontas County.

"You'll be facing three judges your next opportunity."

Alderman said that in spite of House Bill 3347, which extended the commission's levying period to May 2, the action was not legal because the governor had not signed the bill as of Friday.

sions, one in the mid-1990s to remove county commissioner Dana Moyers from office and Ralph Beckwith from his voluntary post as president of the Pocahontas Development Authority and the other, three years ago, sought the removal of three board of education members, Kenneth Vance, Ruth Taylor and Kermit Friel.

Moyers and Beckwith remained in their posts until both later resigned for other reasons.

The panel did remove Vance and Friel from the BOE; however, both resigned from their positions as deputy assessor and public service district board member, respectively, and were returned to their seats after one meeting.

Friel later resigned to run for county commission. Vance is the board's current president.

Alderman lost his re-election bid to Callison in 1994. He will not say if he plans to challenge Callison for the southern district seat next year.

Besides Alderman, former county commission candidate John Leyzorek spoke against the increase.

Leyzorek told the commission it was not in compliance with state law, particularly since HB 3347 had not been passed by both houses until Monday, the deadline for budget proposals to be at the State Auditor's office.

"So you can't go through a legal notification process for an action which is illegal under the law, hoping that it will later become legal because notification is part and parcel of the action," Leyzorek said.

He also questioned the rise in the cost of the Regional Jail line item when $400,000 budgeted for the Pocahontas County Jail was slated for the "com center" in the new budget.

"That's 9-1-1," Griffith said.

"I don't care what you call it," Leyzorek interrupted.

"I'm just explaining it to the [illegible] the room," she continued.

[illegible] would agree is not the best. Mr. Alderman has complained about it many times. Dispatch-

"The federal government doesn't do that," Johnson said, "they take the popular way of cutting taxes, keeping or increasing spending and throwing it on the next generation."

He said he encouraged the commission to continue in spite of people "who seem to take pleasure in just throwing monkey wrenches into government."

"I like government to work. I like to see people trust," he said. "I like to see citizens get behind government."

The spirit of the law had been fulfilled, Johnson noted, because people had attended the meeting.

Marlinton resident Louise Barnisky also spoke to the commission in favor of the levy rate increase.

"I feel like we should all pay our fair share," she said.

Grace Mynuk, also of Marlinton, said she opposed the levy rate increase because senior citizens would be adversely affected.

Alderman threatened the commission with removal action Friday at a hearing held to hear public comment.

"Why doesn't common sense reign here?" Alderman queried. Look, let's take our three percent and run. Don't go for the nine percent. It's just too much. And I hope you'll take this in mind. Because we are talking about a removable action if you defy the State of West Virginia, if you defy the voters of Pocahontas County.

"You'll be facing three judges your next opportunity."

Alderman said that in spite of House Bill 3347, which gave the commission authority to extend the levying period past May 2, the action was not legal because the governor had not signed the bill as of Friday morning.

Governor Joe Manchin siged the bill sometime Friday, according to the state's website. The bill was effective from passage once Manchin signed it.

Further, the erstwhile commissioner said, the hearing was in violation of the Open Metings Act. Alderman contented that none of the notices had been proper and that the commission, by virtue of HB 3347, had time to act and could do so properly.

"I get no satisfaction out of being right, except the advantage of knowing that this is illegal," Alderman said.

Commissioners said they are seeking a nine percent increase in tax revenues, or about $175,000. The revenues will offset a nearly $243,000 decrease in Payment In Lieu of Taxes (PILT) and the added expense of the Regional Jail which should open its doors in July.

The increase in revenues means an average 3.21% property tax increase, commissioners said.

Commissioners sought advice from Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford before voting on the proposed levy rate and sending a copy to the State Auditor's Office in Charleston.

"I don't think the rules of statute interpretation require a recitation interpretation," Weiford said.

The prosecutor said the legislature had ratified what the county commission had done in the past.

"It takes 10 people to man that office over there with two people per shift," Carpenter said. "We're required to have two people per shift. If you take those 10 people, even at the very low wages that we pay, and calculate it out how much is in that line item is for salaries alone."

Carpenter vowed to keep the 9-1-1 center operating and fully-staffed.

The levy rate increase did have two proponents at the hearing Friday.

Pocahontas County Free Libraries Director Allen Johnson said he was "okay with the general idea of property taxes."

Johnson said he wanted to commend the commission for being concerned about its finances. "When revenue needs to be spent, we need to raise it" before the deadline for budget proposals to be at the State Auditor's office.

"So you can't go through a legal notification process for an action which is illegal under the law, hoping that it will later become legal because notification is part and parcel of the action," Leyzorek said.

He also questioned the rise in the cost of the Regional Jail line item when $400,000 budgeted for the Pocahontas County Jail was slated for the "com center" in the new budget.

"That's 9-1-1," Griffith said.

"I don't care what you call it," Leyzorek interrupted.

"I'm just explaining it to the others in the room," she continued. "Right now we have a system which I'm sure everyone would agree is not the best. Mr. Alderman has complained about it many times. Dispatchers are also correctional officers. The $400,000 is to pay those salaries and keep that going. They are doing double duty."

But Leyzorek countered the explanation.

"If they are only doing single duty, they ought to be able to do it for half the price," he said.

Griffith said the 9-1-1 center would be able to pick up calls from Snowshoe, which had not been done in the past.

"It takes 10 people to man that office over there with two people per shift," Carpenter said. "We're required to have two people per shift. If you take those 10 people, even at the very low wages that we pay, and calculate it out how much is in that line item is for salaries alone."

"One person's technicality is another's Constitutional right," Francis added. "If we look at it as though the ends justify the means, then everybody gets to go to jail."

Francis also contended that Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford made himself a witness to the incident by having radio contact with the officers at the scene.

Weiford countered he was only consulted by the officers on the scene regarding the legality of entering the house. The officers at the scene "had reason to believe subjects were inside" and therefore had reasonable grounds to enter the home and garage.

In addition to the warrant for Palko's arrest, officers also had a warrant in hand for Sasser, who was not found during the day in question, he added.

On March 30, Rowe ruled the evidence was admissible in the state's case against Sasser.

Governor Joe Manchin signed the bill sometime Friday, according to the state's website. The bill was effective from passage once Manchin signed it.

Further, the erstwhile commissioner said, the hearing was in violation of the Open Meetings Act. Alderman contended that none of the notices had been proper and that the commission, by virtue of HB 334, had time to act and could do so properly.

"I get no satisfaction out of being right, except the advantage of knowing that this is illegal," Alderman said.

Commissioners said they are seeking a nine percent increase in tax revenues, or about $175,000. The revenues will offset a nearly $243,000 decrease in Payment In Lieu of Taxes (PILT) and the added expense of the Regional Jail which should open its doors in July.

The increase in revenues means an average 3.21% property tax increase, commissioners said.

Commissioners sought advice from Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford before voting on the proposed levy rate and sending a copy to the State Auditor's Office in Charleston.

"I don't think the rules of statute interpretation require a ridiculous interpretation," Weiford said.

The prosecutor said the legislature had ratified what the county commission was doing.

"[The commission] implied they had endeavored to extend the levying period by scheduling the hearing April 1," Weiford said.

Griffith said the 9-1-1 center would be able to pick up calls from Snowshoe, which had not been done in the past.

"It takes 10 people to man that office over there with two people per shift," Carpenter said. "We're required to have two people per shift. If you take those 10 people, even at the very low wages that we pay, and calculate it out how much is in that line item is for salaries alone."

Carpenter vowed to keep the 9-1-1 center operating and fully-staffed.

The levy rate increase did have two proponents at the hearing Friday.

Pocahontas County Free Libraries Director Allen Johnson said he was "okay with the general idea of property taxes."

Johnson said he wanted to commend the commission for being concerned about its finances. "When revenue needs to be spent, we need to raise low testified, he encountered Palko near the Huntersville Store, arrested her and transported her to Marlinton to be processed.

The other officers on the scene, unaware of the arrest that just taken place, continued to search the area around the house for Palko.

When their attention shifted to a nearby garage, according to a criminal complaint filed by Trooper F.H. Barlow, officers heard "radio play" coming from within the building.

Suspecting someone might be in the garage, Marlinton Police Chief Lee Tinney testified Deputy M.C. Doss slipped the lock on a door to the building using a laminated card.

Following the sound of the radio to the upstairs portion of the garage, officers discovered the plants and irrigation equipment.

A search warrant for the residence was obtained that afternoon and brought to the scene by Sheriff Bob Alkire and deputy Robert Alkire, II, they testified.

In his motion filed on Palko's behalf, Saffer argued she had been apprehended before en-granted a warrant "based on several officers hearing noises."

Observatory

For the past year the Army Engineering Corps has maintained an office in Marlinton while they worked on mapping, evaluating and securing the land for the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Green Bank. This office, located in the W. W. Goddin building was closed last week, their work having been practically completed.

As soon as the weather permits, building will begin at Green Bank. A contract for the control building for the eighty-five foot telescope has been given to the Ivy Construction Company, of Charlottesville, Virginia. They are expected to start work shortly.

The eighty-five foot telescope itself is under contract to Blaw-Knox Company, of Pittsburgh, and it will be started after the weather improves. This is scheduled to be in operation this year.

A contract for the 140-foot telescope is being negotiated at the present time.

Pocahontas Woods is potential target for lawsuit

Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

Accusations of misappropriation of funds and coverups met a reticent county commission Tuesday.

None of the three elected officials answered Norman Alderman's charges that Pocahontas Woods, a private, non-profit corporation which receives federal money, had misappropriated funds by approving members of its board to be paid from its income.

Further, Alderman alleged that Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford was allowing the commission this particular wrongdoing because it, in turn, allowed him to smoke in the court house.

The commission voted to make the court house a non-smoking building in April, 2004.

Alderman, a former commissioner, said Pocahontas Woods board members Gibbs Kinderman, John Friel and perhaps Duane Gibson were compensated from the non-profit's funds, although he did not specify an amount of money or precisely what Kinderman, Friel and Gibson were doing on behalf of Pocahontas Woods.

He also asserted that the commission had not received an accounting from Pocahontas Woods, and therefore was not aware of its expenditures.

"I would seriously doubt if any of you even know what's going on with Pocahontas Woods," he claimed.

"The three main things that stand out is the fact that they are illegally receiving the money," Alderman said. "You cannot appropriate money to this corporation."

Second, the commission has not received the full accounting, Alderman said, and third, Pocahontas Woods has not presented an annual audit.

"We've got a little slide-around going on here," Alderman continued.

The state sends the money to the county commission and the commission is supposed to appropriate the money to Pocahontas Woods on an expenditure basis, he said.

"What you're doing wrong is you're just simply giving them the whole wad," he said.

Alderman was relying on a West Virginia law that pertains to museums and parks.

"There are consequences to this," he warned, "and I'm concerned about that. I don't really expect that you're going to do anything with this."

He compared the alleged neglect to letting Weiford smoke in his office.

"You passed a resolution, but you won't enforce it," he said. "I'm asking you to enforce it."

County commissioner James Carpenter asked if the smoking resolution was on the agenda.

"It would seem to me that you guys work under a principle that if you leave Weiford alone, that he'll leave you alone," Alderman charged.

He asked the commission to "notice how that was connected—smoking and Title III money. It kind of fits together in the purpose there."

"I'm asking you to do your jobs," he said. "I'm asking that if you're going to have no smoking in the courthouse, you make the prosecuting attorney not smoke."

Alderman said it was their last opportunity to speak to him before going to court.

"You have an opportunity to get this money back, and I want to see this money back," he said.

After the commission would not comment on his accusations, Alderman said they were personally liable for the funds if Pocahontas Woods spent them.

The commission adjourned for the day.

Previously, the commission heard from Sheriff Robert Alkire, who sought to clear up a potential personnel problem in his budget.

Even after the Tygart Valley Regional Jail opens in July, Pocahontas County will still have to maintain two holding cells, one for male prisoners, and the other for females, the

DIED

On Friday morning June 8, 1928, the death angel visited the Pocahontas Memorial Hospital and claimed for its victim John Wesley Kennison who had been in bad health for some time. John Wesley Kennison was born October 15, 1860. His age was 78 years, 7 months and 24 days. He was married Dec. 14, 1888 to Miss Allie Hill, daughter of George Hill of Fall Springs. To this union four children were born, namely, Mrs Edwin Bruffey, Mrs. Roy Bruffey Guy and Charley, who died several years ago. Mr. Kennison was the son of John R and Ida Morrison Kennison who preceded him to the grave several years ago. He leaves to mourn a host of relatives and friends. Mr. Kennison was a member of the Methodist Church, South. He had not been able for some time to attend church, but never the less his thoughts were on Christ. The writer if we live as we should, we can meet him over there. The funeral service was held at the home on June 10 by Rev. Harrison and Rev. S. R. Neel Burial at the McNeil cemetery. Durbin Town Council may accept sewer aid

Jason Bauserman
Contributing Writer

Even though Durbin Town Council took no action Monday night, members sounded as if they were very favorable to accepting an offer of free technical help to address problems plaguing the sewage treatment plant.

Rob Stull, representing the Canaan Valley Institute, of Thomas, addressed the council with an extensive report.

Stull said he was contacted by the Upper Pocahontas Community Cooperative, a nonprofit organization working for the betterment of northern Pocahontas County, last summer.

West Virginia University engineers representing the Technical Advisory Program have already checked Durbin's sewage system, according to Stull. Priorities were separating fresh water from the system and flood-proofing the lagoon.

Stull said he felt separating the fresh water should be the first priority. He proposed a smoke test to be pumped into the piping system to determine open areas where fresh water could enter. The West Virginia Rural Water Association would train local volunteers to do the testing, he said.

Mayor Mike Vance said informing residents, particularly the elderly, of smoke hazards is a big concern. Councilman John Riffe said EMTs should be assembled and ready to go. Stull concurred that public awareness was very important.

Stull said a reduction in rainwater in the system would cut down on its costs.

"If 125,000 gallons a day is processed," observed Stull, "that's a huge amount for a town of this size."

Stull said working with UPCC and volunteers would be the cheapest way to go. In the assessment phase, the town can advertise to contractors exactly what needs to be done, he continued.

Vance said Jay Armentrout from the State Fire Marshal's Office showed up unannounced March 23 to inspect the town building.

The town was cited for "cosmetic work," the mayor said. The roof is leaking, steps need attention, rewiring, patching the chimney with concrete and a drywall fire barrier in the garage were all on the to-do list, he said.

Further, propane gas was recommended as the only heat source, he said.

Vance said he would call State Senator Walt Helmick to request Budget Digest Money to help pay for the roof.

As for inquiries about the mayor's and council members' pay if they miss a meeting, Vance said he has donated as many as 79 hours to the town in the past month. Council members agreed that they get telephone calls and work on emergency projects outside their meeting times.

A sealed bid was opened by the mayor on the 1987 Ford Truck. Shawn DeHaven's bid of $300 was accepted by the council.

Mark Smith of the Beautification Committee said more than $280 was collected in cans and Easter baskets. With that money, Smith said, six more wooden trash cans and flower boxes can be built. Varner Construction began on the Rail-to-Trail to Widney Park, he said.

Council had much discussion about children and adults riding on ATVs, go-carts, motorcycles and skateboards.

Recorder Francine Lambert said absentee ballots must be in between May 3 and June 8. Anyone wishing to run as a write-in candidate must file no-

High Rocks girls take college trip

This fall, six High Rocks girls piled into a van and headed out for a college adventure. Unlike past High Rocks college trips where girls visit many colleges in a few days, this trip focused on Berea, a Kentucky school that awards full tuition scholarships to all admitted students.

High Rocks is a community nonprofit organization which provides academic enrichment, college preparation, community service opportunities, and leadership development activities for girls ages 13-18 in Pocahontas, Nicholas and Greenbrier Counties. Two girls from each county attended this trip: Samantha Artrip and Bunnie Robinson, from Nicholas County; April Rose and Renae Anderson, from Pocahontas County; and Haley Cornwell and Andrea Moore from Greenbrier County.

The girls attended classes, stayed in dorms with Berea students and met with admission recruiters to explain why their participation in High Rocks would make them a good match

"Two bell towers that touch the sky, a campus in a small town and a great education for such a small price. What is this place that sounds like heaven? It is Berea College. I went with the High Rocks for a visit. We attended a women's studies class and a dance class. We watched an amateur rap battle and a few of us went and watched a play. The last night we were there, we watched a homecoming beauty pageant. Berea College provides full tuition for all those who apply and are accepted. Now I know what college I want to go to thanks to the High Rocks. I learned so much and am thrilled that I got a chance to experience that amazing place. It was a true highlight in my life that I will never forget."

The High Rocks is currently planning a spring college trip for juniors and seniors in the program. This trip will be focused on multiple schools, giving girls a chance to see the variety of college experiences available.

High Rocks is free of charge to all participants. We take applications for new girls each spring. If you or someone you know is interested, call High Rocks at 304-653-4891; we'd be happy to send you an application and answer any of your questions! POTATO CONFERENCE

The potato field day and conference for Pocahontas has been scheduled for July 21st, Saturday at Hillsboro. It will be an all-day meeting. A field trip in the morning and a conference in the afternoon. The morning will be spent at the farm of Harry Harper. There will be a demonstration of a Bean Power Sprayer in operation for the morning. Mr. Harper has sprayed his potatoes twice. This will make the third spray. The first spray was a 5-5--50 Bordeaux mixture. The second was a bordeaux mixture and arsenate of lead mixture, using 2 lbs. of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. The third spray will be a bordeaux mixture.

The afternoon will be devoted to a potato conference and a round table discussion of the potato problems. Pocahontas farmers should be interested in this meeting and should plan to be present. Frank Harper will be in charge of the program for the day.

Jury acquits White

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

It took jurors less than half an hour to deliver a verdict declaring Michael Cordell White, of Durbin, not guilty of malicious assault March 9.

The brief deliberations characterized the pace of the day's trial.

In question were the events of an evening in April, 2003. The victim, Joshua M.D. Smith, his father, Michael D. Smith and friend Bradley "Buckwheat" McDaniels were working on the younger Smith's motorcycle at the home of Ellen Morrison, White's mother and the victim's grandmother, in Frank, according to a statement given by the elder Smith to State Trooper W.A. Pendleton.

White arrived at his mother's house between 7:30 and 8 p.m., the criminal complaint continued, and allegedly started threatening the Smiths and McDaniels with an ax handle. After swinging first at McDaniels, White hit the younger Smith, his nephew, repeatedly, the complaint alleged.

A physician at Davis Memorial Hospital, in Elkins, informed Pendleton the victim suffered a fractured hand and bruises on his chest and elbow, the complaint said.

ax handle, breaking his arm, injuring his hand and bruising his chest.

Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford showed the jury photos of the bruised and bandaged younger Smith taken after he returned from the hospital.

He has since undergone surgery on his hand and wrist to cut damaged nerves, he testified.

White himself admitted he struck his nephew with the ax handle, but said he did so in self defense only after the younger Smith pulled a knife on White and the father picked up a 12-inch pipe wrench, telling his son to "get him."

The Smiths and McDaniels denied that the younger Smith ever had a knife that evening.

The detail of the pipe wrench or any other weapons was unclear, however.

The elder Smith and McDaniels testified that nobody but White had anything in hand.

The younger Smith, on the other hand, testified his father picked up a ball peen hammer during the assault but put it

The following August, a grand jury indicted White on one count of "malicious" assault. Subsequently, White failed to appear for his arraignment but was taken into custody by Pendleton a year later.

White was arraigned on the charge last August.

Nearly two years after the alleged assault, the jury found itself sifting through several inconsistencies in the testimony they heard Wednesday.

Testifying for the state, the victim, his father and McDaniels each recounted that evening in April 2002 when White arrived.

Each testified they were loading the victim's motorcycle into the back of his truck when White came the house, ax handle allegedly in hand.

While the three testified White was "cussing" at them, they could not recall any details as to why he was upset.

The last of three Hillsboro defendants indicted on drug trafficking charges last April entered a plea of guilty Tuesday afternoon.

Lisa K. Brewer, 31, of Hillsboro, pleaded guilty to delivery of a Schedule II controlled substance (oxycodone), while a related conspiracy charge was dismissed.

Brewer, Melissa A. Wimer, age 35, and Gerald R. Kerns, age 60, were arrested by Pocahontas County Sheriff's deputies after allegedly delivering the prescription painkiller to a confidential informant February 2004.

Wimer pleaded guilty to conspiracy and delivery charges last July.

Charges against Kerns were thrown out after a search warrant served on his home was found to be invalid. The search warrant obtained by a deputy contained the wrong address.

The following August, a grand jury indicted White on one count of malicious assault. Subsequently, White failed to appear for his arraignment but was taken into custody by Pendleton a year later.

White was arraigned on the charge last August.

Nearly two years after the alleged assault, the jury found itself sifting through several inconsistencies in the testimony they heard Wednesday.

Testifying for the state, the victim, his father and McDaniels each recounted that evening in April 2002 when White arrived.

Each testified they were loading the victim's motorcycle into the back of his truck when White came the house, ax handle allegedly in hand.

While the three testified White was "cussing" at them, they could not recall any details as to why he was upset.

Taking the stand in his own defense, White claimed he found the three smoking marijuana and confronted them about it.

All three denied the accusation.

"He was just cussing and carrying on," the victim's father said. "The next thing we knew, Mike was beating on [the victim]."

The younger Smith testified White said he was going to "split his head open," before hitting him three times with the guilty to drug delivery

The last of three Hillsboro defendants indicted on drug trafficking charges last April entered a plea of guilty Tuesday afternoon.

Lisa K. Brewer, 31, of Hillsboro, pleaded guilty to delivery of a Schedule II controlled substance (oxycodone), while a related conspiracy charge was dismissed.

Brewer, Melissa A. Wimer, age 35, and Gerald R. Kerns, age 60, were arrested by Pocahontas County Sheriff's deputies after allegedly delivering the prescription painkiller to a confidential informant February 2004.

Wimer pleaded guilty to conspiracy and delivery charges last July.

Charges against Kerns were thrown out after a search warrant served on his home was found to be invalid. The search warrant obtained by a deputy contained the wrong address.

The evidence seized in the search of Kerns' home– nearly $30,000 in cash, two guns and several types of drugs– was suppressed in a ruling by Circuit Judge James Rowe last August, crippling any case the state may have had against Kerns.

After Brewer's plea Tuesday, she could face a one- to 15-year prison sentence and a fine of up to $25,000.

Sentencing was scheduled for May 27.

Commission to have public hearing on tax increase

Pamela Pritt
Managing Editor

Faced with the double-whammy of an increase in the cost of housing prisoners once the Norton Regional Jail opens in July and the reduction in Payment In Lieu of Taxes (PILT) by more than half, the Pocahontas County Commission voted to raise tax revenues by nine percent.

County Commissioner Reta Griffith said that after six days of working on the county's 2005-2006 budget, the limits were apparent.

"We kept coming up short," she said.

Griffith noted that the increase adds only an additional $165,000 to the revenue side of the budget.

Although nine percent sounds like a hefty increase, commissioners were quick to say that did not translate to a nine percent increase for individuals.

Taxes will increase 11¢ per $100 of value for each property class.

Furthermore, according to Commissioner James Carpenter, some people's taxes will actually go down due to depreciation.

"Very little changes in real property," Carpenter said. "Taxes combined (real and personal) may go up 3.21% on average."

PILT, which is a government payment for the land it owns in the county, will be reduced from $430,000 to $243,000, nearly

The commission will hold a hearing March 25 at 9 a.m. at the court house and will make a decision on the tax increase after 9:30 a.m. that same day.

Tom Shipley, the current manager of Sharp's Country Store and Bed and Breakfast, pleaded with the commission to revisit locating the proposed Slaty Fork sewage treatment plant near his business concerns.

"I'm trying to save our heritage," Shipley explained. Toward that end, he showed the commission pictures of the store and of wool being taken to the market in the late 1800s.

Shipley also presented a letter from U. S. Senator Robert C. Byrd (D-WV) which offered some aid in the form of directing local officials aid in finding grant or loan money for the project.

Otherwise, Byrd's letter said he was reluctant to become involved in local matters, lest it be seen as political pressure.

But Shipley's most emotional appeal was the proximity of the sewage treatment facility to his family's cemetery.

In addition, he told commissioners, a family member, a child, had been buried in the field where the sewage treatment plant would be located. Later, Shipley said, another family member, a Civil War soldier, had been buried in the field, as Divers Sharp, and two sons, Cecil and Oris, of Laurel Creek, were arrested by officers Friday on a charge of owning and operating a still. They were brought before Justice of the Peace T. S. McNeel Saturday, and in default of $1,000 each was held in the county jail for the action of the grand jury at the October term of circuit court.

Harry Nelson, Minnehaha Springs, was arrested Sunday, June 2nd, charged with possession and transportation of liquor. He was held for federal court at Bluefield.

William Cochran, of Douthard's Creek, was arrested by the Marlinton detachment state police on May 31, charged with owning and operating a still. In default of $5,000 bond he was held for the action of the grand jury at the June term of federal court, Bluefield.

PILT, which is a government payment for the land it owns in the county, will be reduced from $430,000 to $243,000, nearly 50%. PILT did not fare well in the proposed federal budget, with decreases to local entities all over the nation.

Griffith said she'd work very hard to have Congress restore PILT payments to at least current levels, which is not even full authorization. Congress has never fully funded the authorized apporpriation.

"We're still not getting what I feel the county is entitled to," she continued.

Depreciation of mobile homes caused another .04% decrease in revenues, Carpenter said.

The proposed $4.7 million budget has no contingency funds for the commission and is "bare bones," according to commissioners.

"[Contingency funds are] what we use to bail out departments in the red," Griffith explained.

Moreover, Shipley said three Native American graves are in the field.

Shipley said the archeological study done of the field was superficial and should be redone.

"I'll show them the three Indians, the Civil War soldiers, the oldest existing country store and the 1912 farmhouse and the cabin where Robert E. Lee ate dinner," he said. "Those are all listed as 'buildings.'"

Shipley said he has contacted Susan Pierce, Director/Deputy of Historic Preservation, and she was "concerned that many artifacts, archeological and historical, had been overlooked."

Pierce has directed Thrasher Engineering to hire Big Blue Archeological Research to look at the field again, he said. Big Blue is to inventory the log house, the store and any other structure older than 50 years within view of the treatment plant, and to make a determination of the effect of the project on the structures, Shipley said.

Alienists Observe Theodore Carr

Examination Made at Request of Governor; No Report Yet Given Out

Two alienists visited the death house at the state penitentiary, Moundsville, yesterday to observe Theodore Carr, condemned to hang Friday night. They were Dr. L. W. Guthrie of Huntington, and Dr. J. G. Pettitt, of Terra Alta, who went at the request of Governor William G. Conley. They are expected to report today or tomorrow on the prisoner's mental condition. A petition for clemency is pending before the governor.

Acccording to a dispatch in a Wheeling newspaper, since entering the death house Friday night, Carr's condition has appeared to grow worse. He is broken both physically and mentally, and moans and weeps day and night. He scarcely touches his food. Lately, the dispatch says, he has been complaining of a pain in the back of his head. Should he continue to lose strength, prison officials fear it may be necessary to carry him to the scaffold.

The proposed $4.7 million budget has no contingency funds for the commission and is "bare bones," according to commissioners.

"[Contingency funds are] what we use to bail out departments in the red," Griffith explained.

But the big unknown is the Regional Jail, for which the county commission has budgeted $250,000.

On Tuesday, the Pocahontas County Jail had 17 inmates and another six were housed at the Southern Regional Jail. Another six are at Anthony's Creek for evaluation.

That translates into $1,115.50 per day or more than $407,000 annually.

The jail's capacity is 25, including a trusty.

Senate Majority Leader Truman Chafin told the Associated Press Monday that legislators have plans to introduce a bill to alleviate costs to counties by making convicted criminals pay an additional $30 fee. According to Chafin that measure would relieve 12% of the counties' burden, the AP reported.

The commission has raised revenues three percent each year, the maximum allowable amount, without a public hearing. That three percent is included in the nine percent increase.

Also, the research firm is to have Shipley locate the archeological site and unmarked burials to determine the proximity to the facility site, he continued.

In the end, Shipley summed up bluntly. "It's just a stupid place to put it—by a highway where everyone can see it," he said.

Griffith said she had relatives in the cemetery herself and, while she had not been there in several years, remembered trees all around it so that the sewage treatment plant could not be seen from there.

Shipley left the meeting abruptly.

After his exit, Griffith said the project was not eligible for any grants because of the average income level in the Slaty Fork/Snowshoe area. Available loans are already in the financing package, Griffith said.

Letters to the Editor

An open letter to the West Virginia Public Service Commission:

Before 1996, the Upper Greenbrier Public Service District existed to serve the towns of Durbin, Frank and Bartow. At that time, the Pocahontas County Commission began the process which is now exciting such concern by proposing the expansion of that District to cover all of Pocahontas County.

I opposed the expansion. The commission gave no good or consistent reason for it. I said that a Public Service District has powers dangerous to lives and property, and that it should not be expanded without clear and specific need. I explained how any legitimate convenience or economy for the separate Districts serving the widely-separated built-up areas of the county could be realized without placing all under a new, more powerful and less accountable bureaucratic umbrella.

I also pointed out that it was against the law, WV Code 16-13A-2f, which is apparently intended to prevent just such shenanigans as have progressed from plan almost to reality in the nine years since then.

Oh, yes, I also warned that the expansion was planned to provide a public (read "our money") subsidy for development around Snowshoe.

But the county commission and the Public Service Commission saw no reason to listen to the objections of the people, which greatly outnumbered the favorable comments, nor in protecting Pocahontas County from expanding bureaucracy nor from development of a type that threatens to destroy what is most precious about it, nor in explaining their real motives (I had done that for them), nor Sharps' land to save the day; now the taxpayers of the state and particularly the long-time residents of the Slaty Fork area will be fleeced to build a plant for Snowshoe and all the speculators and land developers, which, having knocked us down financially will walk on us by destroying our historic and bucolic community with high-intensity development (which we'll be helping pay for).

This is "the future" that [Joel] Callison and [James] Carpenter are so proud to be buying for us, if I may repeat myself, with our money and with our way of life.

The commission's argument that the plant is needed to protect the environment is nonsense. Existing regulations governing Snowshoe's existing plant, if certain agencies would do their jobs and enforce them, would do that job as far as existing development on "the mountain" goes.

And existing laws preventing construction of septic systems in geologically unsuitable areas have been protecting the rest of the area from pollution, and from development, and can perfectly well continue doing so.

Even if a new regional sewer plant were 100% efficient 100% of the time, incidental pollution from a huge new suburb of roads, cars, lawns and lawn mowers and lawn chemicals and eroding construction sites would create environmental problems vastly more than the area has now.

To sum up:

The Public Service District planning the new plant is not legally formed.

Local need and demand for the plant is not there.

Projected costs are insupportable.

Public subsidy for Snowshoe and surrounding speculators/ developers is unjustifiable robbery of the tax- and rate-payers to line the pockets of a few. If they want to turn their land into money, let them invest their own resources like any legitimate business.

I hereby request intervener status in this matter, which I understand is styled Case number 05-0103-PSD-CN.

I also request that the Public Service Commission order public hearings on this matter.

Sincerely,
John M. Leyzorek

Do we now all see clearly where it was all going?

I almost have to admire the working out of the plan, going on 10-years-old. The developers and land speculators in the area, masquerading as environmentalists and using some real ones for their own ends, blocked Snowshoe's effort to build their own plant on their own land with their own money to serve their own development.

Cathy Grimes not only can help, she has a business in Durbin. Bill and Cathy are moving into a house in Durbin in just a few weeks. They will also qualify to vote in Durbin during the election. My suggestion to who ever has a problem is to grow up.

Not one person has said they will help me. Not one person filed to run for recorder. No one wants this job, but everyone wants to do my job because they think I am not doing a good job.

Please, if you want the job, step up to the plate and take a swing. You will see what the recorder really has to put up with.

Oops. I forgot. I am not a native of Pocahontas County or from West Virginia. That makes me the bad guy. Looks to me like your bad guys were born and bred right here. I have options just like everyone else, but mine are bad. It is ok. If I am such a bad person when I leave this world I know I will be meeting up with some of these same people and the war of words can then move to purgatory.

I want to thank Cathy and Jennifer for their help and support. I also want to state that during this next town election, my wish is that everyone qualified to vote takes a good hard look at the ballot. We don't need people who harass, back stab, or threaten citizens into doing what persons want them to do. You, as citizens, get who you vote for. Maybe we will have a town or perhaps we should just go unincorporated.

Francine Lambert

Shavers Fork Fire & Rescue receives $207,000 for new firefighting vehicle

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Senator Jay Rockefeller (D-WV) and U.S. Representative Nick Rahall (D-WV) announced that Shavers Fork Fire and Rescue would receive $207,000 for a new firefighting vehicle, in media releases dated March 9.

"I am pleased to see the Shavers Fork Fire and Rescue awarded these funds," Rockefeller said in the release from his office.

The funding comes from the U.S. Federal Emergency Management Agency. FEMA plans to distribute a total of $750 million in Assistance to Firefighters grants to support fire protection, vehicle purchase, and safety and prevention programs, according to the release.

More than 20,000 fire departments applied for assistance in one of three different programs: fire operations and firefighter safety, fire prevention, and firefighting vehicles, the release continued.

Shavers Fork Fire and Rescue was one of five fire departments in West Virginia awarded one of the FEMA grants and received the largest share of the $724,816 awarded in the state.

"Our firefighters face a whole host of life-threatening circumstances when they are called to action," Rahall said in the release. "These brave men and women protect our communities from fires and also help in many other situations. Being ready and capable of handling these situations helps get them safely back to their homes and their families."

The grant awarded to Shavers Fork Fire and Rescue will be used specifically to purchase a 500-gallon wildfire pumper that meets U.S. Forest Service standards for such equipment, according to Shavers Fork Fire Chief Shannon Boehmer.

"Our current pumper is built mainly for city conditions," he said, adding that the new vehicle will have the capability to safely and reliably access dirt roads and snowcovered roads encountered by the department when accessing some of the more remote developments and homes on and around Snowshoe Mountain.

Boehmer said he anticipates having the money from FEMA in hand in two to three weeks and to purchase the vehicle within the month.

WHITE PINE UNION

The gathering of the White Pine woodsmen on last Saturday morning at the Fair Ground was one of the interesting events of the Pocahontas County Fair. Some sixty odd men who used to work in the white pine woods of Pocahontas county met and organized "The White Pine Union" and plans were made for a real reunion at the 1929 Pocahontas County Fair. Captain A. E. Smith was honored by being elected the first President of The White Pine Union. T S. McNeel is the secretary, and Andrew Price was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the big reunion at the 1929 Fair.

Among the charter members of the White Pine Union are A. E. Smith, A. J. Trainer, Adam Dillman, M. J. White, W. W. Bird, J. W. Grimes, Matt Cavanaugh, Reed Griffith, Pete Kelley, Samuel Sheets, Andrew Price C. K. Courtney, Rodney Buzzard, W. L. Hogsett, J. O. Mann, George W. Gingar, W. R Sutton, G. W. Wagner, K. E. The MMS boys, GB girls victorious at annual county basketball tournament

Excitement, competition, rivalry and fans were in abundance at PCHS, February 23, as teams from Marlinton and Green Bank faced off for the County Middle School Basketball Tournament. The action began with the Copperhead boys squaring up with the Golden Eagles. Having been defeated previously this season by the Copperheads, the Eagles were hot for revenge.

In a first quarter blast, the Eagles outscored the Copperheads 12-4. The second quarter had fans frenzied as the Copperheads heated up, scoring 17 points.

The Eagles held onto the lead by sinking 12 points for a halftime score of 24-21, Eagles.

The third quarter again kept fans on seats' edge as the Copperheads knocked down 10 points to the Eagles five, putting them in the lead by three at quarter's end.

In the final quarter, the Eagles just couldn't hang on as the Copperheads nailed the victory by adding 17 points, bringing the final game score to 48-38.

Scoring for the Copperheads were: Dexter Skidmore-11, Logan Dale-11, Derek Kiner-9, Mike Callison-7, Aaron Totten-6 and Kendall Beverage-4.

Scoring for the Eagles were: Andrew Pritt-8, Adam Wright-8, Trevor Caplinger-8, Alex Reese-6, Jesse Bolyard-6, Curtis Bennett-1 and Abe Rittenhouse-1.

Selected for the All Tournament Team were: Adam Wright, Trevor Caplinger, Dexter Skidmore, Mikey Callison and Logan Dale. Also up for grabs was the Academic Award, which goes to the team with the highest combined GPA. Green Bank took the honors with a 3.42 Team GPA.

No less exciting was the second match of the evening with the Lady Copperheads facing the Lady Eagles. Hoping for season revenge in this match were the Lady Copperheads. Both teams came out raring to go in the first quarter, however, the Eagles were hot and outscored the Copperheads 9-2.

In second quarter action, the Eagles continued to roll bringing the score to 20-6 at the half. Despite great speed and teamwork, the Copperheads just couldn't overcome the Eagles' unstoppable shooting and were defeated 42-14.

Scoring for the Lady Eagles were: Chelsey Gum-13, Jenna Greathouse-10, Kristy Madron-9, Madeline Jerome-5, Bridgett Boothe-3 and Shelby Snead-2.

Scoring for the Lady Copperheads were: Stacey McPaters-7, Nicole Barlow-3, Abby Hall-2 and Elizabeth VanReenan-2.

Selected for the All Tournament Team were: Nicole Barlow, Stacey McPaters, Chelsey Gum, Kristy Madron and Jenna Greathouse. The ladies compete for Academic Honors as well and the Green Bank Lady Eagles prevailed in this as well, bringing home the Award with a 3.58 Team GPA.

ALL TOURNAMENT TEAM: Kristy Madron, Chelsey Gum, and Jenna Greathouse, Green Bank; Stacey McPaters and Nicole Barlow, Marlinton.

Congratulations to the Marlinton Copperheads boys team and the Green Bank Eagles girls team on winning the 2005 Pocahontas County Middle School Basketball Tournament.

One day last spring Captain A. E Smith had a number of the men who had worked for him at an old time camp dinner. Then the idea was put forward that it would be a good thing for those who worked in the white pine woods to meet at the Pocahontas County Fair. Craig Friel, of Flushing, Ohio, became interested in the idea. He spent a lot of time, and he made a model of "Little Jim" the first locomotive ever brought to Pocahontas County. Leapin' Lizards! "Annie," the Broadway musical, is coming to Lewisburg! The Lewisburg United Methodist Church Music Department has been preparing for one of the world's best-loved musicals, and will be performing it on March 17, 18, 19 and 20.

"Annie" is a spunky Depression-era orphan determined to find her parents, who abandoned her years ago on the doorstep of a New York City Orphanage run by the cruel, embittered Miss Hannigan. In adventure after fun-filled adventure, Annie foils Miss Hannigan's evil machinations, befriends President Franklin Delano Roosevelt and finds a new family and home in billionaire Oliver Warbucks, his personal secretary Grace Farrell and a lovable mutt named Sandy.

With its upbeat ending, a bright tuneful score that has become a part of the nation's musical heritage, a cast of characters which includes many scene-stealing roles for children, and a classic villainess audiences love to hate, it's no wonder this heartwarming show has become an international sensation.

Charles Fauber, Director; Lissa Pyne (Annie); Tom Kowalkowski (Oliver Warbucks); Jayne Hanson (Miss Hannigan) and the entire cast of "Annie" invite you to join them! A dinner theater will be presented on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with dinner at 6 p.m. and the show to follow. Sunday, March 20, a matinee will be presented at 3 p.m. For ticket information call the Lewisburg United Methodist Church at 645-2727.

operations in Greenbank District by Captain Smith. The model made by Mr. Friel was on exhibition at the Fair and it attracted muct attention.

Northern capitalists were convinced that white pine grew in the Greenbrier Valley by soldiers who had been here with the Yankee army. This growth of white pine is peculiar in that in no other place is it found so far south.

Nearly fifty years ago Captain Smith brought a crew of expert woods men from the north, and then began the development on a big scale the timber resources of this region. In about twenty years a half a billion feet of white pine timber was cut and floated down the Greenbrier to the big mill at Ronceverte.

THE FAIR

The biggest, best and most successful Fair ever held here describes the Pocahontas County Fair of last week. The exhibits in every department showed advancement over former years. The weather could not have been better, and on Wednesday, Greenbank District Day, there more people on the Fair grounds than at any one time before.

In writing up this Fair, mention should be made of so many outstanding features, it is hard to know where to begin and harder to quit. Suffice it to say that Pocahontas County Fair has blazed new trails as a county Fair, and it has set the standard not only for the State of West Virginia but for the whole country what a county fair should and can be.

The community programs of entertainment by the people of the various districts is an original and outstanding feature of the Pocahontas County Fair, and this year these features excelled former efforts. Just here mention must be made of the fine singing by the colored people, and

Open Letter to the Pocahontas County Commissioners

Subject:
Your decision to approve the placement of the Snowshoe Sewer Facility at Big Springs, Slatyfork within 500 yards of my Father and Mother's grave site and on apparent Indian Burial Grounds.

This decision is flawed and incorrect for multiple reasons (Site subject to flooding, geologically unstable because of sinkholes, sewer when it spill s (and it will) goes immediately and directly into the ground water, environmental financial damage to the bed and breakfast, store, post office plus any future homes that would be built in line of site, not least of which is the destruction of the area's natural beauty). Any one of those reasons carries with it a requirement to relocate the site, but what I want to discuss with you today is a very sad and emotional one for me and to my friends and relatives. Your decision to locate the Sewer Facility within ~ 500 yards, as the crow flies, of the Sharp Cemetery and on apparent Indian burial grounds is unconscionable, repugnant. And if it is not, should be illegal. Placement of a sewer facility within a mile of a church, school, community building, cemetery, etc is very wrong.

US Senator Inouye, at the signing of the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act in 1990 said:

"Respect for the dead is the highest standard of acknowledgment worldwide for all races regardless of belief, creed, or social infrastructure.

"The federal government set forth laws to guarantee that all individuals of our country have an appropriate burial.

Laws protect the deceased from grave robbers, contortion of dead bodies and the vandalism of tombstones. In all of these laws it does not exclude the Native Americans."

Several tribes used the Slatyfork area for camping, hunting, fishing, gathering and burial. Chief of these were the Senecas for which the Seneca Trail School (now a community center) was named. Some of the Cherokees dispersed into caves to avoid being relocated, and later assimilated into local society. One of which lived in the Slatyfork community at the end of the 1800's, early 1900s. My grandfather, L. D. Sharp, donated the land on which the Seneca Trail School was built. My uncle, Paul Sharp, was Principal at the school for many years. My uncle, Si Sharp, provided the land on which the Snowshoe Post Office is located. My relatives donated the land for the Slatyfork Methodist Church. My father and Frank Hannah, along with others, built the Church which was adapted from the old school house. No funeral in Pocahontas, Randolph or Greenbrier County went unanswered when asked of L.D. Sharp to provide his choir. Their life was a legacy of good stewardship to others and the community. As said above, "Respect for the dead is..."

Native people have different burial customs that are in accordance with distinct tribal identities. Some tribes place their dead in canoes and propel them in waterways or out to sea. Tribes may wrap their dead and place them within branches of trees for a tree burial while others are placed on scaffolds. There are burial mounds throughout the country and many are interred in simple graves, some possess a small house for a covering.

"Any disturbance of a burial is one of the most shameful and worst crimes that could be committed within Traditional Law.

The Sharp Cemetery is a beautiful and special burial site. The cemetery is surrounded by laurel, dogwood and native trees on a knoll that overlooks the Big Springs River to the north and the Slatyfork Creek to the south. Think about what it would look like if it shared a sewer facility within 500 yards!

The community programs of entertainment by the people of the various districts is an original and outstanding feature of the Pocahontas County Fair, and this year these features excelled former efforts. Just here mention must be made of the fine singing by the colored people, and the fine music by the Durbin Band directed by T. C. Anderson, a former resident of Marlinton.

The Little Levels entertainment was directed by Miss Dolly Kennison and consisted of acrobatic stunts and formations. The Greenbank program was a pageant. Forgive me for leaving out the others that are interred in the Sharp Cemetery, some in unmarked graves. They are due no less respect than my mother and loved ones. It's easy to understand the ones pictured above, but less easy to understand with certainty the ones we haven't seen or know about. To those, I can only say that I don't know where my great, great, great, great grandfather William Sharp I (the Revolutionary War hero and Indian Fighter) is buried but I can say with certainty that he lived, and he lived on Edray and is probably buried there in an unmarked grave. This brings me to the question of the Indian Burial as well as the Civil War Burial Sites. I don't know their names. I don't even know what they look like. And, I don't know their tribes (though this could be determined). I do know and have seen the artifacts that were found on the fields and burial site. I do know the three graves that were shown me by my father when one had been uncovered during spring plowing, to assure me they had respectfully been looked after.

In what some might say was a small gesture of respect, our family did what we could at the time to do the right things. The field is such a spectacular natural setting it has been left untouched for us and the passersby (Route 219) to enjoy. We have known, through family lore (even passed down from the Slatyfork Cherokee Indian to L.D.) that this bend in the river was an Indian encampment. Our family has sacrificed much to keep our lands in their pristine condition. We never dreamed some might attempt to destroy this important and beautiful site. Not only is it a resting place for the Indians, but two wounded Civil War soldiers whom later died in our family's log cabin who were placed to rest just above the field on an embankment. Our family cemetery is above, just 500 feet. As lay-people our long ago efforts to preserve the sanctity of the site was sufficient then. But, today, in the face of the seeming disregard of officials and engineering firms we need your help. Would you please help? My mother, father and I will be "through all eternity" grateful.

It is in the interest of every citizen in Pocahontas County to have this sewer facility moved to an appropriate site (there are at least two others, one site closer to Snowshoe, the other site further down the Elk River on public lands). It is in the interest of every church, public facility and business to have the sewer site not violate the sanctity of burial. Snowshoe is in need of an improved sewer system. We all have a common interest in this project being at an appropriate site. A site that will service the community needs equitably without violating the dignity of man.

WHY FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS IN POCAHONTAS COUNTY

Because the disease ranks third as the cause of death in our state.

Most deaths occur between the age of 20 and 40, the most productive years of life.

Tuberculosis breaks up homes and creates orphans and dependent families. Vital statistics report an average of 1200 deaths annually in our state.

They estimate for each death that there are nine living cases which means that there are over 10,000 tuberculous persons in our state.

Reports from the State Sanatorium at Hopemont and The Colored State Sanatorium at Denmar indicate that more than three fourths of the cases admitted to these institutions are in the advanced stage of the disease. Lack of early diagnosis assigned by those in authority as the cause of this condition. Some persons are not able to recognize the early symptoms of the disease, others hesitate to be examined due to fear of having the disease, others think there is no cure, while some pin their faith on so called fake cures until they have lost chance for recovery. The physician is unable to make an early diagnosis unless the persons seek his service.

What does The West Virginia Tuberculosis and Health Association do to control conditions in the State?

Through organization they have created Tuberculosis Associations in forty-two counties which carry on permanent health programs.

For the past two years field nurses visits into homes where there has been one or more deaths, visits to living cases and contact families. Nurses make arrangements for clinics and assist the physicians in conducting them.

Literature for the Modern Health Crusade is supplied to teachers in the public schools. This course is designed to teach children proper health habits but to be a success needs very close supervision.

One of the outstanding hadicaps in controlling tuberculosis in the state is lack of sanatorium facilities. The association with the cooperation of the medical societies indicated the need for a new state sanatorium for Southern West Virginia. The 1927 legislature made the appropriation and the ground is now being broken for the Rutherford Sanatorium at Beckley. One hundred and twenty-five beds will be available by next July.

This year the state association urges the unorganized counties to provide a committee to conduct the annual seal sale and retain their percentage of the proceeds to carry on a health program in their county. When the state association is compelled to carry on the seal sale from the state office the proceeds go into the budget to conduct the general program. For this reason a meeting was called for Tuesday at 2 o'clock

Farmland Board makes adjustments to program

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

With the assistance of County Commissioner Reta Griffith, members of the Farmland Protection Board went through the 33 pages of their proposed program with a fine-toothed comb for three hours Monday evening.

Section by section, the board members reviewed changes made to the program's glossary of terms, eligibility requirements and rules and guidelines by Griffith.

The vast majority of the changes involved updating citations of state code, clarifying definitions, removing redundant or repetitive language and making the various sections of the document consistent with each other.

A clause giving landowners who place land in the farmland protection program up to five years to opt out was also removed.

Several times, secretary John Leyzorek suggested consolidating the "cumbersome" and "redundant" sections into one, easy-to-read document written to consider, but as the meeting went on, time did not allow for the board to consider his draft.

Board President Leslee McCarty disagreed with Leyzorek's suggestions, emphasizing the need to be "legally accurate" and saying it did not hurt anything to have multiple references to the same terms and criteria in the document.

However, at various points in the meeting, Griffith, board vice president Mickey Deike and board treasurer Dick Evans echoed Leyzorek's call for a more concise program guide.

In other instances, Griffith and board members opted for more detailed explanations of the program and its terms.

At the meeting's end, the board voted three-to-one to approve the draft Farmland Protaction Program as amended, with Leyzorek casting the opposing vote.

The board plans to make further adjustments to the draft proposal and ranking criteria at its next meeting 7 p.m., Monday, March 21.

For this reason a meeting was called for Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Marlin-Sewell Hotel With the cooperation of the management at the county fair and the Editor of The Pocahontas Times a health exhibit was put on by a field worker. A health film on the early diagnosis was furnished for the public. School children were weighed and health literature distributed.

The State Association arranged for a Clinic service to be conducted by Dr, H. G. Wildman. During his service forty two counties were visited with clinics. Persons examined 700, persons diagnosed as tuberculous 1100 Persons placed under physicians observation 4400.

Dear Editor:

It is the fervent wish of Durbin town residents that the issue of the Durbin sewer rate increase fiasco be resolved once and for all.

The proceedings are now in the hands of the Public Service Commission of West Virginia Administrative Law Judges and the decision on the rate increase is at their sole discretion.

However, the issue needing addressing and resolution is what is transpiring among the residents and town officials.

Certain town officials and a member of the sewer committee are trying to divert attention from their actions by throwing accusations into every corner of the community and blame what they say, is going to happen to the town, on everyone but themselves, when if fact their non-compliance in filing for the rate increase never would have been discovered if it weren't for the threats that were made to rip out the commode of a part-time Durbin resident. That resident in turn contacted the Public Service Commission of West Virginia for help, as well as town residents to work on her behalf to resolve the issue, and in so doing those helping her, including the PSC, discovered that the rate increase procedure was not in conformance with the PSC rules and regulations.

In my opinion the sewer rate issue that is tearing Durbin apart should not [illegible] demanded they keep me from reporting on the Durbin Town Council meetings. I ask you, what are they afraid of?

In my opinion certain town officials and a member of the sewer committee have resorted to unjust tactics to impugn the reputations of upstanding and community concerned citizens instead of accepting responsibility for creating the problems.

Frank Proud and Donald Peck's accusations directed to the past administrations, are in my opinion, nothing but a smoke screen for the incompetence and questionable doings of some members of the present administration and those that advise them.

I found Donald Peck's February 17, letter to the editor amusing. Peck, who has been a Durbin Town Council member for many years said, "Past administrations need to let new administrations know about what they did, voting and passing rules while they were in office." Doesn't he know what he voted on or passed during the administrations in which he served? Doesn't he know why there are minutes, taken at each meeting? He is after all, part of past administrations.

Durbin needs change and people that have the concerns of the town and residents at heart. An administration that is capable of building our town up not tearing it apart, and that will lead

We offer to you now the facilities of the national and state offices to help you organize a suitable program in your county. If a successful seal sale is to be conducted, much of the success will depend upon early local organization with the selectiou of the right people to act as sub-chairman in their respective district and communities. All of the machinery for conducting the seal sale should be set up by November the first. There is now ample time to perfect a county organization Just as soon as the county committee is organized and the officers and the seal sale chairman selected kindly notify the state office so that we can go ahead and have ample time to provide you with all the supplies you will need

In my opinion the sewer rate issue that is tearing Durbin apart should rest in the lap of those that created it, those that made the threats and worked through intimidation, not with those simply insisting the rate increase follow mandated guidelines in all fairness to the community.

But that's not the way the people that are controlling our town see fit to do things.

In order to take their actions out of the spotlight they scream, $1, $1, $1, as well as resorting to name calling and more intimidations. Frank Proud, in desperation has called the newspaper I work for and accused them of complicity, and administration and those that advise them.

I found Donald Peck's February 17, letter to the editor amusing. Peck, who has been a Durbin Town Council member for many years said, "Past administrations need to let new administrations know about what they did, voting and passing rules while they were in office." Durbin needs change and people that have the concerns of the town and residents at heart. An administration that is capable of building our town up not tearing it apart, and that will lead with integrity and work together for the good of all and not control by fear and intimidation. Our town needs a democracy, a government by the people, not a theocracy.

Children having the freedom to play and enjoy what natural landscape Durbin has to give.

I would love to see the mayor and the fire chief get together with their people and make one snow day for the kids. It would be so easy to block off a few streets with bails of hay or straw with adult supervision. I personally would help watch to make sure the children of Durbin have a good time. Yes, I have also heard the story of the boy would got hurt sled riding. With adult supervision accidents can be avoided.

I have talked to other parents in Durbin who are disappointed in the way children don't have the freedoms that they use to have as a child here in Durbin. I know I am afraid to let my children out because there are people who don't want the children out and about. I moved here hoping that my children would have a safe and fun place to live after hearing my husbands and his families stories. Living in the Washington DC metropolitan area does not allow for fun in snow, riding bikes, fishing, and being a child. We need to meet in the middle, and let them be little because they are only little for a little while.

Summer is coming, so as parents let us come up with some fun ideas to get these children involved in some summer time things as well. I know there are other adults out there who are big kids at heart. Lets run with them, play flashlight tag, kick the can, the ideas are endless if we just go back to our own childhoods and think about the fun we use to have. Come on, Mayor, I know you have children as well as others in the town. Let's show Pocahontas County that we are not a dying town with just older citizens but we have youth and vibrancy as well.

Sincerely,

Dear Editor:

Regarding Tom Shipley's plea before the County Commission reported in the Times on March 3 in re the Snowshoe Sewage Treatment Plant, it is somewhat disquieting to witness a totally locked step Commission; not to give any single point he raised even a passing glance. Rest assured that if a Sewage Treatment Plant was being planned for the front yard of any of these three Commissioners, they would not be marching in locked step.

To Ms. Griffith - thank you very much for feeling the need to clean the sewage out of the drinking water of our 92 year old mother. If the water she has used for 65 years contains sewage coming from a mountain top, uninhabited except by animal wildlife, into a wonderful, fresh, delicious cold spring, then we highly recommend it! She has lived all those years in the same location using that "tainted" water and enjoys a generous lifetime lease on the property. This little lady, unfortunately, will bear the brunt of the cruel and unusual punishment of having a sewage treatment plant in her front door. We, her family, have worked and paid, together with her, to keep her in her home where she is peaceful and happy for the remainder of her years we hoped.

Even despite the Department of Highways constructing a temporary bridge and road through her front and back yard for the nearly a year it took to construct a new bridge across from her home a few years ago, she endured. This sewage treatment plant, however, will likely spell the end of that endurance. Without even going into the noise, dirt, trucks, etc., that will come with this construction, the horrible smell and nuisance of a working sewage treatment plant, she will likely have no water source whatsoever due to the digging behind her home as the contractors dig all the way to the Elk River to dump the "liquid" portion of the product the plant will collect. In addition to all this pain and suffering, she would not be allowed to hook onto the sewer which is a nonissue if she has no drinking water.

It is heartbreaking to think of destroying the stream in front of her home and the one which actually originates behind her home. We have often mused that if there is such a thing as a 'native brook trout' left in a stream anywhere in the world, it has to be there. Also severely impacted will be the owner of this leased property who will see the his property value plummet from very high offers to nearly nothing, as well as the Sharp store and B&B with its historic value and community usefulness.

It is unimaginative and unnecessary to take a beautiful little meadow so near to residences (which certainly does flood with some regularity) for such an ignoble purpose. There are thousands of rural acres where such an atrocity could be located that would cause no problem for anyone except wild animals. What a wonderful 'Welcome to Snowshoe' to visitors cruising north on 219 to be welcomed by the malodorous Snowshoe Sewer Treatment Plant; and then to depart the 'Resort' traveling south on 219, and be able to enjoy the 'essence' of what they left behind! Why is Snowshoe 35+ years after the fact, now looking to build something a

Why is Snowshoe 35+ years after the fact, now looking to build something as basic as a sewage treatment plant? And looking to locate it off their mountain? For the residents on 219? Not a chance. Politicians/decision makers need to give themselves a serious reality check. This deal "smells" in every way; the good of the local residents is not on the front burner of this deal.

Dear Editor:

I would like to clarify a few points in regards to my comments in the recent Board of Education meeting held February 28.

I stated that Sydnee Gay required a certified autism mentor, not that all autistic students are required to have an aide. Also, it is unfortunate that my comments prior to saying that the "Vision Impairment teacher does not know Braille," were not mentioned. Had they been, they would have read as such.

Although the VI teacher is highly qualified and has much knowledge when working with Sydnee, she does not know Braille. However, she oversees the autism mentor who does know Braille in transcribing and modifying Sydnee's work into Braille, a very vital part of Sydnee's continued education.

The point that the VI teacher not knowing Braille was not to demean her qualifications, it was

Huntersville District Institute Held at Minnehaha Springs Saturday

The Huntersville District Institute was held at Minnehaha Springs Saturday, November 17. Most of the teachers of the district were present and took an active part in the program. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Hinton, and some special music was given by Mrs. Wilson's pupils which was enjoyed by all present.

Miss McElwee's demonstration in teaching beginners was well worth while. Mrs. Wilson gave a demonstration in teaching history and Mr. Flynn in spelling which was exceptionally good.

Mr. Miller, county agent, discussed 4-H club work and took an active part in the discussion of the teachers problems.

The Fair Exhibit was stressed by Mrs. Wilson and the importance of the teacher having better material to exhibit, and there should be a greater interest taken in this work as it is rather an advertising of what the teachers and pupils are doing along educational lines. Also that work should be done during the school term.

Rev. Reggleman who is in charge of Country Life Conferences, gave an interesting talk on community activities.

The subject of more Standard Schools and how the necessary equipment can be acquired was well discussed, and the speaker, Mrs. Sharp, brought out the fact that teachers should work for the standardization through cooperation of patrons, [illegible] of the necessary equipment [illegible] be secured without getting it di- [illegible] from the Boards.

Much emphasis was placed on Reading Circle work by Miss Hill. Through this, she said young folks [illegible] taught the value and appreciation of good reading material, and each teacher should make a special effort to put this across. In connection with this work, Mr. Flynn has started a Circulating Library of which will prove much benefit to the teachers.

Miss Lucille White talked on the subject of Compulsory Attendance, and expressed her belief that the weekly blanks to the Truant Officer had been a success, and in general there were better attendance over the District. This subject was also discussed by the teachers.

Three minute talks were given on the following subjects: The Value of Current Events, Miss Leta McLaughlin; Note Books and Their Value, W. A. Hively; Nature Study, Miss Kathleen Taylor; Health, Miss Charlcie Beverage. All of these teachers gave to the Instiute worth while talks and many new ideas for the teachers to try out in their school work.

Mr. Flynn gave the teachers some splendid suggestions that should prove valuable in their problems. He also stressed the fact that the teaching profession is growing, and that the teachers must be on the alert

High Rocks Academy ready to recruit

With spring around the corner, High Rocks is excited to invite new girls from grades eight to ten to apply to become a part of our leadership program. High Rocks provides many opportunities for girls to explore new and exciting challenges during high school.

The program begins with New Beginnings summer camp, which offers academic classes and other fun activities to help girls build a strong foundation before entering high school.

During the year, girls attend weekly tutoring nights and design service projects in their communities. Older girls in the program receive extensive college support through ACT workshops, college trips, application help, and financial-aid guidance. Girls are invited to speak at conferences and to attend special events. The High Rocks serves girls in Greenbrier, Pocahontas and Nicholas counties.

High Rocks is looking for girls who are smart, bold and have potential to become leaders in their communities. Our programs are free of charge to all participants.

Applications are due April 6 in Pocahontas County. In Richwood and Greenbrier County the due date is April 13. High Rocks is holding an open house Saturday, March 26, from 12-2 p.m. If you're an interested girl, parent or community member, please stop in, have a tour and hear about the great work we're doing.

For more information, applications or directions, call: 653-4891 or visit www.high-rocks.org.

THORNWOOD MAN ACCIDENTLY KILLED

Virgil Calhoun, Stumbles While Attempting to Shoot Snake And Kills Self

Death, in an unexpected guise lurked along the winding government road above Thornwood and snuffed out the life of Virgil Calhoun, Thursday afternoon, almost without warning.

In company with his two boys, Shallace and Harold, aged eleven and nine years, Mr. Calhoun was returning from a visit to relatives in Circleville, when he saw a large rattlesnake curled along the edge of the road about a mile from the State Forester's camp.

He fired a shot at the rattler from the revolver he carried in his car for protection, but failed to kill it, so stepped from the running board, to get closer aim.

The snake had crawled into the underbrush, and in following it, Calhoun stepped on an old log, which broke under his weight. As he threw his arm up to save himself from falling backward, the revolver a 32 calibre, was discharged and the bullet entered his neck, severing the jugular vein, and passing out through the back of the unfortunate man's head.

Unable to stop the profuse bleeding from the wound, the elder of the two terrified boys, drove the car on to the camp and returned with State Ranger, D. R. Gaudineer.

F Calhoun was removed to the For-

OPEN LETTER and APPEAL to INTRAWEST SNOWSHOE, Snowshoe residents, Snowshoe property owners, Snowshoe visitors, the Pocahontas County Commission, the Pocahontas County Public Service Commission, the Region IV Development Council and residents of Pocahontas County:

Can it be your desire to spoil the heritage, beauty and sanctity of the Luther David Sharp farm in Slatyfork, West Virginia with an open sewer treatment plant? Snowshoe needs a sewer plant. No problem. We do not oppose it. We DO object to the decision by the Pocahontas County Commission to approve our historic land, as it sits right along the scenic highway vista, where the Big Spring of Elk River meanders under the Route 219 bridge, as the site for the open sewer plant.

Can it be that West Virginia has shed its long endured stereotype [illegible] declared West Virginia to be Wild and Wonderful, back in the day when some might not have been so proud. John Denver's song Take Me Home, Country Roads gave West Virginia something to sing about! Should we not strive to offer our tourists 'Almost Heaven' and 'Wild and Wonderful' as they travel our country roads? What kind of first impression will the stench from the processing sludge make on them as they roll the windows up and step on the gas? Our 120 year continuously running, authentic Sharp's Country Store with free museum and lovingly restored 'bed and breakfast' farm house will be a blur as they speed by in an escape attempt. A sewer is needed, but an alternative site for the open sewer treatment plant is needed.

INTRAWEST and the Snowshoe community have provided jobs and contributed greatly to Pocahontas County and West Virginia. Luther David Sharp, his forefathers and his many descendants performed similar feats decades earlier, and in no small way. L.D. Sharp was that era's version of a mega corporation. While never a very wealthy man, he was rich in relations and 'community'. His house was the largest in Pocahontas County for almost a century. Built not to impress, but to provide for his large family and farm hands. His Uncle Hugh built the hewn log house on this property in the 1800's. Robert E. Lee was a dinner guest there; two wounded soldiers died in that house and were buried in the embankment just above the proposed open sewer site. Our family lost two boys to the Civil War, one North and one South. Another was captured by the Confederates and was one of only a handful of survivors of the Salisbury, North Carolina camp. He survived by making jewelry from bones and scrap bartered for food. When the war was over he literally walked back to West Virginia. His fiancé did not recognize him.

My Uncle Ralph, as a small boy in the 1930's, was saddened and concerned to learn of my Grandfather's accidental discovery, while plowing, of an Indian Burial Site on the now proposed open sewer plant site. So affected by the report, he was taken there so he could witness the respectful return to the earth. The site was very likely once an Indian encampment. Route 219 was, after all, the Seneca Trail. A circle of arrowheads was found in that field as well as other artifacts and tools.

My Uncle Evan was a forester. He planted pine trees just about everywhere he went. A visit to us in Parkersburg in the 1960's resulted in many saplings planted - now standing 50 feet tall. As kids, Evan and the neighboring Shelton girls hung out on the bench in front of the Country Store. They went Coon Huntin' many a night. When I recently asked the Shelton twins if they ever caught a coon they remarked, "No, but we got to hunt with Evan!" (Evan was a 'looker'.) His early departure affected everyone who knew him. He was laid to rest in our family cemetery. This cemetery is a short distance just above the proposed sewer plant. The Shelton's mom, Eva, lives directly across the road from the plant. Well into her 90's she will have little choice but to bear the intrusion of construction and latter odorous consequences. Her home lies just outside the legal distance before placement of such a plant near a residence would be prohibited.

The great success of Snowshoe and the resultant dilemma of waste has been an issue for some time. The state gave Snowshoe the authority to manage their own sewer district some time ago.

Individual private landowners surrounding Snowshoe became concerned that Snowshoe might not be properly addressing the waste issue and filed suit. Publicly available documents reveal the complicated and conflicting issues. A review of this case reveals the fact that the problem was so unsolvable the Department of Environmental Protection granted Snowshoe a 'pass' concerning their treatment of raw sewage. The state court demanded a solution. This may have influenced Snowshoe's desire to be included in with the rest of Pocahontas County's plan and the desire for the Pocahontas County Commission to vote to now include them. The resulting relationship manifests itself in the proposed sewer system and open treatment plant on our farm. While all parties must have worked very hard to, again, solve a complicated issue, the resulting proposal poses serious risks and may not serve the best interests and original intent of combining the Snowshoe sewer system with that of Pocahontas County.

Last Tuesday, in an effort to learn more about this decision, I attended a meeting of the Pocahontas County Commission. Before I had a chance to sit down Commission president, Joel Callison proclaimed, "I don't know who you are or why you're here, but I am not going to move that site"! My pertinent and intended friendly inquiry was countervailed by the somewhat defensive posture of Mr. Callison and the commission members, Jerry Griffith and James Carpenter. My questions were an honest attempt to understand the issues involved, their working relationships and to explore a different solution for a difficult problem. President Callison has since referred to me on a recent Saturday Radio program as Tom Shipley, the troublemaker. I forgive you, Mr. Callison for that undeserved characterization, as I understand you and your commission have worked hard in an effort to solve the Snowshoe sewer problem. The last thing I'm sure you 'needed' was a 'new face' appearing at your doorstep at the moment you thought the matter closed. Certainly an effort to preserve the sanctity of our family's and the Slatyfork community's heritage deserves a higher compliment.

While the project was originally budgeted at 8 million dollars and promoted to cost only $3,600 per household, the costs skyrocketed and adjustments have been made upward to support the now 17 million dollar project. Basing the cost on that 'current' figure, with no overruns, the charge per household has risen to $54.00. Mr. Callison said he originally supported any system that would benefit the largest group of non-Snowshoe county residents. "I can't be all about Snowshoe [illegible] to provide service to [illegible] dents that we could afford". "We're working with a state mandate. The state is requiring that projects such as this be more regional".

If this is the directive Thrasher was given, despite their likely best efforts, the resulting proposal is severely flawed. I queried the commission for the number of residents the sewer plant will accommodate. I was surprised to learn they did not know the capacity. Mr. Callison said, "Thrasher told us it would support 3 Snowshoes". Mr. Carpenter amended that figure with "I think that's more like 2 Snowshoes". When asked if they knew Snowshoe's projected growth/development proposals for the next 5-10 years they did not know. The question is there, will the plant be able to handle Snowshoe's growth? Asked if plans for expansion of capacity and further taking of the Sharp land are proposed they did not know.

The Commission's directive to include non-Snowshoe residents has resulted in an addition of an entire 5% of the total 1,080 proposed customers. That begs the question, does that fulfill the Commission directive? Is it necessary to extend the pipeline down the mountain 12 miles away into the Sharp farm? The addition of around 100 non-Snowshoe customers along Route 219 from the turn off at Route 66 at up to $1 million a mile adds enormous Project costs that are not justifiable! It poses the question; why so far for so much for so few? Might it be because the plant would be out of sight, smell and mind of Snowshoe? Is it a coincidence that many of that 5% happen to be along the Route 219 right of way out of Snowshoe? I asked if that 5% had been polled to see if they needed or desired a sewer hook-up? Mr. Callison said, "You know the answer to that. No". "We are not installing this sewer for the current residents, we are doing it for the future"! In a 2003 article printed in the Pocahontas Times Thrasher engineering is quoted as saying "You can't build a sewer based on potential customers. It has to be based on the people who are there only." Does this not unfairly burden a small number of 'required' customers to pay now for a system to serve future developers? Since the project has become so expensive I wondered why more non-Snowshoe residents below Slatyfork and the Sharp farm would not be included to benefit from and help pay for the system. After all, this was the directive. I also mentioned that by placing the plant further down and off the road away from people and long established businesses into a previously considered state owned site they could save the cost of procuring private property for the sewer plant. Reta Griffith started to offer, "We can't put it in a wilderness area". This statement resulted in a most curious gesture. Mr. Callison 'elbowed' Ms. Griffith in the ribs! He seemed to interrupt Reta and changed the subject. When he was done I mentioned the 50-acre wilderness area. He said, "I didn't mention any wilderness area." I said yes, that is true, but Reta did." She said "I'm not sure we can put it there, but we don't know anything about it."

"Is it not your responsibility to review and understand these issues?" Reta: "There is a big difference between reviewing and understanding." This is my concern. By giving Thrasher what is essentially 'carte blanche' to decide, based on cost and location only, what is best for the residents of Pocahontas County eliminates the system of checks and balances our government was designed to provide. As elected officials, should it not be the responsibility of the Commission to oversee the project and consider what is best for the good will of the people, and to preserve the rich history and pristine natural environment for the community? Even the most angelic private, for profit company may not have the best interests of the community at heart nor would it care about the contribution to it by generations of Sharps. The commission should, on behalf of the people!

Additionally, with a plant located in a state owned area further down, dollars could be saved by requiring one less pump to pump the solids back up into the Sharp farm site against gravity. "We don't want to burden them". Burden them? If the line along 219 is a burden further down the road, is it not a burden to the residents along 219 from Route 66 to the Sharp farm? "We don't know anything about pumps" was the answer. The Sharp family is not against the sewer. If the original intent was to include 'all' then let's include more of the 'all' and extend the system to serve more people down Route 219, eliminating the need for a pumping station and creating the possibility to save additional monies by choosing state owned property for the treatment plant.

"We are not doing this along 219 for the customers, it is to save the water." Carpenter said. "The water?" "Yes, the septic systems along 219 are running the well water, we are stopping that" In regard to saving the drinking water the chosen site on the Sharp farm has two sinkholes. The Big Spring of Elk River flows underground some distance above our farm except during floods where rising water finds its way onto the proposed site, floods the field, and escapes directly into that sinkhole. I asked the Commission if the plant had a back up system in case of a pump failure (It will happen) or break in pipe. They did not know. "Thrasher takes care of all of that". If there is a failure, raw sewage will flow uncontrolled down that sinkhole directly into the water table. Flooding information offered to the responsible parties as to the frequency (5 times) and depth (5 feet) in the last 20 years on this property was met with little interest. I shudder to think the result of a flood washing over and into the open pits. The Sharp property is pitted with limestone caves. It was an amazing thing to learn Thrasher obtained written assurance from a subcontractor responsible for core drilling giving them legal clearance to support the enormous vats.

An effort was made on my part, at the Commission meeting, to understand the arrangement of organizations responsible for [illegible] planning commission, explained to me as a 'quasi governmental agency' who then engages lawyers, engineering firm, etc. They are very familiar with public projects and see to the nuts and bolts of such projects.

Even though this sewer project may have been conceived with the best intentions by all parties, it falls short of every intended goal. It has been described by the Pocahontas County Commission as a burden to some and a necessity to others. To some current residents, it seems they are irrelevant, at least along Route 219, as Mr. Carpenter explained the project was not for them. With the obvious shortcomings of this proposed plan the need to go back to the drawing board is evident. To quickly find alternative solutions is imperative. INTRAWEST SNOWSHOE, today, is potentially failing to adequately process its raw sewage and may still be 'benefiting', if that word should even be used, from a 'pass' from the D.E.P.

The current configuration also poses environmental and legal questions in regard to watersheds. The commission was asked, "Are you aware of what watersheds are involved in this project? "Watersheds, what are you talking about?" Well, when someone flushes a toilet, water from a particular watershed is used to transport the waste to the Sharp farm. Do you know how many or which watersheds are involved?" "No.". "Are you aware that water from different watersheds will be dumped into the watershed of the Elk?" "No". It is my understanding it is illegal in most states of the US to take water from one watershed and dump it into another. Is this an exclusive club our state should be proud of?

The information gathered here is my take on numerous conversations with government, environmental, business groups as well as concerned citizens. While the Sharp farm is composed of several separate entities, having been necessarily divided amongst L.D's descendents, many of those descendents have sacrificed much to keep the property intact as a family. Some members lived on and were stewards of the land, while others living out of state (but with their hearts still in Slatyfork) invested substantial dollar amounts to keep the land together and the Country Store going. Our family, in a sense, has used the model of bold investment, determination and stick-to-it-tiveness that INTRAWEST at Snowshoe emulates. We have benefited, not in financial gain from development, as most in our family are more interested in preserving the beauty of nature as God intended, but in seeing the legacy of L.D. and his hard work live on.

I implore all parties to participate in a speedy solution in the form of a different sewer treatment plant site that will serve the needs of the most people with the least cost while acknowledging the important historical and cultural aspects of our community.

On Thursday, February 17, the Region IV Planners requested a certificate from the Public Service Commission in Charleston to start an irreversible process to acquire right of way, private property and begin this project. The 30-day public comment period ends soon. Letters of Protest or Letters to Petition for Intervener status must be in the hands of The Public Service Commission, before Friday, March 18, 2005.

Who remembers Durbin before 1930? The town was a combination of businesses.

The C&O Railroad and the Western Maryland were very active. Each morning at 6 a. m. a fast passenger train came from Elkins. There was a C&O passenger waiting and a transfer of express, baggage and passengers was made.

When the transfer was made both trains left Durbin. The Western Maryland went back to Elkins and the C&O headed for Ronceverte.

On August 9th, 1913 he was married to Miss May Mullenax, a sister of Mrs. Stanley Roberson, of Durbin.

To this union five children were born, Sharon, aged 14, Shellace and Harold who were with their father at the time of his death, and Ronald, aged 7 years. Besides his immediate family h is survived by his mother, Mrs. A. F. Calhoun, of Circleville, three brothers and one sister.

For the past year he has been employed as travelling salesman for the Carr-Owen Co., wholesale druggists, of Baltimore, Md., and also sold life insurance.

Previously he was engaged in the merchantile business at Thornwood.

His body was taken to Circleville, Friday afternoon, where funeral services and interment took place.

J. C. DILLEY DROPS DEAD HERE THUR

March 9, 2005

OPEN LETTER and APPEAL to INTRAWEST SNOWSHOE, Snowshoe residents, Snowshoe property owners, Snowshoe visitors, the Pocahontas County Commission, the Pocahontas County Public Service Commission, the Region IV Development Council and residents of Pocahontas County;

Can it be your desire to spoil the heritage, beauty and sanctity of the Luther David Sharp farm in Slatyfork, West Virginia with an open sewer treatment plant? Snowshoe needs a sewer plant. No problem. We do not oppose it. We DO object to the decision by the Pocahontas County Commission to approve our historic land, as it sits right along the scenic highway vista.where the Big Spring of Elk River meanders under the Route 219 bridge, as the site for the open sewer plant.

Can it be that West Virginia has shed its long endured stereotypical connotation that it can now afford to mock it? Arch Moore, in a Reaganesque move, declared West Virginia to be Wild and Wonderful, back in the day when some might not have been so proud. John Denver's song Take Me Home, Country Roads gave West Virginia something to sing about! Should we not strive to offer our tourists 'Almost Heaven' and 'Wild and Wonderful' as they travel our country roads? What kind of first impression will the stench from the processing sludge make on them as they roll the windows up and step on the gas? Our 120 year continuously running, authentic Sharp's Country Store with free museum and lovingly restored 'bed and breakfast' farm house will be a blur as they speed by in an escape attempt. A sewer is needed, but an alternative site for the open sewer treatment plant is needed.

INTRAWEST and the Snowshoe community have provided jobs and contributed greatly to Pocahontas County and West Virginia. Luther David Sharp, his forefathers and his many descendants performed similar feats decades earlier, and in no small way. L.D. Sharp was that era's version of a mega corporation. While never a very wealthy man, he was rich in relations and 'community'. His house was the largest in Pocahontas County for almost a century. Built not to impress, but to provide for his large family and farm hands. His Uncle Hugh built the hewn log house on this property in the 1800's. Robert E. Lee was a dinner guest there; two wounded soldiers died in that house and were buried in the embankment just above the proposed open sewer site. Our family lost two boys to the Civil War, one North and one South. Another was captured by the Confederates and was one of only a handful of survivors of the Salisbury, North Carolina camp. He survived by making jewelry from bones and scrap bartered for food. When

When the transfer was made both trains left Durbin. The Western Maryland went back to Elkins and the C&O headed for Ronceverte.

At 12:00 noon two passengers met again at Durbin. They made another transfer and departed. In all there were four trains each day coming into Durbin on the C&O and Western Maryland. Four trains on each line. At six o'clock in the evening the two lines had trains meet again in Durbin. The C&O stayed over night but the Western Maryland went back to Elkins. It arrived in Elkins at 8:00 p. m.

There was a good mine prop business in Durbin at that time. The props were

J. C. DILLEY DROPS DEAD HERE THUR.

J. C. Dilley, Age 68, Drops Dead at Residence Here, Last Thursday Eve of Heart Trouble

J. C. Dilley, age 68, of this city, dropped dead at his residence here last Thursday evening about 8 o'clock as a result of heart trouble. The funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon by Rev. . R. Neel, Rev. Luther Sharp and Rev. Murphy. Interment was made in the Mountain View Cemetery.

Mr. Dilley was well known throughout this county and his many friends will hear with much regret of his sudden death.

He was born in July 1861, at Dilley's Mill and died at the age of 68, August 8th, 1929. His wife who before her marriage wasMiss Emma Jane Bird, survives him. To this union were born three children: E.C. Dilley, A. B. Dilley and Miss Ruby Dilley, all of whom survive their father.

while plowing, of an Indian Burial Site on the now proposed open sewer plant site. So affected by the report, he was taken there so he could witness the respectful return to the earth. The site was very likely once an Indian encampment. Route 219 was, after all, the Seneca Trail. A circle of arrowheads was found in that field as well as other artifacts and tools.

My Uncle Evan was a forester. He planted pine trees just about everywhere he went. A visit to us in Parkersburg in the 1960's resulted in many saplings planted - now standing 50 feet tall. As kids, Evan and the neighboring Shelton girls hung out on the bench in front of the Country Store. They went Coon Huntin' many a night. When I recently asked the Shelton twins if they ever caught a coon they remarked, "No, but we got to hunt with Evan!" (Evan was a 'looker'.) His early departure affected everyone who knew him. He was laid to rest in our family cemetery. This cemetery is a short distance just above the proposed sewer plant. The Shelton's mom, Eva, lives directly across the road from the plant. Well into her 90's she will have little choice but to bear the intrusion of construction and latter odorous consequences. Her home lies just outside the legal distance before placement of such a plant near a residence would be prohibited.

The great success of Snowshoe and the resultant dilemma of waste has been an issue for some time. The state gave Snowshoe the authority to manage their own sewer district some time ago.

Individual private landowners surrounding Snowshoe became concerned that Snowshoe might not be properly addressing the waste issue and filed suit. Publicly available documents reveal the complicated and conflicting issues. A review of this case reveals the fact that the problem was so unsolvable the Department of Environmental Protection granted Snowshoe a 'pass' concerning their treatment of raw sewage. The state court demanded a solution. This may have influenced Snowshoe's desire to be included in with the rest of Pocahontas County's plan and the desire for the Pocahontas County Commission to vote to now include them. The resulting relationship manifests itself in the proposed sewer system and open treatment plant on our farm. While all parties must have worked very hard to, again, solve a complicated issue, the resulting proposal poses serious risks and may not serve the best interests and original intent of combining the Snowshoe Sewer System with that of Pocahontas County.

Last Tuesday, in an effort to learn more about this decision, I attended a meeting of the Pocahontas County Commission. Before I had a chance to sit down Commission president, Joel Callison proclaimed, "I don't know who you are or why you're here, but I am not going to move that site"! My pertinent and intended friendly inquiry was circumvented by the somewhat defensive posture of Mr. Callison and the commission members, Reta Griffith and James Carpenter. My questions were an honest attempt to understand the entities involved, their working relationships and to explore a different solution for a difficult probprop business in Durbin at that time. The props were stacked across the track from where Everette East lived. They were hauled in wagons by George and Scott Darnell. There was no lumber mill there at that time.

The tannery was going strong and Durbin was having growing pains.

Durbin got its first water system in 1928. A dam was built in a canyon above the bridge in West End. The system had no pumps. It was a gravity system. It seemed to have lots of pressure.

lem. President Callison has since referred to me on a recent Saturday Radio program as Tom Shipley, the troublemaker. I forgive you, Mr. Callison for that undeserved characterization, as I understand you and your commission have worked hard in an effort to solve the Snowshoe sewer problem. The last thing I'm sure you 'needed' was a 'new face' appearing at your doorstep at the moment you thought the matter closed. Certainly an effort to preserve the sanctity of our family's and the Slatyfork community's heritage deserves a higher compliment.

While the project was originally budgeted at 8 million dollars and promoted to cost only $36.00 per household, the costs skyrocketed and adjustments have been made upward to support the now 17 million dollar project. Basing the cost on that 'current' figure, with no overruns, the charge per household has risen to $54.00. Mr. Callison said he originally supported any system that would benefit the largest group of non-Snowshoe county residents. "It can't be all about Snowshoe". Another quote from the meeting was "We told Thrasher Engineering to design the system to provide service to the large number of non-Snowshoe residents that we could afford". "We are working with a state mandate. The state is requiring that projects such as this be more regional".

If this is the directive Thrasher was given, despite their likely best efforts, the resulting proposal is severely flawed. I queried the commission for the number of residents the sewer plant will accommodate. I was surprised to learn they did not know the capacity. Mr. Callison said, "Thrasher told us it would support 3 Snowshoes". Mr. Carpenter amended that figure with "I think that's more like 2 Snowshoes". When asked if they knew Snowshoe's projected growth/development proposals for the next 5-10 years they did not know. The question is there, will the plant be able to handle Snowshoe's growth? Asked if plans for expansion of capacity and further taking of the Sharp land are proposed they did not know.

The Commission's directive to include non-Snowshoe residents has resulted in an addition of an entire 5% of the total 1,980 proposed customers. That begs the question, does that fulfill the Commission directive? Is it necessary to extend the pipeline down the mountain 12 miles away into the Sharp farm? The addition of around 100 non-Snowshoe customers along Route 219 from the turn off at Route 66 at up to $1 million a mile adds enormous Project costs that are not justifiable! It poses the question; why so far for so much for so few? Might it be because the plant would be out of sight, smell and mind of Snowshoe? Is it a coincidence that many of that

An effort was made on my part, at the Commission meeting, to understand the arrangement of organizations responsible for overseeing this sewer system project. The governing body of Pocahontas County, the Pocahontas County Commission appoints 3 members to a Public Service District. They engage the Region IV planning commission, explained to me as a 'quasi-government agency' who then engages lawyers, engineering firm, etc. They are very familiar with public projects and see to the nuts and bolts of such projects.

Do you know how many or which watersheds are involved?" "No.". "Are you aware that water from different watersheds will be dumped into the watershed of the Elk?" "No". It is my understanding it is illegal in most states of the US to take water from one watershed and dump it into another. Is this an exclusive club our state should be proud of?

The information gathered here is my take on numerous conversations with government, environmental, business groups as well as concerned citizens. While the Sharp farm is composed of several separate entities, having been necessarily divided amongst L.D's descendents, many of those descendents have sacrificed much to keep the property intact as a family. Some members lived on and were stewards of the land, while others living out of state (but with their hearts still in Slatyfork) invested substantial dollar amounts to keep the land together and the Country Store going. Our family, in a sense, has used the model of bold investment, determination and stick-to-it-tiveness that INTRAWEST at Snowshoe emulates. We have benefited, not in financial gain from development, as most in our family are more interested in preserving the beauty of nature as God intended, but in seeing the legacy of L.D. and his hard work live on.

I implore all parties to participate in a speedy solution in the form of a different sewer treatment plant site that will serve the needs of the most people with the least cost while acknowledging the important historical and cultural aspects of our community.

MRS. LUCY LANDERS

Mrs. Lucy Landers, wife of Robert Landers, died at her home near Huntersville, W. Va., on May 2, 1929. She was born August 21, 1883, her age being 45 years past. She was the daughter of Charley and Mary McComb. She leaves to mourn their loss her husband, one daughter, Leona, two sons, Kyle and Ned, four sisters, Osie, Mamie, Ethel and Florenc. Two sisters, Ruby and Willie, preceded in death and one daughter, Grethel. The cause of her death was tuberculosis.

Her neighbors and friends showed great respect in gathering and assisting in the funeral service which was conducted by the writer, using as a text Proverbs 27:1. "Boast not thy self of tomorrow. For thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." She gave evidence just a short time before her death that all was well. This is the one thing that's needful. God is so merciful, just to think His people can return and come to him in their last hours. Sister Landers will be remembered when Jesus comes to call forth the sleeping dead as recorded in John 5:28 and 29; Isa. 26:19 to 25; 1 Thess. 13 to 18.

Her resting place is in the Beaver Creek Cemetery. She sleeps in h

MODEL T FORD

THE Ford Motor Company is making a new car, but it is still proud of the Model T. It wants every owner of one of these cars to run it as long as possible at a minimum of trouble and expense.

Because of this policy and because of the investment that millions of motorists have in Model T cars, the Ford Motor Company will continue to supply parts as long as they are needed by Ford owners.

So that you may get the greatest use from your Model T, we suggest that you take it to the nearest Ford dealer and have him estimate on the cost of any replacement parts that may be necessary.

You will find this the economical thing to do because a small expenditure now will help to prevent costlier repairs later on, increase the value of the car, and give you thousands of miles of additional service.

For a labor charge of only $2.60 you can have your generator put in first-class condition. A new universal joint will be installed for a labor cost of $3. Overhauling the carburetor costs $1.50; steering gear, $3.50; radiator, $7.50. A complete overhauling of the rear axle assembly runs between $5.75 and $7 for labor. An average price of $22.50 covers the overhauling of the motor and transmission.

These prices are for labog only because the need and number of new parts depend on the condition of each car. The cost of these parts is low, however, because of the Ford policy of manufacturing and selling at a small margin of profit.

Radio Telescopes "Save the Day" for Titan probe

In what some scientists term "a surprising, almost miraculous turnabout," radio telescopes, including major facilities of the National Science Foundation's National Radio Astronomy Observatory (NRAO), have provided data needed to measure the winds encountered by the Huygens spacecraft as it descended through the atmosphere of Saturn's moon Titan last month - measurements feared lost because of a communication error between Huygens and its "mother ship" Cassini.

A global network of radio telescopes, including the NRAO's Robert C. Byrd Green Bank Telescope, (GBT) and eight of the ten antennas of the Very Long Baseline Array (VLBA), recorded the radio signals from Huygens during its descent on January 14. Measurements of the frequency shift cause by the craft's motion, called the Doppler shift, are giving planetary scientists their first direct information about Titan's winds.

"When we began working with our international partners on this project, we thought our ground-based telescopes were positioned to help learn about the north-south wind component. Unfortunately, the communications error lost all the wind data from Cassini.

"I've never felt such exhilarating highs and dispiriting lows than those experienced when we first detected the signal from the GBT, indicating 'all's well' and then discovering that we had no signal at the operations center, indicating 'all's lost'.' The truth, as we have now determined, lies somewhat closer to the former than latter," said Michael Bird of the University of Bonn.

In addition to measuring the motion-generated frequency shift of Huygens' radio signal, radio telescopes also were used to make extremely precise measurements of the probe's position (to within three quarters of a mile, or one kilometer) during its descent. This experiment used the VLBA antennas, along with others employing the technique of Very Long Baseline Interferometry (VLBI). Combination of the Doppler and VLBI

The big excitement was the arrest of ten men from the Springfield, Ohio, area who were camped 500 feet over the line in Randolph County at the intersection of Snorting Lick and Middle Mountain roads, near Glady. They had five illegal deer—four does and a button buck—hidden under snow. Taken to Elkins, they were fined $3,280 and four were given ten-day jail sentences.

Conservation Officer Lawrence Guthrie, of Durbin, and Sgt. Elmer White, of Beckley, formerly stationed at Durbin, were the main ones in getting the information and planning this action. Called to aid

While it was evident that these men showed keen delight in the high averages of the hogs, we think that considerable credit is due to certain of their good wives, who frequently passed the lard making grain and chop to the hungry hogs, while their husbands were busy at more important matters, especially on Sunday mornings. The race for the heaviest hog laid between John Hayslett and George Hall, and while the scale determined the real weight, yet the real reason of Mr. Haysletts success laid in a double twist in his hogs tail.

The days killing totalled 14 hogs, 5207 lbs. averaging 372 lbs.

On prior days E. R. Ballard, D. C. Moore, N. J. Candler and George Camper each killed two hogs totalling 2408 lbs, 301 lbs. average.

These employees are to be commended for their industry in adding to the food supply of their several homes and families. After the hogs were hung up, they were inspected by our genial Div. Supt., C. H. Frederick, of Cumberland, Md. and all pronounced good.

GREEN HILL

Robert C. Byrd Green Bank Telescope, (GBT) and eight of the ten antennas of the Very Long Baseline Array (VLBA), recorded the radio signals from Huygens during its descent on January 14. Measurements of the frequency shift cause by the craft's motion, called the Doppler shift, are giving planetary scientists their first direct information about Titan's winds.

"When we began working with our international partners on this project, we thought our telescopes would be adding to the wind data produced by the two spacecraft themselves. Now, with the ground-based telescopes providing the only information about Titan's winds, we are extremely proud that our facilities are making such a key contribution to our understanding of this fascinating planetary body," said Dr. Fred K. Y. Lo, Director of the NRAO.

Early analysis of the radioescope data shows that Titan's wind flows from west to east, in the direction of the moon's rotation, at all altitudes. The highest wind speed, nearly 270 mph, was measured at an altitude of about 75 miles. Winds are weak near Titan's surface and increase in speed slowly up to an altitude of about 37 miles, where the spacecraft encountered highly-variable winds that scientists think indicate a region of vertical wind shear. The ground-based Doppler measurements were carried out and processed jointly by scientists from the NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, California, and the Joint Institute for VLBI in the Netherlands, working with of Bonn.

In addition to measuring the motion-generated frequency shift of Huygens' radio signal, radio telescopes also were used to make extremely precise measurements of the probe's position (to within three quarters of a mile, or one kilometer) during its descent. This experiment used the VLBA antennas, along with others employing the technique of Very Long Baseline Interferometry (VLBI). Combination of the Doppler and VLBI data will eventually provide a three-dimensional record of motion for the Huygens Probe during its mission to Titan.

Huygens was built by the European Space Agency (ESA). The Jet Propulsion Lab designed, developed, and assembled the Cassini orbiter.

In addition to the NRAO observatories at Green Bank and Socorro, New Mexico, radio astronomy support of the Huygens mission involves facilities at the Netherlands Foundation for Research, University of Bonn (Germany), Helsinki University of Technology (Finland), Jodrell Bank (England), Onsala Space Observatory (Sweden), Australia Telescope National Facility and University of Tasmania (Australia), National Astronomical Observatories of China, the Shanghai Astronomical Observatory, and Kashima Space Research Center (Japan).

The Cassini-Huygens mission is a cooperation between NASA, ESA, and ASI, the Italian space agency.

Notice

We are again in the fur business and we are going to be in a better position to handle raw furs than ever before. We solicit the patronage of Regular shippers; all the shippers that turned their furs into us said they had realized more money than by shipping their furs.

Don't fail to handle your furs nice. Be careful in skinning not to cut the hide and use plenty of nails in stretching; this will add greatly to the price we can get for your furs. Sure there are thousands of wild cat price lists sent out just to get your furs; don't be deceived by dishonest quotations. We give you an honest grade and fair treatment to all, so bring or ship us your fur. We want your entire collection for the winter.

We have some fine ready made scarfs for sale. Will also take your orders for raw furs to be made into scarfs. Yours for business,

The ground-based Doppler measurements were carried out and processed jointly by scientists from the NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Pasadena, California, and the Joint Institute for VLBI in the Netherlands, working with an international Doppler Wind Experiment team.

The GBT made the first detection of Huygens' radio signals during the descent and gave flight controllers and scientists the first indication that the spacecraft's parachute had deployed and that it was "alive" after entering Titan's atmosphere. The radio-telescope measurements also indicated changes in Huygens' speed when it exchanged parachutes and when it landed on Titan's surface.

The original plan for gauging Titan's winds called for measuring the Doppler shift in the probe's signal frequency by Cassini and by ground-based radio telescopes in the U. S., Australia, Japan and China. Cassini was best positioned to gain information on the east-west component of the winds, and the say, it is the most blatant contradiction of one's own words, I've read in a long time. He has changed his mind and now admits the proposed $1/month flat rate increase to the Sewer Rate for various reasons was discriminatory.

Excuse me, but isn't Mr. Proud a member of the Town of Durbin's Sewer Committee who wants to initiate the increase? Wasn't he also the person in charge and ran the special meeting for the town council to accept the increase of the town's sewer bill? How come the sudden change of heart?

Other items noted in the article as quoted "Businesses just decided not to pay and didn't, and billing based on consumption was forgotten." Due to the fact most buildings along Main Street became vacant as the businesses closed for one reason or another, it's understandable the water service in some cases had been disconnected as they became vacant or condemned.

As these buildings were sold, some of the new property owners opted not to reconnect the water service till renovations could be made. Several still remain disconnected today. Due to the Town of Durbin selling the Water Plant several years ago, and getting out of the water business, how can the consumption rate be determined? Wh set, prior to doing his first Sewer Report?

It's amazing how certain documents show up all of a sudden. It's like "First you see them, now you don't" And where did this mysterious flood-proof barrel come from? Correct me if I'm wrong, but there was very little damage to any records when the high water got into the mayor's office.

In closing, I think it's unfortunate the town mayor and council members have lost the trust of most concerned citizens. And yes I'm sorry to say, Durbin is slowly dying and almost to a point where it could lose it's Charter and become another unincorporated little "beloved" town.

fact most buildings along Main Street became vacant as the businesses closed for one reason or another, it's understandable the water service in some cases had been disconnected as they became vacant or condemned.

As these buildings were sold, some of the new property owners opted not to reconnect the water service till renovations could be made. Several still remain disconnected today. Due to the Town of Durbin selling the Water Plant several years ago, and getting out of the water business, how can the consumption rate be determined? Who then will set the standards, the Town of Durbin or the Pocahontas County PSD?

Farmland Protection receives donation and passes program

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

After a busy, two-hour meeting, the Farmland Protection Board accepted a land donation, passed program guidelines and moved to request a tax to fund the program.

The donation came from Emma Beard, of Arbovale. The tract encompasses approximately 150 acres, according to board president Leslee McCarty.

The land will not be transferred immediately but rather the board would take ownership upon Beard's death, McCarty said.

According to state code, the board could then sell or lease the land after placing and easement on the property. Money from the sale of the donated tract could then be used by the board to purchase easements from other landholders approaching the board as farmland protection applicants.

While welcome news, the board's first donation did cause some confusion among members. Several means of accepting the donation were proposed.

McCarty proposed using a draft agreement she received from Lavonne Paden, of the Canaan Valley Institute, which has given technical support to the board.

Board secretary John Leyzorek questioned the legality of the document provided by Paden and suggested the board should obtain some legal expertise in handling the donation. In the meantime, Leyzorek said the board could send a letter to Beard acknowledging and thanking her for the donation and explaining the board was working on ironing out the legal details of accepting it.

The board finally approved a motion made by Cadwell Tyler to simply accept the donation as a board.

"Then we can deal with the paperwork," he said.

County Commissioner James Carpenter, who is not on the board but was present for Monday's meeting, asked if the board could accept the donation without having a program in accept it.

In a final motion on the matter, board vice-president Mickey Deike was authorized to work with Beard and find an attorney for guidance on how the board should proceed with obtaining legal title to the land.

The board also tackled making the final changes and adjustments to its draft program before submitting it to the County Commission for approval.

Much of the board's time was devoted to the program's listing of streams in the county, making a final decision on the numbers used in the program's ranking criteria and reconsidering Leyzorek's request that farm buildings be added to the criteria.

Rather than list all of the county's streams individually in the document, the board approved a motion made by treasurer Dick Evans to simplify the listing.

"I think streams are a consideration," Evans said, "but I don't think we need to take two or three pages to list every single little stream in the county."

"It's like sending Valentines in grade school," board member and county commissioner Joel Callison said, referring to the task of trying to compile an exhaustive list of all the streams in the county without missing some.

Callison and Leyzorek also argued that such an extensive listing put an undue emphasis on water protection over protection of agricultural land.

The two contended that, in some cases, the presence of streams may be more of a liability to farmland than an asset.

"Streams may be something you don't want to have around cattle, for example," Callison said. He also noted that his farm, which he considers to be good farmland, has no surface water.

"I think it's appropriate that we should look at land from a farmer's perspective," Leyzorek said. "We should not exclude a farmer's perspective."

While McCarty and Deike Evans' motion to streamline the listing.

The program will now only list the eight major rivers in the county–the Elk, Greenbrier, Cheat, Cherry, Cranberry, Williams, Gauley and Tygart Valley– as major streams while listing all the tributaries as minor streams.

The presence of streams are just one of more than 20 factors considered in the board's ranking criteria.

For the numbers used throughout the various ranking criteria, the board agreed on using the averages of values listed by the individual board members.

While Leyzorek expressed his concern that the board did not have appropriate values assigned to the ranking criteria, the other board members said they found the averages to be an acceptable start.

Deike noted that the board will likely have to learn from the experience of ranking actual properties before it can make accurate adjustments to the criteria.

McCarty said the numbers might never feel perfect but called them "a good start."

Before the board gave the program its final approval, Leyzorek offered his suggestion for adding additional criteria focusing on agricultural viability.

The criteria included the presence of houses, barns, fences and water to pasture.

"Our criteria assigns large chunks of points to property which has some characteristics which are a real inconvenience or even a liability to farmers, like views, proximity to tourist routes, caves and sinkholes," Leyzorek said.

"Particularly considering that our legislative mandate is to protect agricultural land," he explained, "I thought we should have some criteria that would allow a property that was just waiting for a farmer to come in and work it to also get points."

Evans said he was willing to consider such criteria but expressed his concern that the point values Leyzorek suggested teria.

"I'm concerned about trying to evaluate barns as 'good' or 'poor' or houses as 'good' or 'poor,'" she added. "I think you're getting into quicksand."

"We could make the criteria more explicit and more detailed," Leyzorek said, "but, so far, I haven't been convinced that the board would accept anything."

"You'd end up rewriting the assessors manual," Tyler said.

"I agree with John's point," he added. "There's got to be something in our criteria as far as agricultural viability, but I don't think we can define that with buildings."

McCarty concluded that the matter was too complex to deal with as a board and recommended getting the opinions of other farmland protection boards and attorneys.

"There's a reason it's not in other programs," McCarty said, "and I'd like to know what that is."

Bringing the evening's meeting to a close, the board voted four-to-one to approve the edited program for submission to the County Commission, excluding the changes proposed by Leyzorek.

The motion, made by Evans, also stipulated that the County Commission approve a land transfer tax of $1.10 per $500 on all real estate transactions in the county for the purpose of funding the Farmland Protection Program.

Leyzorek cast the dissenting vote.

"The reason I oppose it is because I'd rather have a more finished program," Leyzorek explained to the board, "and I think as a board we should put pressure on the County Commission to allow us to take advantage of other sources of available funding before we ask for a tax."

Consideration of the Farmland Protection Program and land transfer tax was on the agenda for the County Commission meeting the following Tuesday.

"GRAND OPENING"

After operating a successful antiques business, Tom Shipley welcomes the opportunity to take over his great uncle Dave Sharp's Country Store. It had its beginning 120 years ago in 1884 - the oldest retail store in Pocahontas County.

Our "Grand Opening" is every day from now on!

It was a country store in the 1880's and still is...with the 1899 crank wall phone (our number was 'two longs and two shorts'), tin ceiling, and squeaky wood floors. Our store is loaded with intriguing local Pocahontas County artifacts going back to Civil War days - really a FREE museum.

Our first gasoline was brought over dirt roads in steel barrels and was hand-pumped for about three cars then in the area. Now our pumps can service hundreds of cars.

Don't miss this important opportunity to experience an authentic American country store and B&B. We think our old working country store noses out the remarkable and famous non-working country store compiled in the Cultural Center in Charleston next to the State Capitol!

Our competitive B&B friends and the public are invited to tour our unique Bed & Breakfast, circa 1912. We think you will be impressed! Some have referred to it as a mansion. We believe you might think it is after seeing the interior. The Roman/Greek columns supporting the wraparound porch are a dead giveaway of what to expect inside. Tom is proud to say his mother was born there.

Among other curios in the charming parlor, you'll see the old Williams player piano. And you will like the old pump organ in the entrance hall next to the ornate staircase. Let us take you back to a special time. Let your imagination become real! The nostalgia will last a lifetime!

Upon request, we'll give you a tour of the old log house where General Lee ate supper in 1861.

No purchase necessary, Tom Shipley and Betty Sharp welcome you to stop in and say hello.
This will be a great year for you and us!

Revisiting the chief of the Mingo tribe

Curtis Curry
Contributing Writer

As a young boy I often traveled with my father during the summer months while he made deliveries for the S. B. Wallace Company. We did not own a car and these journeys with him allowed me to see many things that I could not otherwise experience. I really looked forward to these trips and my time with him.

One of my favorite places was the small community of Mingo, north of Pocahontas County, just over the Randolph County line. I seldom left the cab of his truck while he made his deliveries but in Mingo I could see the statue of an Indian on a hill overlooking the store.

Recently I decided to stop and visit Chief Mingo. Only then did I learn that it was not Chief Mingo but John Logan, Chief of the Mingos! All these years I had been wrong, but it didn't really matter. He was still an old friend to me. Although the lettering on the monument was badly weathered, I was able to read it as follows:

MINGO

This monument is erected in memory of the passing of the Red-Man, an Indian village was located near this place. According to local tradition, it was frequented by the Mingo tribe and at one time was an Iroquois

Photos by Curtis Curry

Above, the old general store that Curry's father delivered to. You can see the statue of Chief John Logan (right) from the store. It is located on the hillside overlooking the store on Mingo Flats Road.

This visit to the monument and my newfound information whetted my interest in the old chief and spurred me to research his history. I found that father of John Logan was Shikellamy, a chief of the Iroquois tribe in Pennsylvania. John's Indian name was "Tachnechdorus".

I became confused with a discrepancy in the monument text and my history research. The monument states that John Logan's Indian name was "Tahgahjute". My research indicated this was the name of his younger brother, James. It was James that was given the surname "Logan" in honor of the secretary of the Provincial Council of Pennsylvania. When the brothers

During subsequent years, I passed by Mingo many times on busy US 219. Each time I cast a glance toward the hill as if to say "hello" to my old friend. Each time I saw him standing strong and silent as he was during my youth. In the hustle of modern life, I never took the time to stop and visit with him.

My cousin now lives in Mingo and our conversation often turns to the old chief.

I jokingly ask if the chief is wearing his raincoat during rainy weather or his heavy blanket during extremely cold weather. We both enjoy the laugh.

The Mingos are said to have been expelled by the Iroquois for disloyalty. This village was on the trail from the Lakes to the South, but had been abandoned prior to the coming of the "Pale Face." From this tradition came the name of the present village, the Magisterial District and the adjacent stream – Mingo Run. Tal-gah-Jute – John Logan – the Mingo Chief, is supposed to have used this habitat. He was terrible in war-fare, yet humane in peace and was a factor in Colonial History.

Chapel Opened

For two years the jailer of Pocahontas County jail, Deputy Forrest Scott, has dreamed of enclosing some unused space on the second floor of the jail and using it for a chapel. On Sunday, November 21, at 5 p.m. that dream was realized with a dedicatory service in the new chapel conducted by the Rev. Larry Albright, pastor of the Marlinton Methodist Church.

When the need for this chapel was brought to the attention of the Pocahontas County Ministerial Association under the presidency of the Rev. Richard Newkirk, the Association appointed Rev. TenBrink and

He approved it and introduced them to a meeting of the County Commissioners, who voted their approval of the project. Materials were assembled with the help of the Rev. Callison re-elected Commission President

The County Commission met for its first regular meeting of the new year on Tuesday of last week.

The first order of business was the taking of the oath of office by re-elected commissioner Reta Griffith.

This was followed by the re-election of Joel Callison as Commission President.

Don Muhlenthaler, Pocahontas Memorial Hospital Administrator, made the annual trip by PMH administrators to the Commission seeking $100,000 for the hospital from Hotel/Motel tax funds. Since the construction of the new hospital facility, commissioners have honored a pledge to consider each year a $100,000 donation as part of the funding to pay off the debt on the building.

Mr. Muhlenthaler noted that PMH has become a Critical Access Hospital, which will increase federal payments for Medicare/Medicaid to cost plus 1%. However, he noted $750,000 in charity/bad debt losses as well as the $245,000 mortgage payment each year and other expenses to support his request for the $100,000. The hospital will be debt free after 2007, he said.

However, all three commissioners indicated that they may not vote to allocate all of the $100,000 to PMH this year. They pointed out that the ten year period of the pledge to consider the allocation has passed.

Mr. Callison said he has been waiting ten years to help other groups and is thinking about $50,000 for the hospital. Ms. Griffith said she has a similar thought. Commissioner James Carpenter noted that although he is on the PMH Board, he also is not sure if he can commit $100,000 this year.

The decision on the PMH request, as well as the other allocations of the Commission's 50% share of the Hotel/Motel Tax, will be made at the next meeting.

While Mr. Muhlenthaler was the Marlinton Volunteer Fire Department reported on the need for repairs to the fire hydrant at the hospital to bring it up to specifications. He said at this time the hydrant would not be used if firemen were called to PMH. The needed repairs would cost about $500, Mr. Peacock said.

He said he has mentioned this need to PMH board members and administrators for years with no response. The hydrant located at the medical mall needs to be raised, Mr. Peacock said, and he has brought this to the attention of the mall owners, also with no response.

Mr. Muhlenthaler gave assurances the situation would be looked into.

Mr. Peacock asked the Commission for a $8500 donation to pay for repairs presently being made to the MFD's ladder truck. The repairs are being done at Roanoke and will be completed soon.

He noted that his department has had a financially hard year with the need to purchase air packs and other expenses. Mr. Peacock noted that this truck is the only ladder truck in the county available for mutual aid among the fire departments. There is a ladder truck at Snowshoe, he said, but it is too large to come off the mountain.

He said he needs a decision from the Commission at this meeting or he will have to go the bank for a loan, as the company will want payment when the truck is picked up.

Following a discussion on the possibility of running the money through the county Fire Board, the Commission voted to donate $8500 directly to the Marlinton Fire Department from the Coal Severance Fund, with the understanding that the truck is used county-wide in mutual aide.

The contract with Sandy Mallow as county Humane Officer was extended until the law can be researched to determine the proper language. During the recent trial in federal court in the lawsuit brought by the owner of horses that were taken by county officials due to alleged mistreatment, problems with the contract were noted by the judge.

On November 13, the Rev. David Rittenhouse, Craig Mullenax and Dorman Williams, from the Church of the Brethren in Durbin, did an excellent job of erecting the partition under very difficult circumstances to enclose the chapel area. The work of finishing the project will be done by two other volunteers from the Church of the Brethren, Jason Bauserman and James Meck. Chairs, pictures, a cross and other furnishings are still needed. Anyone desiring to contribute may contact the jailer, Forrest Scott or Rev. TenBrink.

THE PRIDE OF Pocahontas Warrior Marching Band has been invited to perform at Governor-Elect Joe Manchin's Inaugural Parade on Monday, January 17. The inaugural parade is the first since 1973 and the route will begin on Kanawha Boulevard past the Capitol Building and the Governor's Mansion. PCHS will perform along with 34 other high school bands from around the state, as well as the WVU and Marshall marching bands. This is a great honor and a wonderful opportunity for the band. *P. The chapel is now being used, not only to conduct regular worship services for the inmates and the staff of the county jail, but also as a private place for personal counselling and prayer with inmates. Unlike other worship services where it is hoped that everyone will be back the next week, this prison ministry is conducted in the hope that when inmate worshippers leave the premises their lives will be transformed by the power and love of God so that they will never be back.

Board receives report on Hillsboro School

The Board of Education met for a regular meeting on Monday of last week at the Hillsboro School.

Presentations were made to recognize both staff and student achievement.

Hillsboro School teacher Dona Saffer was presented with the Teacher of the Award by Elmer Pritt, Executive Director or RESA IV, and School Superintendent Patrick Law.

PCHS Principal Tom Sanders and Dr. Law presented the Star Farmer Award to Timothy VanReenen.

Hillsboro Principal Michelle Jeffers, members of her staff, and parents gave the Board an update on the activities at her school. She said Hillsboro has met the Adequate Yearly Progress Standards under No Child Left Behind law; fourth grade writing assessments were very good; a school-wide manners class has been started; the grant-funded after-school program is averaging 25 stu-dents each day; and a professional book study group is meeting each week.

The school has begun the use of an online program, school-notes.com, which allows teachers a way to communicate with parents, Ms. Jeffers said. She gave a demonstration of the program and said the school PTO is helping to fund it.

Ms. Jeffers told Board members that the needs at the school were more outside lighting, as there has been minor vandalism; a paved driveway or walkway; a half-time kitchen employee; and several maintenance jobs.

She reported that Boxley Materials Company has approached the school about becoming a business partner.

Darlene Arbogast, President of the Hillsboro Faculty Senate, introduced the new staff at the school. She said the elimination of multi-age classes has made a big difference at the school and that the students are also benefiting from the Reading First program. Ms. Arbogast said the school needs to have a

School Building Authority was coming to check on the floor the next day and a representative from the company that laid the new floor will be coming soon to take another look at it.

Fred Reed, a representative with Allegheny Power, met with the Board to discuss the high power costs at the field house at PCHS and ways to reduce this expense.

Erin Wooddell, student representative to the Board, introduced her successor, Renae Burks, who will begin her term with the next meeting. The student representative to the Board is selected by the students at the high school each year.

Keith Moore, coordinator of the Neighborhood Watch program in Marlinton, and Sheriff Robert Alkire met with the Board to request that a light be placed on the school-owned property in Marlinton along the Greenbrier River Trail. Mr. Moore explained the problems occurring in town that caused the forming of the watch program. He said the cost would be only $17 a month for the light and a pole is already on the site that can be used. Board President Kenneth Vance asked Dr. Law to look into the request.

An appeal of the suspension of a PCHS student was denied and the Board affirmed the action by the high school.

A revised policy for vacation policy for 261-day (full-time) employees was rejected by the Board. Although in general agreement with the policy, there was a feeling that the number of years of work required (19) before additional vacation days could be earned were too many. A revised policy will come to the Board at its next meeting.

The Board considered a proposal from Singer Sheet Metal Company, Inc., of Parkersburg, for the repair of snow and ice damaged gutter and roof panels at the high school as well as the installation of a snow and ice guard system on the gym roof. The cost is to be $21,950 for the repair work and $6000 for the snow/ice guard system.

Board members expressed concern about the cost and the small amount of information they had about the proposed work. The proposal was tabled until more information is available.

Dr. Law reported that committee working on the five-year plan for the county's school system has been meeting and will complete its work by February 1. A large group meeting will be held later. The plan is due by September 1. Good progress is being made, he said.

The Superintendent also reported on the new call-in system staff members to use when they need substitutes. A discussion of potential problems was held.

Approval was given to list of reading volunteers for the Marlinton Elementary School.

The meeting ended with an executive session on personnel.

The next regular meeting will be on January 24 at the Board of Education office.

Locals attend premier of Pocahontas Times film

Many local residents braved the cold weather to attend the local premier of -30- Cal Price and The Pocahontas Times at the McClintic Library.

Hosted by Library Director, Allen Johnson, and filmmaker, B.J. Gudmundsson, the event launched the road tour of the new documentary about small-town America as told through the story of The Pocahontas Times.

Marlinton Elementary student Seth Ramsey was rewarded for his attendance and his interest in local history. A copy of the film will be donated to the school in Seth's name. According to filmmaker, B.J. Gudmundsson, Patchwork Films is committed to promoting our heritage in the public schools.

She said, "Young people like hearing the stories of their local history. We only need to invite them to learn and to share the experience with us. Seth's enthusiasm is an indication that kids are excited about their history and that they are proud of where they come from."

The film hits the road on January 20 with a screening at Carnegie Hall-WV in Lewisburg followed by a show at the South Charleston Museum's historic LaBelle Theater on January 29. Future screenings will be announced.

The 100-minute documentary may be purchased on DVD and VHS by calling 304-645-4998 or visiting the website at PatchworkFilms.com. Proceeds from sales will be used to fund the road tour which will take the story of Pocahontas County to all 55 counties in West Virginia as well as cities outside the state. Folks may learn more about Cal Price and The Pocahontas Times by visiting CalPriceThirty.com.

Lesure reflects on service to the community

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Gayle Lesure said she was called at a young age to go into rural ministry in Appalachia.

After more than 16 years of service to Pocahontas County through Pocahontas Cooperative Parish, friends will be saying farewell to Lesure at an open house hosted by the parish this Saturday.

Lesure first came to Pocahontas County in April, 1988 after six years of rural ministry in Alabama and four years in North Carolina.

Immediately, Lesure, originally from East Long Meadow, Massachusetts, said she was struck by the people and the land in this area.

"The things I love about Pocahontas County are its beauty, its ruralness," she said. "It has a very hometown kind of atmosphere."

"It's the most rural place I've been," she observed, "but it is also the place with the most possibility and potential."

"Here the pace of life is relaxed. People enjoy life," Lesure added. "They're very committed to family, community and church."

Reflecting on the needs she has seen in Pocahontas County, Lesure noted there appears to be fewer full-time jobs with benefits available to those seeking work in Pocahontas County for a livable wage than when she first came in the late 1980s.

"When I first came here, you could probably find a full-time job with benefits just about anywhere in the county," she said. "Now, because of the economy and outside influences where people have pitched in to provide things like wood or heating oil to those who need it.

While there won't be another church and community worker assigned to fill the void left by Lesure, she noted a network of volunteers has been established that will carry on the work of the cooperative ministry.

"Whenever you leave a place, you want to leave it better than when you got there," Lesure said. "And I pray and hope that the cooperative ministry has done that."

Along with the central ministry and food pantry operated out of the office in Marlinton, cooperative parish ministries include annual retreats for youth and women, leadership and lay-person training, summer vacation Bible schools, a county work team that constructs wheel sure also credits the people, mentors and pastors in her life who saw something in her and taught her to recognize it by involving her in the community and ministries of the church.

"My church took very seriously the vows that they took at my baptism that they would teach me, nurture me and love me in the faith," she recalled.

At her pastor's prompting, she attended a retreat during high school intended to help students explore their calling into the ministry.

"I can remember to this day, standing out in this beautiful field that evening," Lesure said. "It was a beautiful moonlit night, and I had just heard a sermon on Isaiah 6, which was about the call of Isaiah."

"I just knew that God was calling me," she continued, "and

"Here the pace of life is relaxed. People enjoy life," Lesure added. "They're very committed to family, community and church."

Reflecting on the needs she has seen in Pocahontas County, Lesure noted there appears to be fewer full-time jobs with benefits available to those seeking work in Pocahontas County for a livable wage than when she first came in the late 1980s.

"When I first came here, you could probably find a full-time job with benefits just about anywhere in the county," she said. "Now, because of the economy and outside influences, full-time jobs are really hard to find. You can find a job, but they're usually part-time and the employers aren't able to offer benefits."

Lesure said it hasn't been uncommon for a couple to come into the cooperative parish office for help in paying bills, even though both are employed.

"We also need more housing units for people on low-incomes," Lesure observed.

"The other side of it, is that we have a lot of good things going for us," she continued. "I think that people here in Pocahontas County really care about folks. They care about their neighbors. They care about the community. They care about the quality of life."

The deep connection to the land and the county's natural resources that many Pocahontas County residents seem to have is also something Lesure sees as a strength and asset to the community.

"People really take an interest in this county about what happens around here," she said. "They really care."

"The people here will go that extra mile and help out anybody who's in need," she added, citing several examples

Lesure, she noted a network of volunteers has been established that will carry on the work of the cooperative ministry.

"Whenever you leave a place, you want to leave it better than when you got there," Lesure said. "And I pray and hope that the cooperative ministry has done that."

Along with the central ministry and food pantry operated out of the office in Marlinton, cooperative parish ministries include annual retreats for youth and women, leadership and lay-person training, summer vacation Bible schools, a county work team that constructs wheel chair ramps and does household repairs, counseling services and an additional food pantry serving the Durbin area.

Lesure attributes much of the ministry's success to the level of cooperation between churches across denominational lines.

"A lot of these churches are very small membership churches that, without cooperating with other churches, would not be able to do the ministries we do," she noted. "We've become much stronger as we've pulled together and shared resources, people and gifts. This has truly been a county-wide ministry."

"It is amazing to me that it doesn't matter how small you are, but how great your faith is," she added. "I give thanks to God for all we've been able to accomplish."

Over the years of rural ministry and service to some of the country's areas of greatest need, Lesure credits the strength of her calling and the people who have helped her along the way.

"What keeps me going is knowing that God has called me into this ministry," Lesure said.

Since she was a child, Le-my baptism that they would teach me, nurture me and love me in the faith," she recalled.

At her pastor's prompting, she attended a retreat during high school intended to help students explore their calling into the ministry.

"I can remember to this day, standing out in this beautiful field that evening," Lesure said. "It was a beautiful moonlit night, and I had just heard a sermon on Isaiah 6, which was about the call of Isaiah."

"I just knew that God was calling me," she continued, "and I said 'here I am, Lord, send me. I have no idea where you're sending me, but I'll go.'"

After high school, Lesure attended a college for Christian workers in Nashville, Tennessee where she prepared for the spiritual journey that would take her through Appalachia.

"What has inspired me has been that all along this journey I have met people who have mentored me, helped me, prayed for me, have been examples to me of how to live, to be and to do the Christian life of a servant," she continued.

Lesure noted she also grew up during the 1960s and that the messages of John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. had a profound impact on her and also inspired her to become a servant to the poor.

Lesure's official departure date is January 28. After that, she will continue her ministry in Clarksburg, where she will

ACHIEVING THE TOP three positions in the county Spelling Bee were Bridget Boothe, second, Trevor Caplinger, third, and Martin Prestage first.

Students honored at county spelling bee

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Eighteen students from Marlinton and Green Bank competed for a chance to go to Charleston at a spelling bee sponsored by The Pocahontas Times on Wednesday.

Michael Holstine, Business Manager for the National Radio Astronomy Observatory moderated the event, while language arts teachers Anne-Marie Thomas, of Marlinton Middle, June Taylor and Heather Holstine, both of Green Bank Elementary, judged the bee.

The competitors and their alternates gathered in the Green Bank Elementary School library for the intense, but friendly, one-hour bee, going nine rounds before only two spellers remained.

Students carefully and deliberately spelled out such words as courtyard, muskrat, piecemeal, aromatic and ravioli.

Appropriately enough, the winning word, spelled correctly by first-place winner Martin Prestage, a seventh-grader at Green Bank, was "applause."

Along with Prestage, second-place winner Bridget Boothe, eighth-grade, and third-place winner Trevor Caplinger, eighth grade, will have the opportunity to compete at the Charleston Gazette-Mail Regional Spelling Bee at Capital High School in Charleston, March 12.

All three attend Green Bank Elementary.

Those who fare well in the state's capital will advance to the 78th annual Scripps National Spelling Bee in Washington, D.C., May 31 through June 2.

The top six finishers from Wednesday's bee will also have the opportunity to compete in a regional spelling bee sponsored by RESA at Eastern Greenbrier High School, March 1.

The final results of The Pocahontas Times spelling bee were:

1st place: Martin Prestage, seventh grade, Green Bank

2nd place: Bridget Boothe, eighth grade, Green Bank

3rd place: Trevor Caplinger, eighth grade, Green Bank

4th place: Kim Pollard, sixth grade, Marlinton

5th place: Matt Wade, eighth grade, Green Bank

6th place: Jamie Boothe, sixth grade Green Bank.

ACHIEVING THE TOP three positions in the county Spelling Bee were Bridget Boothe, second, Trevor Caplinger, third, and Martin Prestage first.

Also participating in the spelling be were:

Marlinton Middle: Ellie Bell, Erica Beverage, Kelsey Nicholas, Abbi Hall, Morgan Williamson, Matthew Faulknier, Roger Ray and Gabrielle Cutlip;

Green Bank: Kelsea Curry, Karen Wilfong, Brittany Ramos and Janessa Turner.

Alternates present for the bee were:

Marlinton Middle: Mark Williamson, Breanne Malcom, Emili Auldridge, Nathan Hammons, Michelle Smith, Medina Ramsey, Adreanna Fisher, Chasity Gladwell and Dylan Cutlip;

Green Bank: Zach Chestnut, Sarah Shears, Brian Cummins, Amanda Nottingham, Jerry Simonin, Josh Arbogast, Kristy Madron, Chelsey Gum and William Taylor.

4-H clubs participate in newspaper recycling

To celebrate America Recycles Day in November, the Pocahontas County Solid Waste Authority along with County Disposal Service, Greenbrier Valley Solid Waste, and Pocahontas Recycling sponsored a contest to see which 4-H club could collect the most newspapers and magazines for recycling. Eight Pocahontas County 4-H clubs out of thirteen participated in the contest. The participants were Minnehaha Braves, Beaver Creek Beavers, Stony Bottom Rockbusters, Little Levels 4-H Club, Buckeye Winners, Brushy Flat Bushwackers, Onoto Warriors, and the Deer Creek Defenders. On November 20, they brought their collections to the Pocahontas County Landfill so they could be weighed. The 4-H'ers collected a total of 7.57 tons of newspapers and magazines for recyding!

This more than doubles the amount that was collected the last time a newspaper drive was held.

The two private haulers operating in the area, County Disposal Service and Greenbrier Valley Solid Waste, provided generous contributions of $225 each to make the contest possible. Pocahontas Recycling processed the items collected during the contest for further recycling. Each club that participated in the contest received $28 for their efforts. The two first place winners, the Beaver Creek Beavers and the Little Levels 4-H Club, each received $100. The third place winner, Minnehaha Braves, received $25. The clubs will use this money to help pay for 4-H camp expenses or to help fund other club activities and projects.

ON BEHALF OF the Solid Waste Authority, Connie Burns presents a first place check in the 4-H recycling contest to Tiffani Jackson, president of the Beaver Creek Beavers 4-H Club.

Obama considers visit to Iraq

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Barack Obama is considering a visit to Iraq this summer, his first to the war zone since becoming a presidential candidate.

Obama revealed his plans to The New York Times. He has been under criticism from Republican rival John McCain for failing to visit Iraq since 2006.

Obama also declined McCain's invitation for a joint trip.

"I just don't want to be involved in a political stunt," Obama said, according to a report on the newspaper's Web site Wednesday.

"I think that if I'm going to Iraq, then I'm there to talk to troops and talk to commanders," he said in the interview. "I'm not there to try to score political points or perform. The work they're doing there is too important."

Obama's campaign has been considering an overseas trip since last year to beef up his foreign policy credentials, but the contentious fight for the Democratic nomination with Hillary Rodham Clinton has delayed those plans.

"A trip is under consideration, but no final plans have been made," Obama spokesman Bill Burton said Wednesday.

Obama took his only trip to Iraq in January 2006, when he traveled as part of a congressional delegation. McCain has been criticizing him for not returning, and the Republican Party joined the attack Wednesday by launching an online clock to count the days since Obama last visited.

"This is about homecoming, not heartbreak," McCain said in a statement. "It's why I visit Iraq as often as I can, why I've been campaigning in Iraq, why I've been talking to Iraqi and coalition leaders, why I've been meeting with military commanders on the ground, and why I've been to Anbar province with the Marines on the ground, so I can show him the facts on the ground."

IRS warns of e-mail data scam

An e-mail purportedly from the Internal Revenue Service regarding economic stimulus payments is a scam, an IRS spokesman said Wednesday.

"We see these many, many times," said IRS spokesman Eric Erickson. "Currently, it's ranked number two on our list of the 'dirty dozen' tax scams."

The scam e-mail, which features the official IRS logo, reminds people that they are eligible for the economic stimulus payments, even if they did not have to file a personal income tax return this year.

It includes a link where people are instructed to submit personal data, including a bank account number -- supposedly so that the stimulus payment can be sent via direct deposit.

"The only way we're contacting people about the rebate are notices through the mail," Erickson said. "We never initiate contact of taxpayers by e-mail."

He noted that the IRS has no way of maintaining lists of e-mail addresses for taxpayers.

"If you think about it, you don't put your e-mail address on your tax return," he said.

Chaperone pleads guilty to abuse charges

Drew Tanner

Sheila Ann Ray Sharp pleaded guilty to three of 10 charges of child abuse resulting in a risk of injury Friday before Circuit Judge James Rowe.

Sharp, 37, of Marlinton, was chaperoning a field trip on May 5 when she was alleged to have pricked middle school students with a lancet as they traveled on a school bus, according to a criminal complaint filed by State Police Sergeant Glenn Galloway.

The small needles, known as lancets, are typically used by diabetics when testing their blood sugar levels.

Sharp allegedly pricked two 13-year-old students with a lancet, causing them to bleed.

The complaint states that Sharp then coerced the two students into jabbing other classmates on the bus with the same lancets.

At one point, Sharp held down a 13-year-old male student and directed a female classmate to jab the lancet into his skin repeatedly, according to the complaint.

A total of 10 seventh-grade students were pricked with the needles as the bus traveled from Marlinton Middle School to Mountain State University in Beckley, the complaint stated.

While there were two teachers and as many as five chaperones accompanying the 34 students on the bus, school officials were not aware of the incident until upset parents of the victims contacted them after the trip, said Pocahontas County Schools Superintendent Dr. Patrick Law.

The county Board of Education hired Dr. Martha Dean, executive director of the Association of School Administrators, to conduct an independent investigation into the incident.

Dean, who conducted her investigation in June, recommended that the school system require non-employee chaperones to sign a written agreement outlining conduct and responsibilities.

In her report to the board, Dean also recommended that a policy be developed that set out clear expectations of teachers, chaperones and students.

Adults should also be seated throughout the bus during trips, Dean wrote.

Dean's investigation showed that one of the teachers on the trip "came to the back of the bus one or more times to tell the students to behave themselves as they were being loud."

The report said the teacher did not see either the lancet or the "poking" that was occurring.

Students did not seem distressed nor did they report to any adult on the bus what was happening, according to the report.

However, one student did report the incident to a teacher riding the other bus when the students arrived at Mountain State University, the report said.

Students blamed an individual referred to in the report as "Student A," not Sharp, for jabbing them, according to the report.

In two written statements, Sharp admitted to jabbing the first two students and holding down the male student, according to Galloway's complaint.

Sharp also admitted to offering money to a female student to jab one of the teachers on the bus with the lancet, the officer wrote.

Dean's report said the incident was not planned by students and the students involved "did not protest loud enough to be heard with an understanding of what exactly was happening by the chaperones located in the other section(s) of the bus."

The victims of the incident had to undergo a series of tests—provided by the school system—for blood-borne diseases.

The mothers of five of the alleged victims sat in the courtroom during Friday's proceedings. None of them raised any objection when Rowe granted the prosecution's motion to dismiss the remaining seven counts against Sharp.

Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford said evidence showed the remaining victims were stabbed by a student, and not by Sharp. Those stabbings also appeared to have taken place outside of Pocahontas County, he said.

Under Rowe's order, Sharp will undergo a pre-sentencing evaluation by the court's probation department.

The judge advised the parents present Friday that they would have an opportunity to speak at Sharp's sentencing, January 5.

Chad Virgil Keaton, 23, of Marlinton pleaded guilty to misdemeanor destruction of property Friday.

Keaton was charged in August with conspiracy and attempted breaking and entering. Accompanied by two minors, Keaton attempted to break into J & S Coin Laundry in January to steal DVD movies, Weiford told the court.

Keaton and the youths fled the scene shortly after they were discovered throwing a cinder block through the glass door of the establishment. They were later found and apprehended in Marlinton.

With his plea to the misdemeanor Friday, the felony charges against Keaton were dismissed.

Keaton faces a possible fine of $500 or up to one year in jail.

Sentencing is scheduled for January 5.

Ministry helps families put food on the table

Dyve Tanner
Staff Writer

As families gather around the dinner table to give thanks this week, many will be thanking a local ministry for the very food before them.

Several hundred families came through the fellowship hall of First Baptist Church in Huntersville Saturday morning to pick up a bargain bushel of food through the church's Angel Food ministry.

In some cases, the families did not come to Huntersville themselves. Six partner churches in the area also pick up food for their parishioners, delivering it on the drive back or distributing it the next day.

In all, 404 families were served this month by the ministry, which is quickly becoming a local institution since it began in February and is a mainstay of First Baptist's many outreach programs.

Pastor Jerry Moore, wearing a navy blue seafarer's cap embroidered with the word "Captain," heads up a group of 35-40 volunteers who lend their time and energy picking up the food from a distribution point in Spencer and dolling out the orders to families from all over the county.

"This is the best fellowship this church has," said Moore. "They're working together, perhaps lasting people they haven't seen in a month. It's like a big reunion, and we eat all day long, like Baptists do."

A handful of women in the fellowship hall's kitchen provide the volunteers with refreshments throughout the morning and after the distribution.

But the food the volunteers get to the families "tickets" is the real story.

Angel Food Ministries, a Georgia nonprofit organization based in Monroe, Georgia began operation for 11 years as a nonprofit Christian organization, the program buys food through a federal subsidy.

The ministry began in February of 1994 lending 14 families' hands there, the program has grown by leaps and bounds. This month, for example, 404 families picked up their food.

Because of the assistance it receives from the federal government and the sheer amount of food ordered, the ministry offers an impressive menu at low cost.

"For a $65 worth of food, for $25," said Moore. "That's not a bad deal, either."

"It's restaurant quality food," Moore continued. "It's not out of date; there's no sawdust, no dented cans. It's Tyson chicken, Hunts tomato sauce—brands that we know: Kraft, Betty Crocker, Pillsbury."

Menus come out around the end of each month. A week or so later, orders and payment are due. In another couple weeks, Moore receives a phone call letting him know when to pick up the food. Food is usually picked up on a Friday and distributed the next day.

"The only drop point in West Virginia right now is Spencer," Moore said. "It's centrally located in the state, but it's a three-and-a-half hour trip for us."

Moore had a crew of 10 volunteers on hand to help unload the truck and get the food into the fellowship hall. Once there, the food is sorted by boxes and bagged. Then, each family's order is picked up from each of the 7 stations.

The atmosphere in the fellowship hall is boisterous. Families happy to be getting such a bargain on foodstuffs are greeted by smiling volunteers, eager to shoot a kind word as they put the respective items—steaks, apple pies, biscuit mix—in families' baskets.

"It's not just for needy families," said volunteer Patrick Law. "Anybody can put in an order. It's a lot of food for not a lot of money."

But for families who need to make every penny count, the ministry can help relieve some financial pressure.

Once volunteers finish loading her car, Rifle said she delivers the food to families in the Durbin area from Huntersville to Durbin.

"People on fixed incomes love this, because they can use their food stamps," said Moore. "There's enough food here to feed two people for a month. It helps people free up some money for their fuel bills or medicine bills."

Moore said that some people who are now participating in the program once ate only one meal a day and had no meat during heating season—from October until April.

"They've gotten on this program, and now they're eating two meals a day and meat with every meal," said Moore.

Extra items are often available during the monthly food distribution as well. On Saturday, volunteers were giving out 161 brand-new coats for children, courtesy of Maryland-based ministry Tender Loving Care.

That ministry also provides Huntersville Baptist with coats for children at Christmas. Rifle said she keeps the word of school coat [illegible]

In the case of the coats, families were able to specify what sizes they needed for their children, and volunteer Madora Smith, who oversaw Saturday's coat distribution.

While countless volunteer hours go into each month's efforts, volunteer Louise Barnisky said Angel Food and the clothing ministry are getting some additional help.

"You know who's doing this? The good Lord," she said. "He's taking care of us."

Perhaps moved by the spirit, or maybe by the scene unfolding in First Baptist's fellowship hall, a gentleman gave Barnisky a surprise Saturday morning.

"I just had a man give me a check for $100 and tell me 'Go buy some Angel Food for the people,'" she said.

FAMILIES WHO CAME to Saturday's food distribution got an extra bonus: mission teams that come to the area this summer left cases of canned goods to be given away.

SWA will not pay attorney fees

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The lawyer collecting delinquent green box fees for the Solid Waste Authority is not getting paid this month.

In a split vote August 30, the board of the SWA disagreed on whether the $7,800 bill from Elkins attorney David Sims should be paid.

The bill includes work Sims and his staff have done since the first of the year to collect unpaid green box fees from a handful of county residents. It also includes case work on a billing dispute— from the same fee—that went before the West Virginia Public Service Commission earlier this year.

"Sims was never properly retained in either case," said board member John Leyzorek.

Leyzorek disputed the bill from Sims, saying the attorney never had a formal contract with the Solid Waste Authority. Instead, Leyzorek said, SWA President Ed Riley hired Sims without the board's approval.

Riley said Sims was, in fact, hired by the SWA, and a motion approving Sims to represent the board was passed in 2000.

Leyzorek, who has attended SWA meetings religiously in the years leading up to his appointment to the board last November, said the motion Riley referred to was "to pursue collection" of unpaid green box fees, and did not mention hiring Sims.

Riley said Sims was retained several years ago to represent the SWA before the PSC.

"At that time, we needed someone to argue before the Public Service Commission. Nobody in Pocahontas County wanted to argue it," Riley explained.

While no local attorneys would represent the SWA, Riley said Sims was recommended to him.

The state Attorney General's office sent the SWA a letter approving Sims as its attorney, Riley added.

Despite the Attorney General's approval, Sims did not have a contract with the SWA, Leyzorek insisted.

Board member Jim Burks said he was also reluctant to pay the bill for financial, rather than legal, reasons.

"We've spent an awful lot of money to collect very little money," Burks said. "In the real world, we'd go b-r-o-k-e paying lawyers."

Burks said he was also concerned that the bill was not presented in a timely manner.

"I have asked all along, 'where are the legal bills,'" he added.

With the bills before him Wednesday night, Burks showed his disappointment with the return the board was getting on its legal representation.

"I think we're being ripped," Burks said. "We have squandered a lot of money in these small cases to prove a point. I'm concerned whether we have that kind of money."

Riley, agitated by Leyzorek's and Burks' criticisms of the attorney, stood by the work Sims did for the authority.

"He did win our case before the Public Service Commission," Riley noted, referring to the green box fee complaint filed by a couple from Charleston.

Charles and Karen Wilkinson own a camp in Pocahontas County, but they said they never use the green box dumpsters. Instead, the Wilkinsons told the PSC, they haul the trash they generate back to their home in Charleston where they pay for trash pick-up.

On July 31, the PSC ruled that camp owners like the Wilkinsons still had to pay the county's green box fee. However, the commission also

The Pocahontas County Commission Tuesday morning appointed Scott Millican, a realtor who lives near Snowshoe, to replace former chairman Calvin Hill on the board of the Public Service District. Hill resigned in July, citing concerns over the Slaty Fork sewer project.

Commissioners said this vacancy is not easy to fill.

"You really have a hard time getting people to serve," said Commissioner James Carpenter.

Sam Gibson, of Slaty Fork, was also interested, Commissioners said. However, Carpenter said he would not vote for anyone who works for Snowshoe, as Gibson does part-time, because there would be a conflict of interest, or at least a perceived conflict. Commissioner Reta Griffith said the Snowshoe paycheck would likely tie the board member's hands on sewer-project related votes.

Millican's term will expire in June of 2012.

Also Tuesday morning, Commissioners had a long conversation with a former member of the Statewide Addressing and Mapping Board.

Tom Williams has a long history with the addressing and mapping project. He was appointed to the mapping board in 2001, and served until his retirement from Verizon in June of this year. He told the Commission he wrote the original white paper outlining the project and convinced his company to invest $15 million in it. Now, he works for the project manager, Michael Baker Jr., Inc.

Williams came to the Commission in response to a letter in which Commissioners outlined their concerns over the way the project was handled after the mapping board fired its contractor, MicroData GIS, for unsatisfactory work.

The money that was left from the original $15 million budget was to be divided up among the counties according to population. Commissioners didn't feel that was fair and said road miles, square miles, and percent of the project completed in each county should weigh more heavily in the funding formula.

Williams said the funding formula is a work in progress. Under the formula published in the draft plan, Pocahontas County gets $12,000. Griffith, along with 911 Coordinator Bill McLaughlin, came up with another suggestion, which gives the county about $82,000, though Griffith said Tuesday that figure is probably unrealistic.

Carpenter said Pocahontas County was unable to prepare to handle this project, because of what the Commission was being told by project managers.

"For the last four years," he said, "we were told it's going to be taken care of and it's not going to cost the counties anything." Griffith added that if the Commission had known this was coming, it could have budgeted accordingly.

Williams insisted the county is not starting from scratch, and is not being left on its own.

"What we have now," he said, "is a framework."

The mapping board will create web-based tools, he said, that will enable all counties to coordinate their addressing systems and will automatically assign addresses for existing and future structures. He also noted that the county has aerial photography and digital mapping that it did not have before the project began.

He said MicroData will be

PSC approves Beech Ridge wind project, opponents gear up for new legal battle

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Wind power opponents in Greenbrier County were dealt a hard blow by the state Public Service Commission last week.

The PSC approved the $300 million Beech Ridge wind energy project in an order issued late Monday, August 28.

The following day, David Buhrman, media spokesman for Mountain Communities for Responsible Energy said his group planned to ask the PSC to reconsider its decision.

"The PSC gave Beech Ridge everything and the 4-1 opposition nothing," said Buhrman, referring to more than 3,300 letters the commission received concerning the project. [illegible] percent of the [illegible] to deny Beech Ridge's application, according to the commission's documents.

Buhrman said the request for reconsideration would be issued later this week. The group was wording its request carefully, Buhrman said, as it will set the tone for an appeal to the West Virginia Supreme Court.

Members of MCRE have led an organized opposition to the project during the past year, encouraging people to write letters to the commission and attend public hearings on the wind project.

The PSC's decision came little more than a month after it dismissed Liberty Gap Wind Force's application to build a 50-turbine wind farm on Jack Mountain in Pendleton County.

The 124-turbine wind farm would stretch across 23 miles of ridgeline leased to Beech Ridge by MeadWestvaco in northern Greenbrier County. A 13.8-mile transmission line would connect the facility to Allegheny Power's Grassy Falls substation near Nettie.

Once constructed, Beech Ridge would be one of the largest wind turbine installations east of the Mississippi. It would also be the largest such facility in West Virginia—[illegible] times the size of the state's only existing wind farm in Tucker County.

Beech Ridge, a subsidiary of Chicago-based Invenergy, estimates the project will generate enough electricity for 50,000 homes, or about 186 megawatts.

The company has said it hopes to start construction this April. The turbines could be up and generating electricity as early as December 2007.

Buhrman said that time line appears overly optimistic.

"It's surprising to me that they would not think a project this large would take a long time," Buhrman said.

Two other wind projects—the 166-turbine Mount Storm in Grant and Tucker counties and the 200-turbine Ned Power wind farm in Grant County—received PSC approval in 2002 and 2003, respectively.

Buhrman pointed out that neither project has erected a single turbine, as both are tangled up in litigation.

Invenergy currently operates a wind-power facility in Oak Ridge, Tennessee. In addition, the company is also building wind farms in Colorado, Idaho and Montana.

The electricity from Beech Ridge would be connected to the nation's electrical power grid and sold on the open market.

Opponents of the project have argued that most of that energy would be going out of the state.

Nonetheless, PSC commissioners say the electricity is needed.

No one has disputed that energy is needed in the east coast region, where it is estimated that the reserve margin—the difference between existing capacity to generate power and demand for electric power—will be reduced from 18.3 percent in 2005 to as low as 4.1 percent in 2014, causing the region to exceed its reliability design limit," the commission stated in its order.

The commission said the facilities that generate electricity in the east are aging; as much as 76 percent of the east's power plants will be over 30 years old by 2010.

The country also needs additional electricity generated from renewable resources, the commission stated.

"The power grid is interconnected, and to safeguard the availability of a productive, well-maintained grid to our state's residents, West Virginia must participate in the interconnected electric system," the order said.

Buhrman said that conservation, not more capacity, was the answer to the region's energy demands.

"Conservation has saved more energy in the last 30 years than all of the renewable projects so far," said Buhrman. "If it was really efficient and really combated global warming you would not hear us complaining."

Rather than subsidize wind projects, the government should be rewarding people who replace old appliances and cars with newer, more efficient models, Buhrman suggested.

While Beech Ridge project leaders have touted the wind farm as a source of clean, renewable energy, Buhrman said wind projects are doing little to reduce demand for West Virginia's low-sulphur coal.

"No one should assume wind turbine installation is going to prevent mountain top removal," Buhrman said. "The low sulphur coal in West Virginia's mountains is an extremely valuable, exportable product."

Even if the U.S. stopped burning coal, Buhrman said, there would still be global demand for coal from West Virginia.

Environmental arguments notwithstanding, the PSC also evaluated the project on its economic impact.

While PSC staff noted the project "will not create many jobs," the commission's order acknowledged the wind farm would generate $400,000 in annual taxes for Greenbrier County and $200,000 for the state.

Combs acquitted of DUI

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Jurors found Larry Combs not guilty of driving under the influence of alcohol Tuesday, sparing him a mandatory one-to-three-year sentence in what could have been his third DUI conviction.

Combs, 47, of Hillsboro, was stopped by Deputy Troy McCoy last August while driving on U.S. Route 219 on Droop Mountain. McCoy, who had made a DUI arrest earlier in the evening, was driving northbound behind Combs' car when he saw him swerve off the road.

During Tuesday's trial defense attorney Eugene Simmons argued it wasn't uncommon for a driver to get nervous and swerve with a police car looming in the rearview mirror.

According to Simmons, Combs saw McCoy was following him closely and pulled over before the deputy turned on his flashing lights.

Combs was driving back from giving guitar lessons in Greenbrier County the evening of his arrest.

One of Combs' students, David McClure, testified that his teacher appeared sober and did not have anything to drink at his house, Simmons said.

The other student he visited that evening, Keith Boggs, said Combs had no more than one beer during the course of their lesson.

In a video tape of the traffic stop on Droop Mountain recorded by McCoy, Combs admitted to having a couple of beers.

When asked to take a breathalyzer test, Combs refused, saying his attorney had advised him against doing so.

McCoy testified that Combs failed a field sobriety test, which was recorded on the video.

Both Simmons and Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford said they felt the video's depiction of Combs supported their respective cases.

"From what the jury saw in the video, I thought [Combs] did fine," Simmons said.

Weiford said he thought the video demonstrated that Combs was intoxicated when McCoy pulled him over.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:
In My Opinion: the bad news and the good news

Since the Public Service Commission's decision to approve Beech Ridge's application to build wind turbines in Greenbrier County, I have been mulling over how to respond to this serious infringement on my rights. I am angry, shocked, and outraged.

I feel that the PSC has been neglectful. They have not protected me, or the citizens of Greenbrier County, from a company that does not have my (our) best interests at heart.

Fortunately, there is good news too. The good news is that my (our) civil rights are still protected under the Constitution of this fine nation. I (we) have the right to appeal, to challenge, and to litigate. I therefore pledge, to my children and grandchildren, that the fight is not over. I will protect their legacy and continue to make those people accountable for what they are trying to do to our state. In addition, I would also like to assure all those friends, neighbors and concerned citizens, who have joined me in the fight against Beech Ridge, that the battle is not over.

Sincerely,
Alan Rudley

Dear Editor:

The use of eminent domain to take Sharp's farm property is obviously still ongoing in spite of the many legitimate safety and legal reasons against it.

Concerns of educated and knowledgeable engineers and geologists have simply gone unanswered. At the latest PSD meeting Tuesday, August 29, it was reiterated from previous announcements that Pendleton County Bank will likely bankroll the acquisition of the Sharp property by eminent domain with Snowshoe "securing" the loan. This will be a disgrace and a black mark against Pocahontas County and West Virginia for all time.

The use of eminent domain to take private property which hosts and supports a miracle of nature, a beautiful, large, "wild" cold spring and a cemetery, with the founders of this community actually buried in the meadow and also within yards up the hillside of the proposed site is unjustifiable. This sewage treatment plant will serve only a handful of people in the five-mile stretch between Linwood Road and Sharp's Store. Within only a few feet of the proposed sewage treatment plant site is my mother, age 94, who has lived on this spot for 66 years and will be forced from her home. Justifying this project as a "regional plant" requires some seriously warped reasoning and will set a precedent which will never be overcome.

It is a well-known fact that Snowshoe has been actively engaged in taking the Sharp property. This is abundantly clear from well more than a year ago when Snowshoe bought and paid for a full page ad in this newspaper (written under the guise and signature of W.D. Smith who heads the state regional agency spearheading this project) which touted the sewage treatment plant and the Sharp Farmland as the right place, the right time. Snowshoe has been the proverbial "wolf in sheep's clothing" throughout this ordeal. This engagement by private industry endorsing the acquisition by eminent domain for their own use brought the following comments to my mother and me in a letter dated July 25 from county resident and U. S. Senator John D. Rockefeller:

"Governments have traditionally used the power of eminent domain when the acquisition of real property is necessary for the completion of a public project such as a road, and the owner of the required property and the government entity have been unable to agree on a price for its sale. The ability of private industry to be included in the decision making process, in which the non-governmental entity has direct commercial interest in the taking of an individual's property raises many concerns. I certainly understand your concern over this issue. The protection of the historical and culturally significant areas of West Virginia is very important to me. Like many West Virginians, I am concerned by this...and I can assure you that I will continue to monitor this situation over the coming months."

Clearly, Rockefeller and, I believe, most of the county are aware and understand that [eminent domain] is so unnecessary. Why, then, is it so hard for county commissioners and the two remaining PSD members to understand? This travesty of justice must end; public land is available as Governor Manchin has made perfectly clear. The use of eminent domain to take private, historic property for the use of a private entity cannot be condoned. A solution to this problem is one phone call away. Will any county commissioner or PSD member make it?

We all lose if they do not. The solution is there for the asking.

Dear Editor,

Please thank Drew Tanner for his great articles about the natural wonders of our county. I keep a collection of his articles to get to the places and see these wonders right near me. Also Pam Pritt's articles on places to visit for refreshment and good food gives me places to bring guests and places to go for the special treat of eating out. Again thanks so much. Also the article on the swimming holes in the county was delightful to read. As a newcomer, I appreciate the info these writers give to me. Thanks again!

Green Bank telescope yields trio of discoveries

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The fastest-spinning pulsar, a "superbubble" of hydrogen gas rising light years above the Milky Way galaxy and a magnetic "slinky" in the constellation Orion are among recent discoveries made using the Green Bank Telescope.

The trio of discoveries were announced last week during an American Astronomical Society meeting in Washington, D.C.

Using the National Science Foundation's Robert C. Byrd Green Bank Telescope, astronomers discovered the fastest-spinning neutron star ever found.

The dense, 20-mile-diameter pulsar whirls faster than the blades of a kitchen blender.

The scientists discovered the pulsar in a globular cluster of stars called Terzan 5, located some 28,000 light-years from Earth in the constellation Sagittarius.

Pulsars are spinning neutron stars that sling beams of radio waves or light around as they spin, similar to a lighthouse.

A neutron star is what is left after a massive star explodes at the end of its "normal" life.

The discovery yields important new information about the nature of one of the most exotic forms of matter known in the Universe.

"We believe that the matter in neutron stars is denser than an atomic nucleus, but it is not clear by how much. Our observations of such a rapidly rotating star set a hard upper limit on its size, and hence on how dense the star can be," said Jason Hessels, a graduate student at McGill University in Montreal in a media release from the observatory. Hessels and his colleagues presented their findings to the American Astronomical Society.

"Neutron stars are incredible laboratories for learning about the physics of the fundamental particles of nature, and this pulsar has given us an important new limit," explained Scott Ransom, an astronomer at the National Radio Astronomy Observatory and one of Hessels' collaborators.

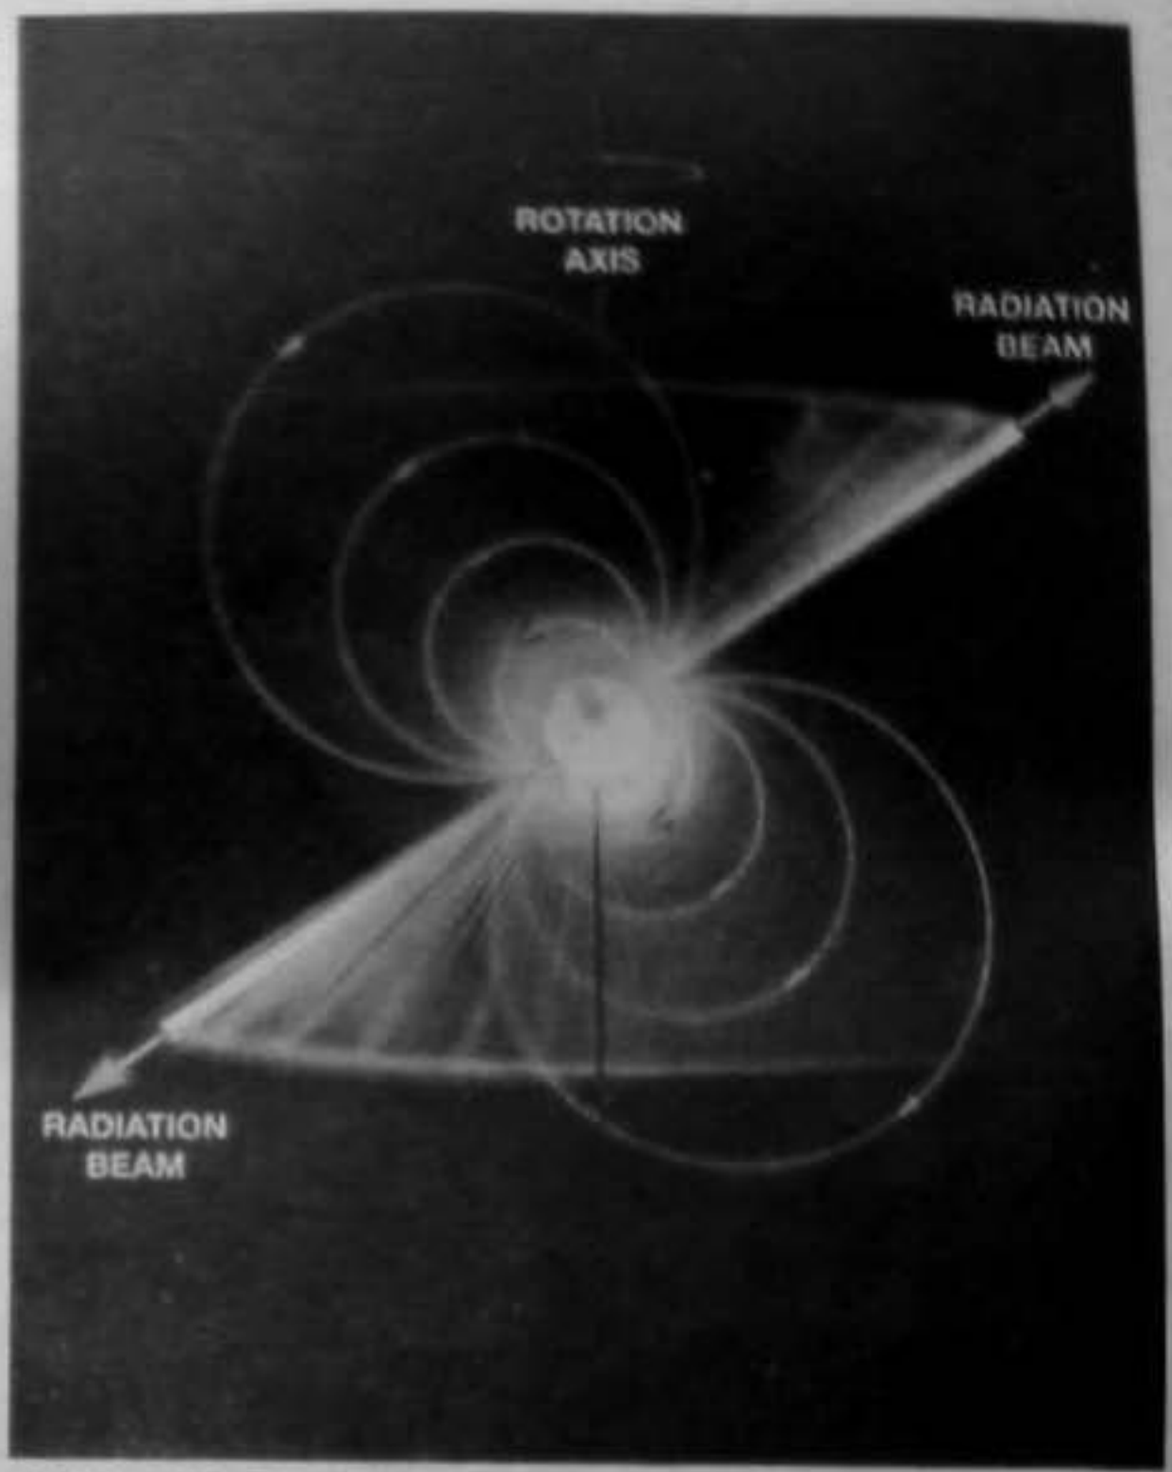
The newly-discovered pulsar is spinning 716 times per second, or at 716 Hertz (Hz), which easily beats the previous record of 642 Hz by a pulsar discovered in 1982.

For comparison, the fastest speeds of common kitchen blenders are 250-500 Hz.

The scientists say the object's fast rotation means that it cannot be any larger than about 20 miles across.

"If it were any larger, material from the surface would be flung into orbit around the star," Hessels said.

The spinning pulsar also has a companion star that orbits it once every 26 hours. The companion passes in front of the pulsar, eclipsing the pulsar about 40 percent of the time. The long eclipse period, probably due to bloating of the companion, makes it difficult for the astronomers to learn details of the orbital configuration that would allow them to precisely measure the masses of the pulsar and its companion.



ONE OF THREE recent discoveries made with the Green Bank Telescope was a pulsar that spins far faster than the typical kitchen blender. Graphic by Bill Saxton, NRAO/AUI/NSF

Using the Green Bank Telescope, the astronomers have found 30 new, fast "millisecond pulsars" in the cluster Terzan 5, making 33 known pulsars in the cluster.

It is the largest number of such pulsars ever found in a single globular cluster.

The great sensitivity of the giant, 100-meter diameter Green Bank Telescope, along with a special signal processor, called the Pulsar Spigot, made possible the discovery of so many millisecond pulsars in Terzan 5.

"We think there are many more pulsars to be found in Terzan 5 and other clusters, and given that the fast ones are often

Candidates file for May election

Pamela Pritt
Editor

Election season opened January 9 and, so far, five people in Pocahontas County have filed for office.

One county commission seat has drawn the most interest, with three men from the Southern District filing as candidates. And it looks like "deja vu all over again" as all three have been on the ballot for that seat in the past.

Sitting county commission president Joel Callison, a Democrat, has filed for reelection. Callison, of Hillsboro, is seeking a third term in county government.

But the commissioner has opposition in the spring. Martin Saffer, also of Hillsboro, will run for the office, as well. Saffer sought the post in 1988.

Whichever Democrat makes it past the May Primary, he will face Republican candidate Norman Alderman, a resident of Beaver Creek.

Alderman first defeated Saffer in the 1988 General Election and held the Southern District seat for six years; however, Alderman was in turn defeated by Callison in 1994.

Although three board of education seats are up for grabs, thus far only one candidate has filed.

Emery Grimes, who is currently on the board, has filed for reelection from the Northern District.

Grimes filled the unexpired term of Kermit Friel, who resigned.

Two Southern District seats are also open this year. Those seats are currently held by Ruth Taylor and Tom VanReenen.

Jeremy Bauserman has filed for the Republican Executive Committee to represent the Northern District.

The last day to file is Saturday, January 28. The county clerk's office will be open until 4:30 p.m. that day.

Sacra sentenced to penitentiary after violating home confinement

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Before Chief Circuit Judge James Rowe sentenced Joseph Eric Sacra on January 5, Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford asked the judge to send the message that home incarceration is, in fact, incarceration.

Sacra, 24, of Hillsboro, had served several months under the county's home incarceration program after being convicted in 2003 of transporting a controlled substance onto the grounds of the county jail.

Pocahontas County home incarceration supervisor Kevin White asked to have Sacra removed from the program. A visit by White to Sacra's home in late December revealed Sacra had violated several conditions of the program, including having alcohol in his home and visitors who were of disreputible character.

While public defender Dewitt Daniell attempted to paint Sacra as the victim of the actions of his unwitting buddies, Rowe said Sacra's actions constituted "substantial violations" of the terms of his confinement.

Rowe reimposed a penitentiary sentence of two-to-10 years and only gave Sacra credit for time already served in jail, not in the home incarceration program.

Continuing with Thursday's busy docket, Rowe sentenced two of the three youths convicted of stealing a truck from a Marlinton car dealership to the youthful offender program at Anthony Correctional Center.

David W. Mace, 19, of Marlinton, and Jeremy N. Biggs, 19, of White Sulphur Springs, will serve six-to 24 months in the program. Both pleaded guilty in November to grand larceny. Charges of third-degree arson, in connection with the burning of the stolen vehicle, were dismissed.

Rowe suspended penitentiary sentences of one-to-10 years in both cases.

Rowe ordered that the third accomplice, Kenny D. Feury, Jr., undergo a 60-day evaluation period at Anthony Correctional Center to determine if he is a suitable candidate for the youthful offender program.

Feury, 27, of Rupert, pleaded guilty to grand larceny in November. A charge of third-degree arson was likewise dismissed.

In a separate case, Brandon Lee Mace, 18, of Hillsboro, was also sentenced to the youthful offender program in lieu of a one-year jail sentence.

Mace had pleaded guilty in November to petit larceny.

According to the indictment issued in August, Mace and a juvenile found their way into a vendor's tent late at night during the July Pioneer Days festival in Marlinton. The two made off with several hundred dollars worth of designer and camouflage shirts, pants and jackets from the tent, the indictment stated.

Christy Lynn Clendenen, no age or address available, received five years probation, in lieu of a one-year jail sentence, for a misdemeanor charge of failure to support a minor child.

Bail for Israel Davis, 27, of Bartow, was revoked after he admitted to breaking his bail agreement.

Rowe denied a request by Daniels to reinstate Davis' bond, saying the court had shown some leniency by offering Davis, who awaits trial on a charge of first degree murder, the opportunity to be on bail.

Rowe also revoked probation for Lisa K. Brewer, 31, of Hillsboro, after a random drug test came back positive for benzodiazapene.

Brewer was placed under two years of probation after she pleaded guilty do a drug delivery charge in March 2005.

Brewer was placed in the Tygart Valley Regional Jail until her evidentiary hearing.

Dear Editor:

I live in Kanawha County and have a summer camp in Pocahontas County near Seebert. I have received notice that the taxes will be increased on camps and summer homes if they are not occupied six months each year.

Now I have been using my camp and paying taxes for 55 years.

Our problem, that I would like to address, is the continued breaking and entering in the Seebert area. It seems that the thieves are never caught. It is disheartening to have your camp doors damaged and your property ransacked.

Now, with the extra tax money, I hope the county law enforcement will put an end to this breaking and entering problem in the Seebert area.

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the clarification that "The loans for the sewage treatment plant will be paid by the treatment plant customers, not all residents of Pocahontas County." This may make many county residents breathe easier—those who don't have to either pay for or smell the treatment plant—now, but they may still have some things to consider.

Cost overruns seem to be the norm rather than the exception on projects like this. Will the customers of the plant have to pay the increased cost, or will the cost need to be financed in some other way which could impact the rest of the county? I recall reading that the state has requirements that identify how much a customer can be charged based, I believe, on the average income of the area residents.

Will the loan holders extend the life of the loan, or will other arrangements need to be made, arrangements that could spread the cost across the county?

Who pays if the opponents of the proposed site are right and there are problems with the plant on karst terrain and it has to be abandoned or closed for modification? Who will pay for the work that was done if the customers aren't receiving the service?

We may all hope that the plant is effective, efficient, odor-free, with no damage to the environment either visually or physically, and has no cost overruns. But who pays if it doesn't turn out that way?

John Shipley

Dear Editor:

In regards to Bill McNeel's comments and Tom Shipley's letter which were published last week, I wholeheartedly agree with both gentlemen that the proposed sewage treatment plant location on the Sharp farm is inappropriate at best. In fact, based upon the responses and signatures I received on a petition against the site, I estimate that at least 90% of our county residents are against the proposed location.

With this in mind, one would think, in a representative government, that the elected politicians would pay attention to such a contentious issue and would work toward resolving same to the betterment of the majority. This seems so rational to me that I cannot understand why the County Commission and PSD are so resolute in insisting that the Sharp Farm is the proper location.

On another matter, one would think that the structure of the county commission (northern, central, and southern parts of Pocahontas County are represented by one commissioner each) would extend to the Public Service District (PSD) on the same representative basis. Instead and incredibly, the county commission saw fit to select all three PSD members from the same town in the northern part of the county. If this doesn't violate some principle of representative government, then all rationale must be tossed out the window.

An evening of 'pickin' on the porch' at the Opera House

The Pocahontas County Opera House will transform itself into a front porch for an informal gathering of local musicians on Saturday, January 28, at 7:30 p.m. Bring the whole family for a toe-tapping evening of "Pickin' on the Porch." Tickets are $5 and can be purchased only at the door. Children through age 12 will be admitted free.

The evening will feature old-time tunes that truly embody the cultural history of Appalachia and the musical traditions of those immigrants who settled these rugged, yet beautiful, mountains of West Virginia.

Performing will be Pam Lund, Alan Duchess, Jay Lockman, Terry Richardson and Norris Long, members of local old time bands Cranberry Rock and The Brown Baggers.

These musicians draw their inspiration as old-time string band performers from the days when there were virtually no radios, and travel between hollows was limited. Although these performers come from extremely diverse musical backgrounds, each has a deep respect for the music of those who came before them, and each feels they are here to pickup were generachian music – dance tunes that were ancient even when this country was young, as well as "newer" music adapted to old time playing. Dear Editor:

I live in Kanawha County and have a summer camp in Pocahontas County near Seebert. I have received notice that the taxes will be increased on camps and summer homes if they are not occupied six months each year.

Now I have been using my camp and paying taxes for 55 years.

Our problem, that I would like to address, is the continued breaking and entering in the Seebert area. It seems that the thieves are never caught. It is disheartening to have your camp doors damaged and your property ransacked.

Now, with the extra tax money, I hope the county law enforcement will put an end to this breaking and entering problem in the Seebert area.

Dear Editor:

Early Sunday morning my 22-year-old son Eric woke me to a chimney flue fire.

Without his alert and help, it could have been a tragedy. He helped his 20-year-old handicapped sister and his 13-year-old sister to safety while I called 9-1-1. Thank you, dear son.

I also want to thank a wonderful young man who was first to arrive at the scene. Unfortunately, I never got his name. The night was a blur, but his help and kindness were overwhelming. It meant so much to me.

Thanks to Carmella, my neighbor, for seeing that we were all right and for notifying my landlord, Mary Jane Vanderlick, whose calming voice also settled my heart. I have never met a dearer person than Mary Jane.

Also thank you to all the Marlinton Volunteer Fire Department for swiftly clearing my home of smoke and the burning wall. I know you all had to get out of bed on a cold night to help us.

Last, but not least, thank you to Eric Kinsley and Shaun Black who got here

Deaths

Melanie Malcomb Shafer

Melanie Malcomb Shafer, age 54, of Marlinton, died Wednesday, February 15, 2006, in Roanoke, Virginia.

Born in Marlinton March 16, 1951, she was the daughter of Fayree Fuell Malcomb, of Marlinton, and the late Claude Malcomb.

She was the owner of The River Place Restaurant in Marlinton, and was a member of the Marlinton Presbyterian Church and also attended First Baptist Church of Huntersville.

Surviving her are her mother; four daughters, Philena Claudette Horton and Philippa Oleta Shafer, both of Marlinton, Philissa Mary Taylor, of Roanoke, Virginia, and Philanie (P.J.) Jane Jiles, of Oak Hill; brother, Steve Malcomb, of Lewisburg; and nine grandchildren.

Her father and a sister, Joy Anderson, preceded her in death.

Services were held Saturday afternoon at the Marlinton Presbyterian Church by the Rev. Jerry Moore and the Rev. Greg Moore.

Memorial gifts may be made to Marlinton Presbyterian Church or Huntersville Baptist Church.

Marlinton man pleads guilty to drug charge

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

A Marlinton man entered a guilty plea to a misdemeanor drug charge and had his bond revoked after a drug test showed he had marijuana in his system Friday morning.

George Daniel Sewell, 47, of Marlinton pleaded guilty to misdemeanor possession of cocaine before Webster County Judge Jack Alsop, who sat in for Circuit Judge Frank Jolliffe.

In December a grand jury indicted Sewell on a felony charge of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

Before placing Sewell back on bond until his sentencing date, Alsop requested he undergo a drug test before leaving the courthouse.

When the drug test came back positive for marijuana later that morning, Alsop revoked Sewell's bond at the request of Prosecuting Attorney Walt Weiford.

Public Defender Keith McMillion opposed Weiford's motion to revoke Sewell's bond, saying the test was only a field test and had not been confirmed by a lab.

Alsop scheduled a bond revocation hearing for March 10.

Alsop also granted several motions in the case of Daniel E. Akers.

In December Akers, 43, of Buckeye, was charged with burglary and stalking while a protective order was in effect.

As Akers was initially charged in magistrate court with seven different offenses that occurred on the same evening, his bail was raised from $51,000 to $150,000 cash said attorney Harry Smith, III.

Smith asked Alsop to reduce Akers' bail, noting that his client – a lifelong county resident and business owner – was unlikely to flee before trial and that he had to borrow money for his bail from a number of relatives.

For comparison, Smith said, the maximum bail for meth lab or drug possession charges is typically $25,000 and $50,000 for wanton endangerment.

In reply, Weiford said his only concern was "the peace and protection of the victim." Akers had violated a number of protective orders in the past, he said. Since Akers posted bail, Weiford observed, there have been no incidents between Akers and the victim.

Weiford said he felt the amount of the bond was appropriate and was accomplishing its purpose of keeping Akers in compliance with the law.

Alsop lowered Akers' bond from $150,000 to $100,000 and told him the court would not hesitate to incarcerate him if he violated the terms of his bail.

Alsop granted another motion from Smith to separate the burglary charge and the stalking charge into two separate trials, on the grounds that the evidence from one charge might influence the jury's decision on the other.

Alsop also granted Smith's motion for a transcript of the grand jury proceedings from December concerning Akers' case.

A motion to strike language from the burglary charge concerning stalking was taken under advisement by Alsop, pending a review of the grand jury transcript.

In the Town of Marlinton embezzlement case, Weiford brought a motion before Alsop requesting an in camera hearing. Weiford said he intended to introduce evidence in testimony regarding former town treasurer Linda McLaughlin's course of conduct during the period she was alleged to have embezzled

Judge rejects Browns Mountain quarry decision

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

A Kanawha Circuit Judge has said state regulators need to take another look at the permit they denied for a quarry near Huntersville.

In a letter dated February 6, Kanawha Circuit Judge Paul Zakaib, Jr., ruled that the state Surface Mine Board misinterpreted the law when it denied an application from Waco Oil and Gas to mine a 79-acre quarry on Browns Mountain near State Route 39.

The Surface Mine Board issued its decision after Waco appealed a similar decision by the Department of Environmental Protection to deny the permit.

"This case is not an easy study for the court," Zakaib said in his letter to Waco officials and state regulators. His ruling came nearly three years after Waco filed its appealed of the Surface Mine Board's decision.

Waco owner Ike Morris, who recently built a large log home near the site, said Tuesday he is still interested in seeing a quarry operate on his company's Browns Mountain property.

"This thing got blown way out of proportion to start with," Morris said. "You don't stop driving down Route 19 from I-79 because there is a highwall along the road, do you?"

But such changes to the scenery along WV-39 were among the reasons state regulators blocked the quarry.

In his July 2002 ruling, then-DEP mining director Matthew Crum said the quarry would "have an adverse impact on local residents and the environment."

In a letter to the company, Crum said the location of the proposed quarry would prevent adjacent landowners from the normal use and enjoyment of their properties and lead to a decline in property values.

The quarry would also harm local tourism with its impact on the aesthetic value and recreational use of the area, Crum said.

The DEP received scores of statements and written letters from local residents who said the project could harm Knapps Creek as a fishing stream and the town of Marlinton's water supply.

Residents also raised concerns about blasting, dust, increased truck traffic, property values and the quarry's impact on people's wells in the area.

In the face of an appeal from Waco, the Surface Mine Board upheld the DEP's decision in a unanimous vote following an 11-hour hearing at the Pocahontas County Courthouse.

Board chairman Tom Michael said the ruling was based on the board's concern over the aesthetic values of the area and the quarry's impact on the tourism industry.

"A future application for quarrying in this area could conceivably propose a method of quarrying that does not cause these negative impacts," the board said in its ruling.

For that reason, Zakaib has sent the case back to the Surface Mine Board, instructing it "to more specifically address its concerns regarding aesthetics and tourism and further set forth the manner in which Waco can adequately address and remedy these concerns in its application."

Since the board left open the possibility that the area could somehow be mined, Zakaib said the board needs to tell Waco how it can secure a permit for the site.

DEP spokeswoman Jessica Greathouse would not say whether or not her agency would appeal the ruling.

"Until we have a final order, we will not make a determination on our next course of action," Greathouse said.

Commission gets request from Thornwood Water Association

Pamela Pritt
Editor

The tiny community of Thornwood in Northern Pocahontas County gets its water from a 16-foot wide reservoir on private property.

Thornwood Water Association president Kenny Snead told the county commission Tuesday he is trying to keep the existing system going, at least temporarily, until a permanent system can be put into place.

The problem?

Money. The 21 households in Thornwood, including two lodges, don't contribute to the upkeep of the system.

Snead said he'd like to look into grants or some financial help for the system to rebuild the small dam wall that is deteriorating. Since the property owners don't want heavy equipment on the site, Snead said he could haul the cement there himself.

"This is a temporary fix so the community can have water," he said.

Although he didn't have an estimate for the cost of materials, Snead said he would get those numbers to commissioners by next week.

A plan is in the works to drill a community well to provide water; however, that plan is apparently on hold.

The commission will request funding from the Budget Digest to help the water association with funding.

Commissioners agreed they would prefer the Thornwood Water Association money be funded through RCAP.

The commission will also request money for Pocahontas County Free Libraries, Pocahontas County Senior Citizens, two local volunteer fire departments and Parks and Recreation from the Budget Digest.

In other business, the commission:

•approved budget revisions for home confinement, regional jail, emergency services, 9-1-1 communications.

•discussed purchasing a voice mail system for law enforcement offices and possibly other elected officials.

•will write a letter requesting an extension for Court House Facilities Improvement Authority until December 1.

•set budget work dates as March 2, for its own budget, and March 7-10 to complete budget work.

The commission will meet again in regular session March 7.

How is it in 2006, a foreign corporation, by eminent domain, can possibly take precedence over land owned by the Sharp family for over 100 years; a foreign corporation can literally take drinking water from a 93-year-old widow and her 66-year-old totally disabled nephew on land owned yet by another citizen, Lowell Gibson? This cannot be part of the America we have loved for all our years, the compassionate America that is so revered in the above verse.

W. D. Smith, Executive Director of the Region IV Planning and Development Council, was recently quoted (2/20/06) in an interview with Pam Kasey of WOWK, Huntington, and WBOY, Clarksburg/Fairmont, that "its not unusual to run into a situation where a property owner doesn't want to have an improvement put on their property." The folks leading this mission for Snowshoe have deluded themselves into thinking a sewage treatment plant obliterating a beautiful little field full of dangerous sinkholes (old and new), karst terrain, flooding frequently and a totally separate field laden with dangerous sinkholes and bubbling cold springs which feed a trout spawning stream, both properties located adjacent to a scenic highway, as an improvement? That takes very warped logic.

Not one shovel of earth has yet been turned; the Governor made public land available; additional funds are available, including, but not limited to some $1.2 million in payments to Intrawest/Snowshoe for pond reclamation and for their present facilities, some old and some not even to be used in the new system, The time element for repayment can be lengthened, thereby keeping the agreed upon monthly rate for residents. Snowshoe needs their treatment plant; move it to safe, free of cost public property which the Governor has provided and get on with the show.

Senator Walter Helmick is willing to help relocate this project and thus, nullifying the use of eminent domain - his number is (304) 357-7980. Please call now.

Eagles win Pendleton County Tournament

The Green Bank Eagles varsity team won the Pendleton County Tournament held January 28 and 30.

Green Bank faced off against Davis-Thomas in the first match. The Eagles won the contest by a score of 52-41.

Jerry Simonin and Jimmy Wiley combined for a total of 37 of those 52 points. Abe Rittenhouse played an excellent defensive game against Davis-Thomas's high scoring point guard, Ethan Slaughbaugh.

The Eagles' second game for the championship was against the Pendleton County Wildcats, who had beaten Green Bank twice in regular season play. The Eagles, facing a much larger Wildcat team, used superb defense in the first half, but went to the locker room down 20-17. The second half was again similar with Wiley, Rittenhouse, Josh Arbogast, Simonin, Reid Harper and Jairus Morton all playing excellent defense. Wiley and Simonin combined for 33 points. The Eagles won the game by a score of 46-37 to win the tournament championship game. The Eagles received several compliments on playing well together as a team.

A Message From Seven Rivers Landscaping

Owner, Roger W. Pritt

I have received a lot of calls lately from customers and friends asking if I am going out of business. My response has been "No, I am going to regroup. I will be doing landscaping and will continue to sell landscaping items and will probably be doing something else."

In the past 4 years, through Seven Rivers Landscaping, I have met and become friends with a lot of people. I have a lot of customers who have had me do their landscape work each year. I plan to continue this work as long as they will have me!

I am pleased to announce that I have purchased McNeill's Country Mart in Buckeye. Michael McNeill, a well-respected and honest life-long resident of Buckeye, has owned and operated this family business for many years. I will continue to provide the same products and service as McNeill's Country Mart. In addition, I will have the Seven Rivers Landscaping products.

I am working with my mulch and soil suppliers to get better prices and I will pass these savings on to my customers. I would like to thank all of our customers for their support of Seven Rivers Landscaping these past 4 years, and I hope to continue to serve your needs from our new location... just a few hundred feet down the road from our old location.

The name, McNeill's Country Mart will change to to Buckeye Country Mart, LLC. We will be open 7 days a week, and will accept Visa and Master Card, debit cards, food stamps, cash and checks. We will featuring Chevron gas, off and on road diesel, propane gas, WV lottery tickets, groceries, beer, dog food, produce and much more.

This spring we will have lawn and garden items, seed potatoes, onion sets, seeds, plants flowers, shrubs, trees landscape fabric fertilizer, lime, mulch, soil and much, much more.

I am very excited about buying this business, as I have shopped at McNeill's Country Mart since I was a kid. I had no idea that I would ever own it! Mike McNeill and his family have been very patient and helpful through all the transactions. I also want to thank my family for their support, as well as, a thank you to a long-time friend that I have aggravated a lot lately, Jaynell Awad.

As always, I welcome any suggestions or comments. I plan to advertise regularly in the Pocahontas Times and plan to support WVMR.

My first day of business as Buckeye Country Mart, LLC will be March 1.

Looking forward to serving you.

Governor's office says state land available for sewer project

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The sewer project in Slaty Fork has caught the attention of elected officials in Charleston, who recently met to discuss the controversy surrounding the plant.

Reportedly organized by Senator Walt Helmick, the meeting was attended by representatives from Governor Joe Manchin's office, the Department of Environmental Protection and the attorney for the Pocahontas County Public Service District.

Joe Martin, Manchin's Deputy Chief of Staff and a former Delegate representing Pocahontas County, attended the meeting and said the governor's office was willing to help place the plant on state-owned property if county officials asked.

"The governor is not empowered to interfere directly in the placement of the plant," Martin said, "but if a suitable site is available on state property, then the governor will work to make that site available for the project."

Martin would not say whether or not the governor's office could find funding to offset the cost of moving the plant.

At least one tract of state-owned property has been evaluated by Thrasher Engineering, but by the firm's estimates it would cost between $1 million and $2 million to build the plant on an alternative site.

Martin said the governor's office had received "quite a bit of contact" regarding the site from sporting groups and concerned Pocahontas County residents.

State Senator Walt Helmick, who said Tuesday the meeting was held in his office, said the governor's office was indeed willing to help the situation.

But the senator said he could not say if money to move the sewage treatment plant was available since no one seemed to know the cost.

"We have no idea what the money would be," Helmick said. "Everybody has their own cost."

Three key residents were not asked to the meeting, however. No invitations went to county commissioners.

"None of us were at the meeting," County Commissioner Reta Griffith said. "We weren't even invited."

Griffith said she has had little luck getting in touch with state officials in recent weeks.

The commissioner added that she was aware the governor's office could open up state land, but she said the cost of constructing access roads to an alternative site stood in the way of moving the plant.

"The banks have told us we can't do it because of the extra $1.8 million," Griffith said, "but we keep getting slammed on this."

PSD attorney Tom Michael, who said he was at the meeting, would only add that the PSD's current course of action to put the plant on the Barbara Sharp Smith property along the Big Spring Fork and U.S. Route 219 had not changed.

In fact, a letter from Michael's office dated January 19 was sent to Evva Shelton and Lowell Gibson. Gibson owns the property direct across U.S. 219 from the proposed site of the sewer plant. Shelton has rented and lived on the property for more than 60 years.

In the letter, Michael states that the PSD is considering "acquiring an interest in the property by the power of eminent domain."

The letter explains the PSD is considering placing the discharge pipe for the sewer plant through the property.

'You are going to move it'

Commission fends off more sewage plant complaints

Pamela Pritt
Editor

Amid heated discussion and pointed questions, the county commission fended off more complaints about the Slaty Fork Sewage Treatment Plant and defended its long-standing position of keeping the plant on the Sharp Farm.

Sharp's Country Store and Bed and Breakfast Owner Tom Shipley scolded the commission at several turns for more than an hour.

"I'm telling you, you are going to move the plant because that's what the community wants," Shipley said.

Shipley said he'd received a call from the governor's office about relocating the plant, but the commissioners all said the governor had not spoken with them.

County commissioner Reta Griffith did say that after a call [illegible] contacted Governor Joe Manchin's Chief of Staff, Joe Martin and was told about the offe of public land, but not the cost difference, at total that ranges from $1.5-$3 million.

"You could find it in a heartbeat," Shipley said.

(See related story, this page.)

Shipley said he was particularly upset that his neighbor, Evva Shelton, had received a letter from Public Service District attorney Tom Michael that said the PSD intended to enter the property where she resides "in contemplation of acquiring an interest in the property by the power of eminent domain."

The letter says PSD contractors will enter the property "in the near future" for examining, surveying.., acquiring data and information and "may bring necessary... machinery, equipment and tools...on the property."

"[She] is despondent," Shipley related. "I ask you for an apology to Evva Shelton that you are not going to put that plant there."

Griffith said she had not seen the letter.

Shipley showed the commission pictures taken November 29 during a high water event on Big Spring Fork of Elk.

"The whole thing was under water," he said. Other property once looked at for the plant was not flooded, he continued.

Slaty Fork area resident Lola Crews said that in November water either crossed or neared U. S. Rt. 219 in four places, including near the Sharp Farm.

The store owner did narrow the aim to one property owned by the state as a good location for the plant.

"Land owned by the State Rail Authority is a good place for this plant," he said. "It's out of karst."

Karst topography on the Sharp Farm has been a concern. The porous limestone area known as karst is prone to giving way to caves and sinkholes and can allow pollutants to filter through.

In fact, Shipley had a picture of one such sink hole that appeared near his home last November.

But the commission stood its ground, noting the need for the plant.

"We have to have a better sewage treatment plan in your area," commission president Joel Callison told Shipley. "It's my opinion that the stream will be cleaner and better.

"We're waiting on the decision of the PSD," he continued. "When we get that, we'll go forward or we'll go back."

Zendik Farm owner Arol Wulfing asked the commission to stop progress on the wastewater treatment plant to allow for more discussion.

"It doesn't seem fair to keep going," she said.

Later in the afternoon, Martin said the governor's office would cooperate with the commission and the PSD.

"What we are going to do is work with the county commission and the PSD if they decide a change is feasible," he said.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I have been reading, with some bewilderment, that some Town of Marlinton citizens, as well as some Marlinton Town Council members, have concerns pertaining to the bike sign on Dirtbean Halé's store front in downtown Marlinton.

The last time I was downtown Marlinton, which was this past May, there were many empty downtown store fronts.

Having many empty downtown store fronts can't be as beneficial for the Town of Marlinton, and therefore, its citizens, as having fewer empty downtown store fronts.

From what I can see of the Dirtbean Halé's business sign, on the January 12 online version of The Pocahontas Times, it looks to me like the bike sign is very securely attached to the building that houses Dirtbean Halé.

I also have to believe that the proprietors of Dirtbean Halé's store, and their legal counsel, have determined the benefits of making sure that the bike sign is very well secured to the outside of the building.

Isn't one of the primary purposes of the Marlinton Town Council to reinforce business development/growth in the Town of Marlinton? Would not the Town of Marlinton benefit from not only the additional tax dollars paid to the town by new businesses, but also benefit from the possibility of additional visitors to downtown Marlinton being brought into downtown because of the new businesses?

The Town of Marlinton, and its citizens, must acknowledge that new businesses establishing themselves downtown must be reinforced in order for downtown Marlinton to not be allowed to wither away, unless that is what the citizens of Marlinton and the Marlinton Town Council want to have happen to downtown Marlinton.

How does a sign like Dirtbean Halé's negatively effect Main Street, or the Town of Marlinton? The proprietors of Dirtbean Halé should be applauded for being creative with their business signage, and for the purpose of business signage is to bring customers into your business, and thus into downtown Marlinton.

The development of businesses like Dirtbean Halé is exactly what the "Snowshoe crowd" and the spring/summer/fall "flat landers" who travel to and through Pocahontas County are looking for. These are generally the tourists/customers that have money in Marlinton, instead of just passing through, if there is a reason to come into downtown Marlinton.

The Marlinton Town Council, and the citizens of Marlinton, must allow businesses to be creative with their signage, as long as the signage is safe and doesn't preclude either foot or vehicle traffic through the downtown area.

Citizens of Marlinton and the Marlinton Town Council, don't punish the possible growth of downtown businesses by being "old fogies" when it comes to downtown business signage. It is time for the citizens of Marlinton, and the Marlinton Town Council, to become a bit more progressive by supporting the modification of the current Town of Marlinton business signage ordinance to allow for the possibility of additional creative signs being erected in downtown Marlinton.

As a side note, granted downtown Marlinton is a known flood zone, but that shouldn't curtail businesses from establishing themselves downtown.

The building owners in the known flood areas of downtown Marlinton need to modify their buildings (raise fuel tanks, furnaces, electrical systems, etc.) above known flood levels so that possible future floods will have little negative effect on the buildings and hopefully little negative effect on the store owners. Downtown building owners must spend money on their buildings in order to make money from their buildings.

Dear Editor:

Happy New Year to everyone reading the Times! It is a new beginning for some and others it is the same old stuff just a different day. So I am going to start out on a happy note. The county had a wonderful holiday season. This is due in part to the staff at the Sheriff's Department and the people who donated toys and participated in the Needy Children's program. It has been brought to my attention by many that Santa's little helpers did a great job [illegible] smiles around the county. They have requested that he wear a red suit next year if the program continues.

Now lets get to Dublin. There is a turmoil brewing or you citizens if you don't wake!

What is wrong in this town?

Why would three council members resign plus the town recorder?

Can you see the picture or does someone have to graffiti it in your front yards? Now the claim is that the town will legally have to fight the council members to return to a town meeting. Anyone can quit a job, most of the time it is because they can't get along with someone at the place of employment. The key question is, is it the other council members or is it the mayor? I am not saying which it is because I don't know. There has just got to be something [wrong] to cause such upset and disorder.

Too many chiefs and not enough Indians? How is the town to run? Should Durbin West Virginia fold up and die or can Superman come and save the day? Let's light the Bat Signal so Batman and Robin can come and catch the Joker, Riddler, and the Penguin. Really only the Shadow knows and he is not telling.

All right enough with the silly puns. Can you get that I am trying to make you see that some are taking this as a joke and others do care about what happens to the town? In my opinion, I think everyone feels like if they don't see, hear, or say anything they will be okay. But, gossip and complaints about what is going on sets a big double standard.

Doormats get old, dirty, and worn, then you get thrown away. Your safety and town is like this doormat and all the citizens, including myself, are at fault. At least I have tried to get you to see you have opinions and rights to stand up for yourselves.

Sincerely,
Francine Lambert

ney fees to save our Slaty Fork and Pocahontas County culture from an open sewer plant along Rt. 219. I believe one of our officials' duties is to protect Pocahontas County's and West Virginia's integrity, and historical culture and not allow the culture rape of our beloved county.

Our family has lived at Slaty Fork since before the Civil War. We still operate the country store and have opened a bed and breakfast in our 1912-era family home.

Who would want to eat and sleep in the B&B or shop at the store with the sewer plant odors telling them to move on? All logical and rational commons sense demands and requires the sewer plant to be on the free field or other free government property where it won't cause the county to commit suicide to its great potential tax department—home sites with a great tax base.

I want you to realize that I am totally interested in promoting tourism in Pocahontas County, as attested to in the letter to me from the Pocahontas County Tourism Commission 14 years ago thanking me for being active and dedicated in promoting tourism. I appreciated that.

To further promote tourism in our marvelous county, I recently built a large red covered bridge across Big Spring Creek solely for tourists' appreciation and it worked. They are constantly stopping to take pictures of the only covered bridge on Rt. 219. Another attraction I added three years ago is the barn painter hanging by his finger-tips high on the barn next to the store. Thousands of tourists get a glance, come back to help him, then smile and take pictures. Pictures of him have been in magazines and newspapers across America, including the AAA touring magazine.

I realize the PSD has a big and difficult responsibility serving the county in several ways. I and a really large number of people in the county request you, again, take a new look at the several sites and especially the free government site, and reconsider this extremely significant and important plightful situation.

Location of the site deserves due care by citizens of both parties, in harmony and compatibility to do what is best and correct for each segment of the county. I and all the other citizens in the county who approve, support and endorse the free government site will be appreciative and I, in particular, will thank you and offer a sincere handshake.

With sincerity,

NOTICE OF INTENT TO ENTER PROPERTY

Dear Mrs. Shelton:

I represent the Pocahontas County Public Service District. This letter is formal notice to you that the District intends to enter the property upon which you reside in Slaty Fork, West Virginia, acquiring an interest in the property by the power of eminent domain.

entering upon the property in Slaty Fork, West Virginia, in the near future for the purpose of examining the same, surveying and laying out the lands, ways and easements, and acquiring data and information, and may bring necessary or desirable machinery, equipment and tools upon your property, to make thereon such surveys, inspections, examinations, investigations, tests, soundings and drillings which are deemed necessary or desirable. The entry upon the property will include land surveying, geophysical surveying, and archaeological surveying

The District and its authorized contractors, officers, agents, and employees have the right to enter upon the land for this purpose pursuant to the West Virginia Code, Sections 54-1-3 and 54-1-3a. Copies of these code sections are enclosed for your information.

McNeel Mill makes magazine cover

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Mill Point's most notable landmark, the McNeel Mill, is featured on the cover of the February edition of Wonderful West Virginia magazine.

The photo was taken by West Virginia Department of Tourism photographer David Fattaleh.

The mill was built by Isaac McNeel in 1868.

In 1985 the mill underwent extensive renovation with help from a grant secured by the Pocahontas County Historical Society.

At that time, the mill received a new coat of paint, new windows, a rebuilt waterwheel and extensive work on the buildings foundation and the pilings that support the wheel.

Members of the Historical Society say they may pursue a second round of renovations for the mill in the near future to make repairs to its roof and windows.

In addition to the McNeel Mill, a photo of Neal Kellison's barn in Edray was featured on the back cover and the Locust Creek Covered Bridge was featured inside the magazine.

Forest Service tracts may be for sale

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Tracts of the Monongahela National Forest may be for sale if President George W. Bush's budget is approved by Congress.

The Bush administration has proposed selling 4,836 acres of the national forest, 458 of which are in Pocahontas County.

Nationwide, the administration has proposed selling more than 250,000 acres of national forest land to fund the Secure Rural Schools Act.

The act was designed to compensate for the loss of property taxes due to government land ownership. In Pocahontas County, the federal government owns more than 50 percent of the land.

Since 1908, 25 percent of Forest Service revenues from timber sales, mineral resources, and grazing fees, have been returned to states in which national forest lands are located to help maintain and improve local schools, roads and other activities.

Because receipts from timber sales fluctuated over time, Congress developed the Secure Rural Schools Act in 2000 to stabilize payments to states for five years, from 2001 to 2006.

Last year, Pocahontas County received $485,000 for its school system, equaling about five percent of its annual budget.

The Secure Rural Schools Act is set to expire this year. Under President Bush's proposed budget for 2007, the program would continue for another five years, however, the program would be funded by the sale of national forest land.

"This proposed land sale could have irreversible consequences for West Virginia, leaving us with far fewer acres to hunt, fish and enjoy nature, and less funding for our schools and roads," Rep. Nick J. Rahall said in response to the Forest Service's announcement.

Since 2000, the program has been funded by timber-sale receipts and money from the general treasury, according to Rahall.

Rahall quoted Agriculture Secretary Mark Rey as saying that funding the program through land sales would provide counties with about half the revenue they received for schools and roads over the past five years.

"The administration is playing a shell game with these vital funds, undermining the guarantee of a fair return for these communities," Rahall said. "It is unacceptable to break this promise to rural communities who rely on these funds to provide adequate schools and safe roads for their residents."

On Friday, the USFS posted a list of the properties for the proposed sale on its website. The 458 acres in Pocahontas County include a 240-acre tract on Campbell Hollow, near Sitlington, and a 210-acre tract on Elk Lick Run, across State Route 66 from Snowshoe Drive.

In addition to those parcels, the list includes 1,649 acres in Randolph County, 1,376 in Pendleton County and 1,171 in Tucker County.

Later this month, the USFS has said it will announce a 30-day comment period. Detailed maps of the tracts being considered for sale will be made available as well.

Rahall is cosponsoring bipartisan legislation to reauthorize the Secure Rural Schools Act before it expires.

The complete listing of tracts being considered for sale can be found online at www.fs.fed.us/land/staff/rural_schools.shtml.

BOE votes to test synthetic oil in buses

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

The Board of Education accepted quotes from Amsoil to equip three school buses with synthetic motor oil Monday.

If the product works, board member Tom VanReenen said the buses could see gains in fuel mileage and fewer oil changes.

"It is imperative that we keep super accurate records on this to run an accurate comparison," VanReenen said.

The trial will consist of two pairs of buses with similar routes. In one pair, one bus will use conventional motor oil, while the other will use the synthetic oil. The other two buses will both use synthetic oil, but one will be equipped with a bypass system that may increase the lifespan of the oil and would allow an analysis of the engine oil.

VanReenen likened the oil analysis to a blood test that would show the internal condition of the engine.

Synthetic oil and filters will cost the board around $800 per bus, while the equipping the bus with the oil, filters and bypass system will cost approximately $1,600.

The board also approved a request from the county Health Department to use Marinton Middle, Hillsboro Elementary, Green Bank Elementary-Middle and Pocahontas County High School to distribute medication in the event of a pandemic, such as a flue outbreak.

"The schools are ideal since the are centrally located in the communities and most usually have adequate parking area and enough space... to conduct a clinic," Health Department nurse Linda McCoy wrote in a letter to the board.

Pocahontas County Free Libraries Director Allen Johnson updated the board on the services the libraries are providing to the school system. In addition to providing certified library instructors in its libraries for Hillsboro and Marlinton, the libraries are also providing space and personnel for Saturday Gear-Up activities and staff for the PCHS after-school program.

Accompanying Johnson were two parents—Cara Rose, of Minnehaha Springs and Lauren Bennett, of Marlinton. Both had words of praise for the books and space the libraries offered their children.

Rose noted that in a rural community, a student might only be able to access the library during the course of the school day. Rose said she was grateful for the partnership between the school and the libraries.

Bennett said her own children's experience at the library had been so positive that on Fridays, they were asking her if they could check out books to read over the weekend.

"That was amazing to me," Bennett said.

Johnson also reported that, in addition to the GED classes and testing available at the Marlinton Library, he was partnering with Green Bank principal Ruth Bland to make GED classes available for parents of Green Bank students.

The board turned its attention to heavier matters when relatives of a suspended PCHS student were given an opportunity to speak.

The student was suspended at the start of the semester for bringing a weapon onto school property.

His relatives, however, told board members the gun in the student's vehicle was an honest mistake, and one that some parents had likely committed when attending school events.

The student's grandfather, Ralph Beckwith, said he thought the entire situation had been handled poorly by the board and administrators.

Beckwith said the incident wasn't reported to authorities until several days after it happened. Beckwith questioned whether PCHS principal Tom Sanders had the students' safety in mind after waiting so long to make the call.

Beckwith said he was also disturbed that no calls were made to the family of the student.

Since his suspension, Beckwith said his grandson had received little in the way of make-up lessons from the school.

The student's uncle, Randy Sharp, said his nephew was of good character and not the type to seek out trouble.

"Prevention should have been in play here," Sharp said. In such a small community, Sharp said, somebody could have made a phone call to a parent or relative before the school system took disciplinary action.

Now, the student faces a full year's suspension, a suspended drivers license and a hearing before the state board of education.

Sharp agreed with Beckwith that the student was receiving little in the way of education during his suspension and that the board's treatment was pushing him toward dropping out.

Sharp said he worries that the discipline could push his nephew to the breaking point.

"What kind of person are you trying to make him?" Sharp asked the board.

VanReenen and board member Emery Grimes said they had some unanswered questions about the incident and intended to revisit the issue at the board's next meeting.

Toward the end of its meeting, the board approved the following personnel changes:

•Peggy Carpenter—requested transfer from custodian to cook II at Green Bank Elementary-Middle School, effective February 20, for the remainder of the school year;

•Rebecca O'Brien—retirement as teacher at Green Bank Elementary-Middle School, effective at the end of the school year;

•David Burdick—retirement as teacher at Marlinton Elementary School, effective August 12;

•Edward Hill—retirement as teacher at Marlinton Middle School, effective at the end of the school year;

•Diane Delfino—purchase of 45-minute planning period, at an hourly rate based on degree plus experience, retroactive to October 13 through January 30, for a total of 48 days;

•Wilma Dilley—retirement as custodian at PCHS, retroactive to the end of the day on January 31;

•Stephanie Ann Harrah—employment as substitute custodian, effective February 13, 2006, for the remainder of the school year, as needed;

•Karen Friel—employment as homebound teacher, at $20 per hour, for the remainder of the school year, as needed.

The board also approved a contract with Judith Lucas, Licensed School Psychologist at a rate of $175 per evaluation, not to exceed $5,000. Lucas will also bill $100 per hour for participation in eligibility meetings, IEP development meetings, consultation with parents and teachers, in-service training

Union and wind project reach agreement

Drew Tanner
Staff Writer

Beech Ridge Wind Energy has agreed to use local union workers to build and maintain its proposed $300 million wind-power facility in Greenbrier County, the company announced February 9.

The announcement came after officials with Beech Ridge and the West Virginia Building and Construction Trades Council signed the agreement before a crowd of AFL-CIO members following the labor union's annual legislative conference.

"As this project moves forward, we will begin using local businesses and workers to build and maintain the turbines, as well as maintain the property surrounding them," said said Beech Ridge Project Director Dave Groberg in a media release.

Groberg said the agreement was part of his company's philosophy to use local goods and services during the project's construction and operational stages.

"Because we represent hundreds of members in Greenbrier and surrounding counties, this agreement forms a perfect partnership for us, the company and community," said Mike Matthews, Business Manager of Charleston Building and Construction Trades Council. "West Virginia's union construction workers have the experience and skills to handle this type of work."

Beech Ridge officials have said they expect the project to employ up to 200 construction workers during the six-to-eight-month construction phase.

Once the facility is completed, the wind energy facility will hire 20 full-time employees and will have an annual average payroll of $700,000 per year, according to Beech Ridge officials.

"Beech Ridge Energy represents a major project that will have a significant economic impact on West Virginia's construction workers and their families," said Roy Smith Secretary-Treasurer of the West Virginia State Building and Construction Trades Council. "Wind energy is essential to our national energy policy and is an integral part of West Virginia's economic prosperity."

The 186-megawatt Beech Ridge Wind Energy facility will consist of 124 wind turbines constructed on land leased from Mead Westvaco on mountain ridges northeast Rupert. A 13.8 mile transmission line would connect the facility to Allegheny Power's Grassy Falls substation near Nettie.

The facility is waiting for a siting certificate from the West Virginia Public Service Com-

Dear Editor:

I thank the Times warmly for the space they have given to the Slaty Fork Sewer controversy.

Here is a simple perspective:

Snowshoe needs new or improved sewage treatment facilities to comply with environmental laws and to keep growing.

A few landowners who wish to sell or develop land nearby can make more money if they do not themselves have to build sewer facilities for their projects.

Neither of these situations is a "regional need."

Both these groups have land and money.

Let them, together or separately, build the facilities they need, on and with their own land and money, just as you or I would if we needed a new garage or septic field.

They do not need millions of our public dollars handed to them, nor do they need anybody's land seized for them.

That's the way it looks to me, and I will vote for candidates who see it that way, too.

How about you?

Sharp claims six PCHS girls basketball records

By Bruce McKean

Pocahontas County High School (PCHS) 6'1" senior center Mindy Sharp has now broken six PCHS girls basketball records.

The all-state volleyball and basketball player had her name added to the Lady Warrior Basketball Hall of Fame web page last year for grabbing 19 rebounds in a single game against Meadow Bridge at the Pocahontas Classic on December 29, 2004, breaking Kristen Bennett's record of 16 rebounds in '97-'98. That was later matched by Tausha Cassell, 2002 graduate.

One week later, Sharp broke the blocked shots game record twice in the same week, blocking nine shots at Richwood on January 10, 2005, and then again two days later at PCHS versus Pendleton County on January 12. Lora Calhoun held the previous single game record of eight blocked shots since '96-'97.

Nobody realized that two season records had also fallen in '04-'05, until Sharp's statistics were recently checked for the upcoming senior night.

The 180 season rebounds record held by Katy Gay, who graduated in 94 when PCHS was still competing in Class AA, now belongs to Sharp who grabbed 236 rebounds during 04-05. Gay's '93-'94 girls basketball team went 19-3, losing in the sectional championship at PCHS to eventual state champion Hinton, which was consolidated into Summers County High School, and the 19-3 season record still stands.

That '93-'94 team also beat Tucker County twice during the regular season, and Tucker ended up losing to Hinton in the Class AA state championship. The other two losses were one loss out of two games with Class AAA Greenbrier East and a two-point loss at Virginia power, Allegheny County, the first game of the season.

Other records that the '93-'94 team still hold are 10 wins in a row and 13 home wins in a row. The 101 season blocked shots record of Lora Calhoun in '96-'97 now also transfers to Sharp with 86 blocked shots in '04-'05.

The 101 career blocked shots [illegible] til the end of this season.

She missed one game this year against Greenbrier West on December 19, due to the death of her grandfather, and two postponed games with Wyoming East and Harman will now not be played.

Jennifer Young, another member of the Class of '94 who was the first and only female at PCHS to hit 1000 career points and played four years of outstanding college basketball at Bridgewater College in Virginia, is listed as the career rebounds record holder with 388 rebounds.

Christina Holstine, 2001 PCHS graduate and older sister of current Lady Warrior Michelle Holstine, broke Young's career rebounds record with 419 rebounds.

Sharp broke Holstine's record this season on January 24 at PCHS against Pendleton County and now has 459 career rebounds as of the February 2 Coal Classic game against Woodrow Wilson, but this career record will also keep increasing until the end of the current season.

Sharp, the only senior on the current squad, accumulated no varsity stats her freshman '02-'03 season since she played on the freshman and junior varsity teams. In fact, this talented senior saw very little varsity action her sophomore '03-'04 season because a talented group of seniors, dubbed the Super Six by the Inter-Mountain newspaper, who made it to states the only three years in PCHS history, were playing their final year. Sharp had five blocks and 47 rebounds in varsity games her sophomore season.

Sharp quickly started filling the record books when she earned a starting position her junior 04-05 season.

She has been voted one of the AP Players of the Week twice this season by the AP sportswriters, most recently after a great performance in three games at the Coal Classic in Beckley. Dan Stillwell, Beckley Register-Herald sportswriter, mentioned Sharp in four different articles during the Coal Classic.

The Lady Warriors accepted an invitation this year for the first time [illegible] try and many of the best West Virginia girls teams.

Unlike the A, AA, AAA and national mens divisions, the girls all compete in one division.

Sharp was high scorer in all three PCHS games against #5 Class AAA Parkersburg South, Class AAA Beckley Woodrow Wilson and rival Class A Greenbrier West.

Pocahontas pulled within three points of South with about one minute to go in the first half before South bombed PCHS with nine treys, then easily beat West for the third time this season, and finally lost by only four points to Woodrow. The Lady Warriors matched South's 42 rebounds, and Sharp averaged 22 points and 15 rebounds in the three games, even when double-teamed by South.

Successful South coach Scott Stephens was quoted in the Beckley newspaper when asked about Sharp's performance against his team: "She's a quality post player. She did a good job of holding the post up if you're trying to front her and get in a lob pass. I believe she can play at the next level."

As of February 2, Sharp was second in average scoring in the Potomac Valley Conference with 14.62 points per game, ninth in free throw percentage (minimum of 20 attempts) at 60% and third in rebounding with 10.15 rebounds per game.

As of January 20, Sharp was tied for fourth with teammate Christin Shinaberry in the Area Scoring Leaders tally compiled by the Inter-Mountain newspaper for their eight-county coverage area, including AA and AAA schools. Kayla Smith, Class AAA Elkins senior and future Ohio University player, was in first place.

With at least three more games to play, including the PVC Championship game with East Hardy, and depending upon the weather and the outcome of tournament play, Sharp just might [illegible] or break some of [illegible] focused on winning individual records, but upon getting the Lady Warriors back to Charleston with good team play and

Commission holds firm on chosen sewage treatment plant site in Slaty Fork

Pamela Pritt
Editor

A visibly weary county commission held firm to its position that the Slaty Fork Sewage Treatment Plant is in the right location at its meeting Tuesday.

Tom Shipley, who first appeared before the commission last March to plead his case that the plant should be moved from a nine-acre tract belonging to one of his relatives, came to the commission meeting again to reiterate that plea.

Shipley exchanged a verbal volley with the commission during the nearly hour-long session.

He noted the commission had been offered state property just one quarter of a mile from the proposed site on the Sharp Farm. That site, he said, is in sandstone, not karst.

Karst means "special landforms and drainage characteristics due to greater solubility of certain rocks in natural waters than is common."

"The DEP actually says you could put a 2.5 million gallon wasteload allocation right next to your karst-free land the governor is offering," he continued. "Why in the world wouldn't you put it there?

"Snowshoe could build forever; there would be all kinds of development. You wouldn't ruin the Upper Elk fishery; you wouldn't ruin Evva Shelton; you wouldn't ruin the Sharp Farm."

Commissioner Reta Griffith responded that the property is more in the floodplain than the Sharp Farm field.

Shipley, however, maintained that the property is "completely out of the floodplain."

The current owner of Sharp's Country Store and Bed and Breakfast showed the commission pictures of the Sharp Farm field during a flood event in November 2005.

He further contended that some of the pipes from the plant would have been "under about three feet of water."

While commissioners acknowledged Governor Joe Manchin's office had said he would work with them in land acquisition for an alternate, the additional cost of moving the plant would still be the commission's burden, they said.

"Not on the money," commissioner James Carpenter said of the governor's offer.

Shipley said the cost of reclaiming Snowshoe Mountain Resort's sewage pond—nearly half-a-million dollars—could be used for the project.

"It's one of the costs that's required to put this package together," said commission president Joel Callison.

"Who required it?" Shipley asked.

"The package is put together and will work if we move forward with it," Callison responded.

"If we acquire [Snowshoe Water and Sewage] assets, then we also acquire their liabilities," Griffith said.

Shipley said the plan burdened future rate payers.

He was also vexed, he said, because Silver Creek was a late addition to the first phase of the plan, increasing the cost for the initial rate payers.

"Why would you want a system for the top of the mountain if it didn't include everybody?" Griffith asked.

Carpenter asked Shipley what he would do.

"If we abandon this and put it on top of the mountain, where would you put it?" he asked Shipley.

But the storeowner had no answer and inquired where the DEP would put the plant.

"Oh, you would be happy to go along with what the DEP says we can discharge on the mountain, but you're not willing to go with what the DEP says we can discharge on your place? Somehow, that doesn't make sense to me," Carpenter fired.

"This whole project doesn't make any sense," Shipley shot back.

Both Carpenter and Callison said it made sense to them.

"It makes a lot of sense," Callison said.

By far his most emotional appeal was for the preservation of the Sharp Farm.

"You say you don't want to burden future rate payers, but you're more than willing to burden the Sharp family with millions of dollars and the loss of the use of our land," he said.

Carpenter reminded Shipley he had said he didn't want to develop the farm.

"I may not; maybe my relatives do, maybe my descendants," Shipley said. "You, in fact, have complained about farmland protection because you said you didn't want people telling your descendants what to do with your land."

Callison ended the discussion at the lunch break.

Commissioners also:

•heard from Mountain Hospice about its program and its service in Pocahontas County.

•heard a request from the Family Refuge Center for funding that includes municipal utilities. The commission paid the FRC's rent during its last fiscal year.

•approved emergency absentee voting procedures policy for the Primary Election •approved an in-house budget revision for 9-1-1 communications, $2000; agricultural agent, $500.

•appointed David Cain to Mountain Resource Conservation & Development Board of Directors for three years

•agreed to pay ballot commissioners $100 a day

•agreed to put the purchase of Letrievers storage system for the county clerk's office out on bid beginning May 1.

The commission meets again in regular session March 21.

GREEN BANK SENIORS Choir enjoy their practice. P. Pritt photo

Green Bank seniors sing, sing, sing

Pamela Pritt
Editor

Leaden skies and drizzle were no match for the Green Bank Senior Choir Thursday.

The group, which meets nearly every week, sings old-time songs and recently written hymns, all favorites.

Laura Jean Rittenhouse leads the group and plays the piano.

On those songs the group has practiced and practically knows by heart, she freewheels all over the keyboard, playing by ear and making the instrument fairly dance with the music.

For new pieces, she plays more quietly, listening to the singers while they explore their new air.

Sometimes group leaders have a hard time getting people to perform on the spot.

Not Rittenhouse.

She says her son has told people she could sell a used Kleenex. And while she thinks that statement is a little icky. It's truth is reflected in her choir.

"Come on up here, Homer," she called.

And Homer Hunter arose from the back row to sing solos on the verses to the old hymn, "Beulah Land."

Next, Rittenhouse called for Caroline Cassell, whose lovely soprano became mournful on the ballad "Shenandoah," really livened up the place in the cowboy genre with "I Want to Be a Cowgirl Sweetheart."

Her yodeling was dead-on. Her enthusiasm for the music was inspiring.

The choir recently traveled to Charleston to perform for the legislature during Senior Citizens Day.

When the choir began its practice a misting rain was falling, but before they finished the sky had opened up and the sun shined for the rest of the day.

It just goes to show you.

Good weather demands good music.

Here's What I Think

by Pamela Pritt
Editor

It's always a little spooky when it seems like someone else has gotten inside your head. Especially if you've met that person only once nearly three years ago.

Susanna Rodell wrote a column in The Charleston Gazette last Friday about the great divides in this country; how the fervor of opinion has been reduced to "you're either for me or against me," and if you're against me then you must be 1) wrong 2) going to hell 3) a bad mother or "—even worse—that dreaded demon breathing sulfurous clouds of evil: a Liberal!"

"Rarely am I simply a human being like them, trying to make sense of the world and coming to a conclusion with which they disagree," she wrote.

I have a curse, of sorts, one that makes me see, or at least try to see, both sides of issues. I do that because I think it helps me to understand where someone on the opposite side of the fence comes from. I do that because I think it helps me to understand the whole issue better. I do that because I think it's part of my job.

So the feedback I've been getting lately from both sides of the Sharp Farm/Slaty Fork Sewage Treatment Plant is that 1) we can do something to help them, 2) we aren't covering the issue fairly (keep in mind this is from both sides) and 3) if we can't help out one side or the other then we're against them and must be a part of the other side's vast conspiracy.

Keep in mind, too, that right now, I am what Rodell calls a "human being, like them, trying to make sense of the world."

A year ago, Tom Shipley first came to the county commission to plead his case about moving the proposed treatment plant. He was defensive, so was the commission. Shipley began a strategic public relations campaign designed to win friends and influence people. Everyone, it seems, except the county commission.

Commissioners have responded as a matter of course that they rely on their engineers to tell them where the plant should go.

In spite of all the information I've read about the plant, I still don't know enough about geology, hydrology or trout to say the Sharp Farm is or isn't the place the plant should go.

But I can see where Shipley comes from. It's his family land. It's his heritage. And it's his livelihood.

He and I share that family land and heritage concern. A little

But I can see where Shipley comes from. It's his family land. It's his heritage. And it's his livelihood.

He and I share that family land and heritage concern. A little piece of ground near Minnehaha Springs is not just all I have; it's all I want. I don't want land anywhere else because that farm is my haven and my heaven. Six generations of my family have looked out over that land; four generations are buried there. Someday, I'll make five. Had I Shipley's onus to fight the fight to save the land, I would.

So now I have to take a look at the commission's side. And in spite of the fact I don't agree with them, I do understand their position.

Snowshoe Mountain Resort, a pretty large employer, needed to have a new sewage treatment plant. The company was willing to build its own, but valley developers were not so willing to have that occur. Snowshoe agreed to a regional facility. At a public hearing nearly three years ago, no one showed up to protest the regional facility. No one. Not valley families. Not future candidates. It's no wonder the commission thinks that if the potential the detriment to the valley was to be so great, then perhaps someone would have figured that out before Tom Shipley came here.

The public service district board proceeded. Engineers placed and won bids. Sites were looked at, evaluated and one was ultimately chosen. Those engineers have been paid to do a job—paid with public funds.

Furthermore, Tom Shipley doesn't own the land he so fervently protects and commissioners say his relative who does was once a willing seller. They say they never mentioned eminent domain.

So the commission finds itself in quite the quandary.

Spend more public money it doesn't really have to relocate a site not recommended?

Stay the course, in spite of what seems to be rampant public opinion against the recommended site?

It is with much, much less ease I am able to say what I would do if I were in their seats.

But I hope that I could draw on my love of family land and my responsibility as a commissioner, use the ability to see both sides and find no dishonor in changing my mind.

A slightly off-topic aside here: Snowshoe has been maligned as a foreign corporation here to take away our local heritage. It's true, Snowshoe is owned by a Canadian company. It's also true that the resort is no gentle giant.

But here's what it also is: a fact of our lives that brings in hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax revenue and in addition, hotel/motel tax revenue. It also employs a pretty fair number of us in both all year and seasonal jobs.

This issue has taken up the county's time and our news pages. It is a topic we should be informed about, discuss and debate. We should take sides. We should support what we believe to be right. We should be passionate.

But the level of debate in this county has been reduced to the "winner" of the discussion being the one who can yell the loudest, be the most believably threatening and who can be the angriest, not to mention who can say the nastiest thing about his or her neighbor, making light of their opinions or, worse, believing them to be a crook.

This is not a drill. This is a real test.

Have we fallen so far from society's norms that we think it's all right to hate someone because their opinion differs from our own? Or is that the norm for our society in this century?

Have we become so isolated from our neighbors that we think it's all right to use name-calling and physical force to strengthen our argument?

Are we so unable to see things for ourselves that we will believe any rumor, any slander, any bad thing about people because it's it's all right to use name-calling and physical force to strengthen our argument?

Are we so unable to see things for ourselves that we will believe any rumor, any slander, any bad thing about people because it's easier to do that than to see the good in them?

Is it so ridiculous to think the other side might have a point that has just as much validity as our own?

Would it be so awful if we had to work with those on the other side to find a solution instead of just vilifying them?

Our lives are interconnected in a way we should appreciate, not disregard.

I have no really good answers for most of the controversy, but I can see the roots of it go deep into our soil and our souls. I wish I could make everyone see the side of their opponents or at least see them as just other human beings who are here trying hard to make a living and make a difference.

I have no idea how anyone in public office can continue to work to do their jobs with the level of animosity aimed toward them.

Who wants to place themselves in front of the verbal cannons for the fault of being elected to office? Who will lead?

The answer may be, "Anybody but..." And that's fine. But are you willing to take their places?

"You may even come to think of them as evil," Rodell wrote about people on the Other side of issues. "And then one day, there they are in front of you: flesh and blood, with a nice smile, just as humanly fragile as the next person.

"Naive? I don't really think so. Evil people do exist. But they are rare, and they are only a danger when enough people give them power. Often the way they get that power is by demonizing the Other, persuading their followers to look on entire groups of their fellow-humans as personifying evil," she contended.

Boy, she really got into my head. Maybe she's been here lately.

Public warned about identity theft e-mail scam

by Joyce Armentrout, Manager Covington, VA, Social Security Office

Jo Anne Barnhart, Commissioner of Social Security, and Patrick O'Carroll, Jr., Inspector General of Social Security, issued a warning this week about a new email scam that has surfaced recently.

The Agency has received several reports of an email message being circulated addressed to "Dear Social Security Number and Card Owner" and purporting to be from the Social Security Administration. The message informs the reader "that someone illegally is using your Social Security number and assuming your identity" and directs the reader to a website designed to look like Social Security's Internet website.

The Commissioner is outraged that someone would target an unsuspecting public in this manner and has asked the Inspector General to use all the resources at his command to find and prosecute whoever is perpetrating the fraud.

Once directed to the phone website, the individual is asked to confirm their identity with Social Security and bank information. Specific information about the individual's credit card number, expiration date and PIN number is then requested. Whether on our online website or by phone, Social Security will never ask you for credit card information or PIN number.

Inspector General O'Carroll recommends people always take precautions when giving out personal information over the Internet or by telephone unless you are extremely confident of the source to which you are providing the information. If you receive an email message you should report it to Social Security's Office of Inspector General by calling 1-800-269-0271. A public fraud reporting form is also available online at OIG's website www.socialsecurity.gov/oig.
